The march was unopposed until we neared Dwatoi, where the advance guard was fired on from the heights to the north of the Rajgal stream; but the road had been cut away in several places by the tribesmen, and the water in the defile had risen nine inches, so that considerable delay occurred in the passage of the transport animals and field hospitals.

On December 8th, the 3rd Brigade followed the 4th Brigade to Dwatoi, but rain fell during the day and again damaged the road which had been repaired; and the stream continuing to rise, the rear guard did not reach camp until the morning of the 9th. On this day, I moved five miles up the Rajgal Valley with a mixed force of 1,000 rifles and No. 8 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, under Brigadier-General Westmacott's command, and destroyed a large number of village defences, besides collecting forage for the division. But slight opposition was encountered both going and returning, and there were only three casualties. The survey of the valley was completed, so far as the heavy mist and the time at my disposal would allow. On the 10th, the march was resumed, the 4th Brigade leading and encamping at Sandana, the 3rd Brigade following and encamping three miles in rear. The opposition met with during this day's march was slight, the Kamar and Sipah Khels, through whose country we were passing, being apparently disinclined to molest the movement of the force, in the hope that their village defences would be spared.

The march on December 11th was through Zakka Khel territory, and I anticipated that the enemy would oppose us every inch of the way. Accordingly, on the evening of the 9th, I ordered the two brigades to be closed up the next morning, the 4th Brigade forming a strong advance guard and the 3rd Brigade a strong rear guard, under whose protection the field hospitals, transport animals, and followers could move along in safety and under proper control. Rain fell during the night of the 10th and throughout the 11th. On the latter date the 4th Brigade marched to Sher Khel, a distance of ten miles, followed by the 3rd Brigade, which, though it started an hour and-a-half earlier, was unable to close up with the 4th Brigade as early as I had intended, owing to difficulty being experienced in leaving the camping ground. During the day the troops were harassed by a few sharpshooters armed with Lee-Metford rifles, but our casualties up to dusk were trifling. As evening came on, the number of the tribesmen rapidly increased, and the rear guard became heavily engaged. Eventually, being encumbered with a considerable number of killed and wounded, running short of ammunition, and finding that the enemy were endeavouring to intercept the baggage animals which had lagged behind, a portion of the rear guard under the command of Major G. T. F. Downman, 1st Battalion, Gordon Highlanders, occupied for the night some villages about two-and-a-half miles west of Sher Khel, the remainder of the 3rd Brigade camping with the 4th Brigade.

The following morning I sent two battalions and a mountain battery under Brigadier-General Kempster to extricate the rear guard, which had been attacked during the night and at daybreak. This was accomplished without further loss by 11 A.M., and I halted on December 12th at Sher Khel in order to give the troops a day's rest, and an opportunity of drying their clothes after the continuous rain of the previous thirty-six hours.

On December 13th the march was resumed. The 3rd Brigade, which hitherto had formed the rear guard, was in front, and leaving the Bara River at Gali Khel moved over the hills to the north, and encamped in the vicinity of Shinkamar, the 4th Brigade following and halting for the night two-and-a-half miles in rear. During this day's march the 4th Brigade was continuously attacked and at times severely pressed by the enemy, who towards the evening advanced boldly to close quarters in the open. Although our own loss was considerable, Brigadier-General Westmacott's able handling of his troops enabled him to inflict much heavier loss on the enemy, who, however, continued to fire into camp and attack the picquets at intervals throughout the night. On this date Brigadier-General Hammond, commanding the Peshawar Column, reconnoitred from Swaikot towards Shinkamar, and meeting the advanced guard of the 3rd Brigade handed over 8 doolies with 300 kahars, which he had brought with him at my request to assist in carrying the sick and wounded of the 2nd Division into the next camp.

On December 14th the 2nd Division marched to Mamanai, three-quarters of a mile from the camp of the Peshawar column at Swaikot. The 4th Brigade again covered the rear of the division, and Brigadier-General Westmacott again succeeded in severely punishing the tribesmen who followed him up as on the previous day.

During the march of the 2nd Division down the Bara Valley, the defences of a large number of villages belonging to the Kuki, Kamar, Zakka, and Sipah sections of the Afridis were destroyed. More exemplary punishment could, no doubt, have been inflicted on the Afridis in the Bara Valley, had time permitted; but the weather was threatening, and as my supplies were limited and the river becomes unfordable while in flood, I thought it better not to delay my march for the purpose of dealing with some of the more distant villages.

The losses sustained by the 2nd Division from its departure from Bagh on December 7th to its arrival at Mamanai on December 14th were as follows:—

Killed	1 British Officer.
	15 British Soldiers.
	17 Native Soldiers.
Wounded	5 British Officers.
	1 Native Officer.
	46 British Soldiers.
	81 Native Soldiers.
TOTAL .	166

The 2nd Division halted on December 15th and 16th, and on the 17th the 3rd Brigade left for Bara Fort, the 4th Brigade with the divisional troops and head-quarters remaining at Mamanai.

6. At Mamanai I received the report of the march of the 1st Division from Mastura, which had been carried out in two columns under the command of Major-General Symons.

The leading column, consisting of the 1st Brigade with divisional head-quarters and divisional troops, except No. 2 Derajat Mountain Battery which was attached to the 2nd Brigade, left camp at Mastura on December 8th and proceeded to Haidar Khel, some ten miles distant. On the same date the 2nd Brigade reached Mastura from Bagh, accompanied by a wing of the 2nd Battalion, 1st Gurkhas, which was holding the Arhanga Pass.

On December 9th the 1st Brigade marched in two columns, one under the command of Brigadier General Hart crossing the range which separates the Mastura and Waran valleys, by the Khekanni Pass, and moving thence to Hissar at the junction of the two valleys, the other following the course of the Mastura valley to the same point. The object in entering the Waran valley was to destroy the defences of the Aka Khel villages. This was successfully accomplished, Brigadier-General Hart's skilful dispositions preventing the enemy from harassing his troops during their retirement to camp. The same day the 2nd Brigade reached Haidar Khel.

On December 10th, the leading brigade moved to Barand Khel, a distance of eight miles, and the rear brigade made a march of the same length to Tarkasam. Rain fell during the night and throughout the 11th, when the force halted.

On December 11th, reconnaissances of the Uchpal and Sapri Passes were made, and the road towards the crest of the latter was improved by the Sappers and Miners attached to the division and the 21st Madras Pioneers.

On December 12th and 13th, the whole division crossed the Sapri Pass, the crest of which is 5,350 feet above sea level, and passing through Mamanai on the 14th and 15th concentrated near Bara Fort on the 17th. The casualties in the 1st Division between December 7th and 17th amounted to four British and two Native soldiers wounded.

7. During the march from Bagh through Dwatoi down the Bara valley the troops of the 2nd Division were almost unceasingly engaged with the several sections of the Afridis, through whose country they passed, and towards the end of the march they were followed up by a large gathering representing every section. The flanking, picquet, and rear guard duties in the presence of such an active and enterprising enemy were exceedingly onerous, while the line of march was along the bed of a river, the water of which was of icy coldness and had to be repeatedly forded. The followers and kahars suffered most from the cold, and to assist the latter wounded men had to be frequently carried by their own comrades.

The 1st Division while moving from Mastura to Bara Fort met with slight opposition, but the march was an arduous one and in all respects was carried out in accordance with my wishes.

8. On December 15th and 16th, the Peshawar Column under Brigadier-General Hammond, left Swaikot for Jamrud, which was reached on the 17th. There it was joined on the 19th by the troops of the 1st Division, together with the Gurkha Scouts and the head-quarter wing of the 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

The Peshawar Column and the 1st Division, Main Column, were halted at Jamrud from December 19th to 22nd, the troops which had returned from Tirah needing rest after their fatiguing march. At this time three British corps in the Main Column, which had been much weakened by losses in action or by sickness, were relieved by battalions from India, the 1st Battalion, Devonshire Regiment, being replaced by the 2nd Battalion, Royal Sussex Regiment, from Peshawar, the 1st Battalion, Dorsetshire Regiment, by the 1st Battalion, Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, from Rawal Pindi, and the 1st Battalion, Northamptonshire Regiment, by the 2nd Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, also from Rawal Pindi. Shortly afterwards the same reason obliged me to dispense with the services of the head-quarter wing of the 1st Battalion, Royal Scots Fusiliers.

9. The plan of the operations now about to be undertaken comprised measures for re-opening the road through the Khyber Pass, for reconstructing the Khyber posts which had been destroyed by the Afridis in August last, including the defensible serai at Landi Kotal, for restoring the Landi Kotal water supply, and for destroying the defences of the Zakka Khel villages in the Khyber.

The Bazar valley had also to be visited in force, and the defences and towers of the principal Zakka Khel and Malikdin Khel villages destroyed.

On December 23rd, the Peshawar Column advanced unopposed to Ali Masjid and re-occupied the posts at that place and at Fort Maude, two guns of No. 3 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, and the 45th Sikhs being detailed as the garrison for Ali Masjid, and Fort Maude being held by a detachment of the Khyber Rifles.

On December 24th, the 1st Division, covered by the Peshawar Column, marched to Lala China, three-quarters of a mile below Ali Masjid. During the day I joined the 1st Division from Jamrud, escorted by two squadrons of the 4th Dragoon Guards, and accompanied by Lieutenant-General Sir Henry Havelock-Allan, V.C., G.C.B., M.P., who remained my guest while I was in the Bazar valley. A few shots were fired at night into camp, one British soldier being wounded.

On December 25th, the 1st Division advanced into the Bazar valley, its right being covered by the Peshawar Column which held the Aspoghar heights. I marched with the left column, consisting of the 2nd Brigade, No. 1 Mountain Battery, Royal Artillery, No. 2 Derajat Mountain Battery, No. 3 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners, and the Gurkha Scouts, under the command of Brigadier-General Gaselee, and reached Chora unopposed. The road was comparatively easy, and but little labour was needed to render it passable by laden transport animals. The right column, which consisted of the 1st Brigade, No. 1 Kohat Mountain Battery, No 1 Company, Bengal Sappers and Miners, and the 21st Madras Pioneers, under Brigadier-General Hart's command, was accompanied by Major-General Symons and the staff of the 1st Division. The road being bad, only a portion of the column reached Karamna, the remainder halting for the night at Alachi. Very slight opposition was met with. During the afternoon Major-General Symons reconnoitred the Bori Kandao from Karamna, and found the road extremely difficult.

On December 26th, the left column marched eleven miles from Chora to China, the principal Zakka Khel village in the Bazar valley, where it encamped. The tribesmen, though not in any considerable strength, molested our advance, the casualties for the day being one British and one Native soldier killed, and two British and two Native soldiers wounded.

On the same date the right column occupied Burg. The road between Karamna and Burg was found to be so bad that the 1st Brigade could not reach Bararkas, as had been at first intended. During the march to Burg opposition was met with, our casualties being one British soldier killed, and three British and two native soldiers wounded.

On the 26th, the Peshawar Column proceeded to Landi Kotal, the General Officer Commanding having orders on arrival there to reconnoitre the road between Lala Beg and the Bori Kandao, and to report to me whether it was practicable. Brigadier-General Hammond carried out his instructions and found the road unfit for laden transport animals, but owing to the cloudy weather it was impossible to establish heliographic communication with him, and the messengers he sent to my camp failed to reach me, so that his report on the subject was not received until some days after the withdrawal of the force from the Bazar valley. In view, however, of Major-General Symons' account of the road between Karamna and the Bori Kandao, and of the fact that scarcely any water was obtainable at the former place, I decided to abandon my original intention of joining the 1st Brigade, and returning with it viâ the Bori Kandao and Lala Beg to Ali Masjid.

I may here mention that, though the valley near China is wide and open, stretching up to the Mangal Bagh Pass, China itself is the only large village in the vicinity, the other habitations being cave dwellings which were found to be deserted.

On December 27th, after destroying the defences and towers of China, I returned with the left column to Chora. The rear guard was followed up by the enemy who were repulsed with heavy loss to themselves, the notorious Mullah Idris being among the killed. Our casualties were one British soldier killed, and four British and two Native soldiers wounded. During this day's march I met Major-General Symons near the Palosi caves, and directed him to move the next day with the 1st Brigade to Karamna, and the day after to Lala China, destroying en route the defences of such villages as had not been dealt with during his advance.

Rain fell during the night of the 27th. On the 28th, after destroying the defences of Chora, I marched with the left column to Lala China, no opposition being met with, and returned thence to Jamrud under an escort of two squadrons, 4th Dragoon Guards. On the 29th and 30th the 1st Division concentrated at Jamrud. The right column was followed up by the enemy during its march from Burg to Lala China and suffered some loss, while inflicting much heavier loss on the enemy. The total casualties in the 1st Division during the operations in the Bazar valley were 1 British officer, 6

British soldiers, and 4 Native soldiers killed; and 1 British officer, 30 British soldiers, and 17 Native soldiers wounded.

10. Lieutenant-General Sir Henry Havelock-Allan left me at Lala China, and with my permission proceeded to Landi Kotal, arrangements being made to provide him with a sufficient escort. I deeply regret to report that on December 30th, as he was returning to Jamrud, he unfortunately left his escort near Ali Masjid, and riding down a ravine was shot dead by the enemy. Every precaution had been taken to ensure his safety, and on bidding him good-bye at Lala China I had impressed on him the necessity of invariably remaining with the troops detailed for his protection.

11. From December 30th up to the present date there is but little to record. The Peshawar Column met at first with considerable opposition in the Khyber, convoys and foraging parties being repeatedly fired on and followed up by the tribesmen, and the telegraph line interrupted daily between Ali Masjid and Landi Kotal. In view of the hostile attitude of the Zakka Khels in the Khyber, and the casualties resulting therefrom, I decided on January 3rd to strengthen the force occupying the pass by ordering the 1st Brigade from Jamrud to Ali Masjid, and by reinforcing the Landi Kotal garrison with the 45th Sikhs and 2nd Battalion, 4th Gurkhas. On these movements being carried out the tribesmen dispersed, but they have since resumed their guerilla warfare, though in smaller numbers than before.

12. During the operations described in the foregoing paragraphs, I have received every possible support and assistance from the General Officer Commanding the Line of Communication, his staff, and the troops under his command. The requirements of the Main Column have been promptly and fully met, while the arrangements made to protect the long and exposed line between Kohat and the Sampagha Pass, and afterwards to transfer the base from Kohat to Peshawar, have been all that I could have desired.

13. In bringing this narrative to a close I wish to record my high appreciation of the conduct of the British and Native troops serving with the Tirah Expeditionary Force. Up to the present date, their losses have amounted to 1,050 killed and wounded. They have been subjected to great hardship and exposure, harassed at night by assaults at close quarters or by distant rifle fire, and engaged in long and trying rear-guard actions. Their duties on picquet and in guarding foraging parties have been specially onerous. Hardly a day or night has passed without casualties, and, whether we advanced or retired, every soldier had to be constantly on the alert against enemies who made no stand in the open, but were unrivalled as skirmishers and marksmen. The operations were carried out in a country which offered every natural advantage to the tribesmen, and imposed on the regimental officers and the rank and file the necessity for individual initiative, unremitting watchfulness, and personal activity. I am glad to say that the troops responded nobly to the call made upon them. Cheerful and soldierlike under exceptionally trying conditions, officers and men upheld to the utmost the traditions of their corps and the honour of Her Majesty's Army.

The advance into Tirah was delayed, and the subsequent movements of the force were impeded, by the inferiority of a large proportion of the transport animals, and the want of proper discipline and training amongst many of the transport drivers and kahars. But it must be remembered that a peace organization which has to be rapidly expanded when war breaks out takes time to render it efficient, and that field requirements elsewhere had already absorbed much of the better class of pack transport, which would otherwise have been available.

The results attained by the expedition may be summarized as follows. The troops under my command have marched everywhere within Orakzai and Afridi limits, and the whole of Tirah has now, for the first time, been accurately surveyed. Our enemies, wherever encountered, have been punished, and their losses are stated on unimpeachable evidence to have been extremely severe. The towers and walls of almost every fortified village in the country have been levelled to the ground, and the winter supply of grain, fodder, and fuel of both tribes has been consumed by the force. The Orakzais have been completely subdued, and have complied with the terms prescribed for them, but the Afridis still hold out, although I have strong hopes that they may before long submit, and thus save their country from a fresh invasion in the spring.

14. During the present expedition the scouts drawn from the 3rd and 5th Gurkhas have proved especially valuable. Being trained mountaineers and accustomed to guerilla warfare, they were able to climb the most precipitous hills, lie in ambush at night, and surpass the tribesmen in their own tactics.

15. The Imperial Service Corps attached to the Force have taken their full share in the hardships of the campaign, and fighting side by side with their comrades in the regular army, have given a tangible proof of their readiness, and that of their Rulers, to assist in the defence of the Empire.

16. During the Tirah Expedition the Mountain Artillery had an important part to play, and fully sustained its reputation as one of the most efficient branches of that arm of the service.

17. Much work of a responsible and arduous nature, principally road-making and the destruction of village defences, devolved on the Corps of Royal Engineers, the Companies of Sappers and Miners, and the Pioneer Regiments. This work was carried out in a creditable manner.

18. The several departments of the army, and of the civil departments attached to the army in the field, were well administered under their respective heads. The promptness with which military requirements were met, and difficulties overcome, conduced most materially to the success of the operations and the well-being of the troops.

19. The officers of the Army Medical Staff and of the Indian Medical Service have fully maintained their high reputation by their attention to the sick and wounded both under fire and in hospital. The hospital arrangements were generally excellent, but I consider that the field equipment is too heavy and elaborate for mountain warfare, and that it might be materially reduced without hardship to the patients. The conspicuous colour of the canvas with which the doolies are covered is very objectionable, as it attracts the enemy's fire.

20. My special thanks are due to the officers and men employed on signalling duties. These were performed, often under circumstances of considerable difficulty and risk, to my entire satisfaction. The same remarks are applicable to the officers and subordinates of the Survey Department, the area for the first time explored and mapped amounting to 1,084 square miles.

21. I take this opportunity of bringing to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief in India the assistance rendered to the Tirah Expeditionary Force by Mr. C. Dhanjibhoy, Khan Bahadur, who placed his resources at the disposal of the military authorities for the purpose of establishing an efficient mail and tonga service, and facilitating the transport of the sick and wounded to the base hospitals. These services have been performed at a pecuniary loss, and I consider that the public spirit evinced by Mr. Dhanjibhoy is deserving of special recognition.

22. I have the honour to record my obligations to the following general officers in command of the several units of the Expeditionary Force :—

Lieutenant-General Sir A. P. Palmer, K.C.B., has commanded the Line of Communication to my complete satisfaction, and has displayed administrative talents of a high order.

Brigadier-General (local Major-General) W. P. Symons, C.B., has commanded the 1st Division with marked ability, and in a manner which has gained the confidence of all ranks.

Major-General A. G. Yeatman-Biggs, C.B. (the late) was in a very bad state of health from the outset, but his indomitable spirit carried him through the whole of the operations, only to die at Peshawar on the 5th January. I would fain have sent him back to India from the Samana or subsequently from Karappa, but the responsible medical officers considered him fit to remain in the field, a decision which gratified him, although I personally could not agree with it.

Owing to a regrettable accident to Brigadier-General I. S. M. Hamilton, C.B., D.S.O., Brigadier-General R. Hart, V.C., C.B., was sent to relieve him. Brigadier-General Hart joined the 1st Brigade on October 24th, and has commanded it throughout the expedition with great ability and energy.

Brigadier-General A. Gaselee, C.B., A.D.C., has fully maintained his high reputation, and proved himself to be an admirable leader in mountain warfare.

Brigadier-General R. Westmacott, C.B., D.S.O., has performed excellent service, more particularly when withdrawing from the Bara Valley on December 13th and 14th.

Brigadier-General A. G. Hammond, V.C., C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C., though until lately he has not participated in the active operations of the force, has commanded the Peshawar Column to my satisfaction.

23. I am also much indebted to the officer commanding the Kurram Moveable Column, Colonel W. Hill, who has shewn energy, capacity, and judgment in the performance of his duties. His troops were well handled both in the reconnaissance to Hissar and during the operations against the Khani Khel Chamkannis.

24. I desire to bring to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief and the Government of India the following officers, who have rendered exceptionally good service during the operations under report:—

Brigadier-General W. G. Nicholson, C.B., Chief of the Staff. An officer of brilliant abilities, fertility of resource, and experience in war, the value of whose assistance it is difficult for me to acknowledge in adequate terms. I would very specially put forward his services for recognition and reward.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. G. Barrow, Assistant Adjutant-General, and Major G. H. W. O'Sullivan, Assistant Quarter Master General, have fully justified their selection for important posts on the Army Staff. I consider that these officers are well deserving of advancement.

Captain J. A. L. Haldane, Gordon Highlanders, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, is a staff officer of high promise, of great ability, and of untiring mental and physical energy.

I am indebted to Brigadier-General C. H. Spragge, commanding Royal Artillery, for valuable advice and assistance. Brigadier-General Spragge brings to special notice the services of his Brigade-Major, Captain C. deC. Hamilton, who is an excellent staff officer.

Brigadier-General J. E. Broadbent, commanding Royal Engineer, performed his duties to my full satisfaction. Unfortunately he had to be invalided towards the end of November, and was replaced by Brigadier-General J. W. Ottley, C.I.E.

I endorse the favourable opinion expressed by the commanding Royal Engineer, Tirah Expeditionary Force, of the services of the Brigade-Major, Royal Engineers, Captain S. L. Craster.

Surgeon-Major-General G. Thomson, C.B., Indian Medical Service, has been my Principal Medical Officer in the field, and I desire to express my indebtedness to him and to the other officers of the department, of which he has been in charge, for the high state of efficiency in which it has been maintained, often under very unfavourable conditions.

The Principal Medical Officer of the Force speaks in high terms of his Secretary, Surgeon-Major W. A. Morris, Army Medical Staff.

Colonel C. H. Scott, Royal Artillery, senior Ordnance Officer, has fully justified the high opinion which I had previously formed of him. He is an officer of great administrative ability and technical knowledge.

The Commissary-General of the force, Colonel L. W. Christopher, and the Chief Transport Officer, Major H. Mansfield, have been of great assistance to me. Thoroughly acquainted with their work and full of resource, these officers never raised unnecessary difficulties and were always ready to meet military requirements. Colonel Christopher speaks in high terms of his Assistant, Captain H. S. G. Hall, Assistant Commissary-General.

Lieutenant-Colonels H. G. Dixon, C.B., 2nd Battalion, King's Own Scottish Borderers, H. A. Abbott, 15th Sikhs, E. A. Travers, 1st Battalion, 2nd Gurkhas, and J. Haughton, 36th Sikhs, have commanded their respective battalions in a manner which merits high approbation.

The Postal and Telegraph departments in the field were ably administered by the Chief Superintendent of the former, Mr. W T. Van Someren, and the superintendent of the latter, Mr. L. Truninger. The services of both these officers are deserving of special recognition.

I take this opportunity of expressing my thanks to Lieutenant-Colonel His Highness the Maharaj Dhiraj Sir Pratap Singh, G.C.S.I., who was attached to me throughout the expedition as extra Aide-de-Camp. This very gallant Rajput nobleman was wounded on the 29th November, and characteristically concealed the fact until I discovered it by accident some days after the occurrence.

25. My acknowledgments are due to the following officers :—

Major-General Lord Methuen, K.C.V.O., C.B., C.M.G., Press Censor at Head Quarters

Colonel Sir T. H. Holdich, K.C.I.E., C.B., Chief Survey Officer.

Veterinary-Lieutenant-Colonel B. L. Glover, Inspecting Veterinary Officer, who is an able and zealous officer, and deserving of advancement.

Lieutenant-Colonel W. R. Le G. Anderson, field Controller of Military Accounts, to whom I am much indebted for his satisfactory financial arrangements, and for the promptness with which business connected with his department was disposed of.

Mr. C. E. Pitman, C.I.E., Chief Superintendent of Telegraphs, Punjab Division, whom I have to thank for valuable assistance in the construction and working of the field line.

I wish also to record my obligations to Lieutenant A. F. Ferguson Davie, 3rd Sikhs, who commanded my personal escort; and to its senior native officer, Subadar-Major Bishan Singh.

26. In the following list I include the names of the undermentioned officers, whose good services came under my personal notice :—

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT—CIVIL WORKS—IRRIGATION.

Calcutta, the 23rd February 1898.

READ—

Revenue Report of Irrigation Works in Baluchistan for the year 1896-97, forwarded with letter No. 4749, dated the 22nd November 1897, from the Secretary to the Agent to the Governor General, Baluchistan, Public Works Department.

OBSERVATIONS.—There are two Minor Works in Baluchistan, of which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept, viz., the Shebo Canal and the Khushdil Khan Reservoir.

2. There has been no expenditure chargeable to Capital Account since 1894-95 up to the end of which year the outlay amounted to Rs. 16,12,782, including indirect charges.

3. The following statement shows the actual financial results of the year under review:—

Works.	Total Capital outlay to end of year, including indirect charges.	Gross Revenue collected.			Working Expenses.			Net revenue.	Percentage of net revenue on capital at end of year.

* Refunds of revenue deducted from Revenue.

The working of the Shebo Canal during the year under review resulted in a loss of Rs. 863 against a profit of Rs. 10,200 in the preceding year. The explanation given is that, owing to the Forest Reserve having the first claim on the water, the supply available in the spring season was uncertain and, on this account, the villagers were indisposed to cultivate any land at all, and were only induced to do so by the offer of water at considerably reduced rates payable in kind. The gross revenue was, therefore, less than half the amount collected in the previous year. The forest reserve has now been abandoned so that in future the cultivators will not be influenced by apprehensions of the nature referred to and may be expected to cultivate more freely.

There was also an increase of 30 per cent. in the revenue charges on the figures of 1895-96. This was not due to any large increase in the actual working expenses but mainly to half the cost of the deputation of a temporary Engineer to report on the Pishin Irrigation Works being charged to this canal. The other half of the cost is included under establishment charges Khushdil Khan Reservoir.

The net revenue from the Khushdil Khan Reservoir amounted to Rs. 14,606, or 1·56 per cent. on the capital expended against 1·08 per cent. during the previous year.

The remissions on the Shebo Canal amounted to Rs. 526, the arrears of revenue due from the Shadezai villages at the end of the year amounting to Rs. 418 There were no remissions of revenue nor suspensions on the Khushdil Khan Reservoir during the year.

On the Shebo Canal, the average yield per acre was—wheat 6·40 maunds and barley 10·31 maunds against the previous year's yield of 5·45 and 3·97 maunds, respectively, and the average revenue realized from the irrigation of these crops was Rs. 5·19 per acre as compared with Rs. 3·0 in 1895-96. The revenue derived from the Shebo plantations was only Rs. 442, as the reserve was abandoned by the Forest Department early in the year under review.

On the Khushdil Khan Reservoir, the yield per acre was 10·28 maunds of wheat and 12·70 maunds of barley against the preceding year's yield of 6·10 and 5·72 maunds, respectively. The average revenue realized was—wheat nearly Rs. 11 per acre and barley nearly Rs. 13 per acre against Rs. 4·26 and Rs. 3 07, respectively, in the preceding year.

4. The area irrigated by the Shebo Canal during the year amounted to 1,388 acres (of which 19 acres were under kharif crops) against 1,799 acres in the preceding year. The Khushdil Khan Reservoir irrigated 1,967 acres, all of which were under rabi crops, as compared with 4,056 acres in 1895-96. All irrigation is by flow.

5. The following table shows the details of the working expenses exhibited in the statement in para. 3 :—

	Repairs.	Establishment	Tools and Plant.	Total.	Indirect charges	Total working expenses	Area irrigated.	Rate per acre.
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Acres.	Rs.
Shebo Canal	5,761	2,390	...	8,151	335	8,486	1,388	6 11
Khushdil Khan Reservoir .	4,423	2 180	...	6,603	305	6,908	1,967	3·51
Total .	10,184	4,570	...	14,754	640	15 394	3,355	4 58
Figures for 1895-96 .	10,133	2,489	...	12,622	349	12 971	5,855	2 2

The outlay on repairs on the Shebo Canal amounted to Rs. 5,761 and on the Khushdil Khan Reservoir to Rs 4,423. These sums represent expenditure on annual repairs which are necessary for maintaining the canals in proper order. The increase under the head "Establishment," as compared with the figures of the preceding year, is due to the addition of the salary of a temporary Engineer deputed to report on the working and maintenance of the Pishin Irrigation Works.

6. The rainfall at Quetta and Saranau during 1896-97 was 9·34 and 8 34 inches, respectively, as compared with 10·81 and 6·84 inches in the previous year. The rainfall at Khushdil Khan was 8·26 inches, and at Pishin 9 01 inches against 9·42 and 8·58 inches in the preceding year.

3, COUNCIL HOUSE STREET;
Calcutta, the 4th March, 1898.

THE RESIDENT IN MYSORE.

NOTIFICATION.

Bangalore, the 16th February, 1898.

No. 753.—Notice is hereby given that the right of selling country spirits in each of the 25 shops in the Civil and Military Station of Bangalore, specified in the subjoined schedule, for the year beginning 1st April, 1898, and ending with the 31st March, 1899, will be put up to public auction at the upset prices, noted against each shop. The sale will be conducted by the Collector or by an officer specially deputed with the sanction of the Resident for this purpose in the Mayo Hall, at 12 noon on Wednesday, 9th March 1898.

2. Each bidder at the auction will deposit the sum of R50 previous to bidding. The shops will, subject to the provisions of the next succeeding clause, be knocked down to the highest bidder above the upset price subject to formal confirmation by the Collector. Such formal confirmation will, unless revised by the Resident for special reasons, be tantamount to an acceptance of the bid and will be necessary whether the sale be held by the Collector himself or by any other officer deputed as mentioned in clause 1. Parties intending to bid must attend either in person or by duly accredited agents.

3. It will be within the discretion of the officer conducting the sale to decline to accept any bid or deposit if for any sufficient reason he considers such acceptance to be undesirable.

4. As soon as the auction is completed, the deposits made by the unsuccessful bidders will be returned to them on application. As the auction proceeds, the person whose bid is accepted for each shop shall at once deposit a sum equal to half a month's rent for that shop in addition to the deposit required under clause II. Should he fail to do this, the deposit made by him under clause II shall be forfeited, the shop will at once be put up again for sale on the above conditions, and he will be debarred from bidding again for the same or any other shop.

5. Persons to whom shops have been knocked down, and who have made deposits as provided in clause IV, shall also, within seven days from the date of auction, deposit such further sum as with the former deposits will make up an amount equal to two months' rent of each shop knocked down to them and shall execute the necessary engagements to take out licenses on the conditions hereinafter set forth.

6. If on enquiry subsequent to sale, but before final confirmation thereof, the purchaser shall be found to be of doubtful solvency, he may be required to deposit twice the amount prescribed under clause V supra, or to provide two sureties to execute a security bond for the due payment of all moneys that may become due by him under the terms of the contract. All expenses attendant upon this proceeding shall be borne by the renter.

7. On the failure of any person to make deposit, under clause V, or execute engagements and take out licenses as aforesaid, or to comply if required to do so with the requisition under clause VI supra, the deposits made under clauses II and IV will be forfeited and the shop or shops re-sold or otherwise disposed of at the discretion of the Collector.

8. Re-sales effected under clause VI supra will be at the risk of the defaulting bidder, who will forfeit any gain that may ensue owing to a rise in price and, in the event of loss by re-sale, will make good the deficiency that may be occasioned through his default. In the latter case the forfeited deposits will be deducted from the loss arising from the re-sale and the remainder, if any, will be recovered from the bidder in the same manner as if it were an arrear of Land Revenue. Should, however, the forfeited deposits be greater than the loss by re-sale, the whole of such deposits will be credited to Government. The defaulting bidder will be similarly liable if the privilege be disposed of otherwise than by re-sale and such disposal results in loss to Government.

9. A purchaser at an auction sale or re-sale shall not be permitted to sell, transfer, or subrent the right he has acquired or any interest therein, without the consent of the Collector, which for any adequate reason may be withheld. Nor shall he appoint any person to act as his agent in the management of the shop without the Collector's previous approval.

10. The purchaser of the shop is liable to the penalties prescribed for breaches of the conditions set forth below though a formal license may not have been issued to him.

CONDITIONS.

The privilege conferred extends only to the sale by retail of arrack of the strengths of 20° U. P. and 30° U. P.

2. The amount for which the privilege above described has been purchased shall be payable into the Resident's Treasury in equal monthly instalments, due on or before the 20th of each month commencing from April, 1898.

If the deposit made by the licensee under clause V in the sale Notification be in cash, it will be taken in payment of the instalments due on the last two months of the period of the rent. Failing payment by the 20th of the month, the Collector shall at once proceed to recover the arrears together with interest at 6 per cent., under the rules in force for the collection of land revenue. If the instalment has not been paid by the 5th of the following month, the Collector may suspend or cancel the license and issue notice of re-sale and may re-sell the license on the day fixed with effect from the date of its issue to the new purchaser. In that case the deposit will be forfeited, and if it should fall short of the arrears due and the loss, if any, caused by the suspension or re-sale, the original licensee will be responsible for the difference which will be recovered under the rules in force for the collection of Land Revenue. If the Collector does not re-sell the shop he may make other arrangements as may appear advisable for the remainder of the lease, in which case he shall serve a notice upon the defaulting licensee informing him of the nature of the arrangement made.

No remission or abatement of the rent shall, on any account whatever, be claimable by the licensee.

3. The licensee shall purchase spirits only from the Government contractor or his agent or from any licensed wholesale depôt-keeper at the rate of 6 annas 4 pies per gallon of 20° U. P. and 5 annas 7 pies per gallon of 30° U. P. exclusive of the Government duty of R4-12-0 per gallon of 20° U. P. and R4-2-6 per gallon of 30° U. P. which together with the cost price shall be paid into the Resident's treasury or to any officer duly authorised by the Resident to receive such payments. Applications shall in every case be supported by receipts showing that the duty as above has been paid and shall be handed over to the Excise officer in charge of the depôt.

4. The licensee of every shop shall pay a registration fee of R180 to the officer appointed in this behalf by the Municipal Commission or to the credit of the Assigned Tract into the Resident's treasury, as may be ordered by the Resident in two half-yearly instalments and he shall also pay in the same manner a license fee of 4 annas per gallon on all arrack sold by him in excess of 55 gallons a month. The above rates and fees are in addition to the duty and cost price which as provided for in clause 3 shall be prepaid into the Resident's treasury or to the officer duly authorised by the Resident to receive such payments.

5. The licensee shall place the license granted to him in a conspicuous place in the shop, which shall be located in a building to be approved of by the Collector, but not in the same premises with a depôt or shop for the sale of any other kind of intoxicants than arrack of the strength of 20° U. P. or 30° U. P. The room used for the shop shall always be separate from the shopkeeper's dwelling house. The shop shall have only one door which shall face the street and there shall be no windows or other openings to the rear or ends of the building. No second room shall be allowed for the sale of liquor or for the use of customers.

6. The licensee shall fix in a conspicuous part of the front of his shop a sign board on which his name, the spirit he is licensed to sell and the number of his license shall be legibly inscribed in the vernacular language of the locality in which the shop is situated.

7. The licensee shall maintain a sufficient supply of arrack in his shop which shall never be less than two Imperial gallons.

8. The licensee shall prevent all drunkenness or disorder or gaming within his shop. Persons suffering from leprosy or other contagious diseases shall not be employed in selling arrack or transporting arrack for sale. The licensee shall not harbour robbers, thieves or riotous persons, but shall give information to the nearest Magistrate or Police Officer as to any such persons who may resort to his shop

9. The licensee shall not receive any grain, jewels, goods, wearing apparel, or other article in barter or pawn for spirits, neither shall any credit be given. Payment for liquor shall be made in ready money only at the time of sale.

10. The licensee shall not allow any quantity of spirits, however small, to be conveyed from the premises except on special passes, which may be obtained for special reasons only, from the Collector.

11. The licensee shall not open his shop before sunrise nor keep it open after 9 P.M., except on special permit to be obtained from the Collector.

12. The licensee shall not sell nor give any spirits to any European non-commissioned officer, private soldier or to any European or Eurasian camp follower or to any members of the families of any of the aforesaid persons, nor to any sepoy, member of the police or excise department or servant of a railway company whilst on duty, nor to any European vagrant under escort of the Police nor to any child under twelve years of age Neither shall he sell liquor to any one at less than 2 annas per dram or R6 6-0 per gallon of 20° U. P. and 1 anna 10 pies per dram or R5-13-6 per gallon of 30° U. P.

13. The licensee shall not permit prostitutes or persons of notoriously bad character to meet or remain in the shop, neither shall he harbour or conceal soldiers or others knowing or having reason to believe such soldiers or others to be deserters.

14. The Collector may direct that the shop shall be temporarily closed on the grounds of Police administration or expediency. No remission or compensation shall be claimed if it is found necessary to enforce this clause.

15. The licensee shall keep a true account showing the quantity and strength of the spirits received in his shop, the quantity and strength of the spirits sold, the prices at which they are sold, and the quantity and strength of the spirits remaining unsold each day. Such account shall be produced for the inspection of the Collector, or any officer appointed by him for the purpose or any Police officer not below the rank of Inspector. The permits with which the liquor is received at the shops shall be carefully and regularly filed therein and similarly produced for inspection. An inspection note book with the pages numbered consecutively shall also be maintained intact at each shop at the licensee's cost so that officers who may inspect the shop may enter their remarks therein. This note book shall be handed over to the Collector or any officer authorised by him to receive it, whenever it is demanded. The licensee shall furnish such other returns and information as may from time to time be required by the Collector.

16. The licensee shall not keep in his shop, offer for sale, or sell any spirits except the arrack obtained from the Government contractor or his agent or a duly licensed depôt under the conditions of clause 3 supra, neither shall he keep in his shop, offer for sale, or sell spirits of any other strength than 20° U. P. and 30° U. P. The spirits kept in the shop, offered for sale, or sold by the licensee shall be unadulterated and undiluted. The licensee shall not keep or sell spirits at any other place than that specified in the license.
No foreign liquors or country spirits of greater strength than 20° U. P., or country beer or toddy or any other liquor than that to which the license relates shall be kept or sold in the building covered by this license. Nor shall any ganja, opium or any preparation thereof or therefrom be kept or sold in the building.

17. The licensee shall not possess or use any measures other than those which may be from time to time prescribed by Government and he shall have them tested and stamped at his own expense by the stamping establishment of the Collector's office. The present measure is fixed at 1—51 of the imperial gallon.

18. In case of any breach of the conditions of the license, either by the licensee, or by any person in his employment, it shall be competent for the Collector to impose upon the licensee a fine not exceeding R10 for every such breach of such conditions or to declare the money deposited with him forfeited and to cancel and re-sell the license at the risk of the licensee, and all loss thereby caused shall be made good by the licensee. When a license is cancelled, the rent for the whole period shall become due at once and it shall be recovered as if it were an arrear of land revenue.

19. The imposition of a fine, or the forfeiture of deposit, or the cancellation of the license under the last preceding section shall not be held to prevent the prosecution of the licensee or any of his servants for any offence which may be committed against the Excise Laws or Rules in force.

20. If it comes to the knowledge of the Collector that the licensee fails to open his shop or to carry on his business with due care and attention, or that he has been convicted of an offence under the Indian Penal Code, or under the Excise Laws or Rules, it shall be lawful for the Collector to cancel the license and to re-sell or otherwise dispose of the privilege at the risk of the licensee.

21. The licensee shall not have any pecuniary dealings of any kind whatever with any of the Excise or Revenue officials.

22. The licensee shall be bound by any additional rules as may be prescribed under the Excise Law now in force, or which may hereafter be enacted, and shall on requisition by the Collector, or by any officer duly authorised by the Collector, deliver up this license for amendment or for the issue of a fresh license accordingly.

A Dictionary of the Economic Products of India.

BY DR. GEO. WATT, C.I.E.,

Reporter on Economic Products.

The first five volumes and Volume VI, Parts I, II, III, & IV of the Dictionary are ready at the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, No. 8, Hastings Street, Calcutta, and will be supplied to non-subscribers on receipt of the price for the complete set, which is R45 in India, and 3 guineas in England (exclusive of the Index, for which a separate charge will be made): packing and postage, in India, 8 annas per volume; for England, 2 rupees 6 annas per volume. For copies bound in half calf or half morocco, R6 and 8 shillings, respectively, will be charged extra for the whole set.

The Dictionary is intended to deal with the products of India—animal, vegetable, and mineral; each product being treated after a uniform plan, the paragraphs of which give the scientific, vernacular, and European names; habitat or source; history; properties and uses (both chemical and industrial); trade statistics; markets, etc. The work is arranged alphabetically according to scientific nomenclature, but commercial and important vernacular names are also given as cross-references, so that little difficulty need be experienced in finding the account of a product even when its scientific name is unknown to the reader.

An important feature of the Dictionary consists in the fact that derived information is in every instance given under quotation marks, and with a reference to the original publication. Numerous contributors have, however, furnished the results of new discoveries, and confirmed the vernacular names, so that the Dictionary is not only a complete compilation of published information, but has been brought abreast of the most recent inventions and discoveries.

Volume I contains the letters A and B, and consists of 559 royal 8vo pages; Volume II embraces the letter C in 689 pages; Volume III contains the letters D, E, F, and half of G; Volume IV, latter half of G to middle of L; and Volume V contains the latter half of L to end of O; Vol. VI (which consists of four parts). Part I, contains letters P to R. The whole work completed in nine volumes (including Parts II to IV of Vol. VI), but a tenth volume has been issued, consisting of an Index to all the vernacular and other names contained in the Dictionary. The Index is practically a glossary of the vernacular and European names of the plants, animals, and minerals of India, and, as such, is a work of reference, which, it is hoped, will prove of considerable value.

ADMINISTRATION REPORT OF THE
FOR

CAPITAL AND REVENUE ACCOUNT.

Capital.—The Capital account of the Department was increased by R60,568, making the capital expenditure to end of the year R1,15,49,774. The increase was chiefly due to outlay on construction of quarters for the Director and signalling staff at Teheran; by providing these quarters the revenue expenditure in succeeding years will be decreased, as the signalling clerks will no longer draw rent allowance.

The following statement shows how the above increase is made up :—

—	Increase.	Decrease.	Total.
	R	R	R
Works	54,729	...	54,729
Suspense	...	...	...
Stores	538	...	538
Other heads	5,301	.	5,301
	60,568	...	60,568

A summary of the year's transactions on Capital account is given in Appendix A.

2. Revenue.—Appendix B is a summary of the earnings and expenditure.* The earnings amounted to R14,84,507, or a decrease of R1,85,574 as compared with 1895-96, when the sum realised was R16,70,081. The expenditure during the year was R7,71,477 against R8,17,450 in the past year, or a decrease of R45,973. The net result is a profit of R7,13,030 on the year's working against that of R8,52,631 in 1895-96, a falling off of R1,39,601, due to causes as explained below.

3. The following statement shows the chief differences between the earnings and expenditure of the current and previous years. For details, see Appendix B:—

TOTAL	16,70,081	14,84,507	751	1,86,325
Net Decrease	...	...	...	1,85,574

4. For the first time since 1889-90 there has been a falling off in the earnings of the year under review as compared with the preceding year. This is due to the fact that although we drew out of the Joint Purse about 1,062*l.* more than last year on account of Trans-Indian traffic (including Australasian), the Indian traffic fell off considerably, and we drew out about 3,926*l.* less on that account. This is no doubt due to the famine and plague in India. The large falling off in "earnings" as shown in rupees is due to the higher rate of exchange which prevailed during the year, and the consequently smaller amount in rupees collected in India as the franc equivalent.

5. In order to understand the statement given in paragraph 3, it is perhaps advisable to explain that "traffic earnings" represents the cash collections on local traffic in Persia and the Persian Gulf, and the cash balances received or paid by this Department at Karachi in settling accounts with the Indian Department, and in London in settling with the Turkish Administration and the Indo-European Telegraph Company. These balances are actually made out in francs, and the amount shown in rupees as received from the Indian Department at Karachi represents the gold equivalent of these francs, and consequently varies according to the rate of exchange. For instance, the traffic receipts for this year were 2,956,006 francs against 2,786,945 francs in the preceding year, but the amount collected in rupees was R19,20,488 against R19,40,495 in 1895-96. The amount shown as decrease on "Common Purse" and "Australasian Message Fund" represents the difference between the amount actually carried by this Department and paid into the Common Purse, and the amount drawn out of the Purse. This does not necessarily mean a decrease in our receipts from the Common Purse, but shows the value of traffic

* Excluding the cost of the London Office Establishment (1,580*l.*), which is included as part of the Establishment of the Secretary of State.

† NOTE.—The head "Traffic Earnings" includes the amount collected in India, as also the loss on account of exchange on sterling transactions. The tariffs on International messages are fixed in a gold standard, and the balances due to or from foreign administrations are settled in that standard. The rupee collections in India vary, therefore, in correspondence with the fluctuations in exchange, and the balance received from the Indian Telegraph Department at Karachi in rupees is sufficient to pay the telegraph companies and foreign administrations in the gold standard and retain the share of this Department in a gold standard also.

actually carried by this Department in excess of what it is entitled to under the Agreement.

TOTAL .	8,17,450	7,71,477	10,480	56,453
Net Decrease .	...	...	...	45,973

6. The increase and decrease under the main heads are as follows :—

(1) General Charges.—Gulf and Persian Sections.—The increase is due chiefly to more expenditure in England on furlough allowances, etc., than in the previous year. To this cause is due also the increase noticeable under "Exchange."

Under the authority of the Secretary of State the charge for the supervision and audit of the accounts of the Department in India was increased from April 1896 from R750 to R1,000 per mensem, plus R60 a share of the Accounts Office rent.

(2) Line Maintenance.—Gulf Section.—The decrease was caused by a less issue of stores on repairs of the land lines than in the previous year.

(3) Line Maintenance.—Persian Section.—The decrease under this head was due partly to less expenditure under establishment, travelling allowance and exchange compensation allowance and partly to less issue of stores on line repairs.

(4) Signalling.—Gulf Section.—The decrease under this head was caused partly by some of the signalling clerks having been on long leave out of India and drawing their leave allowance from the Home Treasury, and partly by less expenditure on exchange compensation allowance.

(5) Signalling.—Persian Section.—The decrease under this head is due chiefly to the debit, under the orders of the Government of India, of a sum of R18,400 to the Revenue account in 1895-96, being a portion of the cost of the new buildings at Teheran. There has also been less expenditure on exchange compensation allowance.

The salaries of the signalling staff are on an incremental scale, but owing to strict economy in working the total expenditure for signalling was kept below that of last year.

(6) Cable Maintenance.—Gulf Section.—The decrease under this represents chiefly less issue of stores for cable repairs.

NET REVENUE.

7. On a total Capital expenditure of R1,15,49,774 a net profit of R7,13,030 was earned, which gives a dividend of 6·17 per cent. as compared with a dividend of 7·42 per cent. in 1895-96. The dividends earned during the past six years are as follows:—

Year.	Interest on Capital.
1891-92	1·4
1892-93	3·8
1893-94	4·28
1894-95	6·50
1895-96	7·42
1896-97	6·17

The cause of the decrease is explained above; namely, I. Indian traffic less; II. Indian exchange better, and a lower rate in rupees paid for telegrams; III. Less old cable sold.

CIS-INDIAN JOINT PURSE.

8. Appendix C deals with the transactions in connection with this Agreement which was entered into in 1878. The number of words carried between Europe and India or Trans-India and vice versâ during the year by the three Administrations (viz., the Eastern Telegraph Company, the Indo-European Telegraph Company, and this Department) rose from 5,954,751¼ to 6,157,208½, showing an increase of 202,457, while the net value also shows an increase of 20,030*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.* The Department's share of the Purse, however, shows a decrease of 1,146*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.*, chiefly caused by the large falling off in Indian traffic, which is not made up by the increase in Trans-Indian traffic. The amount paid into the Purse was more than in the previous year by 6,906*l.* 0*s.* 11*d.*

9. The following table shows the sums paid in and drawn out by the Department annually since the Agreement was concluded:—

12. Interruptions affecting Joint Purse Agreement.—One interruption stopping traffic between Teheran and Karachi occurred on the Persian Section, and lasted 20 hours 53 minutes. Beyond Teheran to London the Indo-European Company's lines were totally interrupted for 59 hours 24 minutes, but none of these interruptions affected the divisions of the Joint Purse.

13. On the Turkish route interruptions occurred between Fao and Constantinople, lasting 83 days 14 hours 56 minutes. The working of this route continues to be very unsatisfactory. The Fao-Bushire cable was also interrupted for repairs for 1 day 22 hours 30 minutes.

During the last six years the Turkish route beyond Fao has been interrupted as follows :—

Year.	1891-92.	1892-93.	1893-94.	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.
Days, hours, minutes	77—8—12	108—9—54	101—5—41	150—0—52	111—17—35	83—14—56

The Department was only liable to the Joint Purse for 52 days' interruptions at Fcs. 50 per diem.

AUSTRALASIAN MESSAGE FUND.

14. Full particulars regarding the nature of this Fund are given in the Administration Report of 1893-94 (page 6, paras. 14 to 17). In April 1896, however, a Supplemental Agreement was entered into under which New Zealand joined the Fund, and from 1st May 1895 the amount guaranteed was reduced to 227,000*l.*, but the sum payable in any one year by the colonies is limited to 10,000*l.* The Agreement was also made binding for at least five years.

The Departmental receipts for this year show an increase of 4,677*l.* over the receipts in 1889, on which the original Australasian Message Fund was based. See Appendix C. (1).

TRAFFIC.

15. The service regulations of the Paris Convention of 1890 were in force throughout the year. As decided at that Conference, the succeeding Conference was to have been held at Buda-Pesth during 1895, but at the request of the Royal Hnngarian Government it was postponed until the 16th June 1896, on which date the delegates met and continued in session until 19th July, India being represented by Mr. S. V. P. Luke, C.I.E., and Mr. B. T. Ffinch, C.I.E. Mr. Ffinch also represented Persia. The regulations as revised at this Conference came into force on the 1st July 1897.

16. A summary of the alterations affecting India is given in the Administration Report of the Indian Telegraph Department for 1896-97, and is as follows :—

"1. An increase in the length of a permissible word in telegrams wholly in plain language, as distinguished from telegrams wholly in code, or partly in code and partly in plain language, 15 letters being allowed as the maximum instead of 10 as heretofore.

"2. An increase in the number of figures and signs permissible as one word when written in series, as regards every class of telegram, five characters being counted as a word in place of three as heretofore.

"3. The counting as one word only of the sender's special instructions, if written in the authorised abridged form.

"4. The exclusion of Sundays in the limit of 72 hours allowed for obtaining or giving corrections to telegrams by means of paid service advices.

"5. Substantial reductions in the rates between India and East and South Africa, including Mauritius, as also between India and the Straits, China, and Japan; as well as minor reductions in their terminal rates by the Russian and Persian Governments.

"All the above changes are to the advantage of the public, and, in addition to the results obtained, it may be mentioned that the Iudian delegates, Messrs. Luke and Ffinch, were instructed both by the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India, in the interests of Indian commerce, to urge upon the representatives of the Eastern and Indo-European Telegraph Companies the desirability of a reduction in the rate for telegrams between India and Europe. Notwithstanding, however, their strongest representations and the warm support of the British delegates, the opposition of the companies, both to a general reduction and to the alternative proposal of a reduction on messages in plain language, proved insurmountable. The companies, while most anxious to meet the wishes of the Government of India, regretted that they could not, for financial reasons, agree to risk the loss that any reduction would involve, in consequence of the stationary character of the Indian Telegraph traffic. The desired reduction must apparently, therefore, be deferred for the present.

"Both the Government of India and the Secretary of State have expressed their satisfaction, not only with the joint efforts of the Indian delegates in the matter of the reduction of rates, but also with their proceedings generally at the Conference."

17. Appendix E., with its Supplementary Statements E I. and E II., shows the traffic carried by the two sections of the Department. The number of words was 2,059,941 against 1,924,734 in the previous year, showing an increase of 135,207; the value as stated in francs shows an increase from 2,786,951 to 2,956,012 francs.

In Indian currency the earnings of the Department are, however, less by Rs. 20,007, being Rs. 19,20,488 against Rs. 19,40,495.

18. The comparative values of the franc and rupee have varied during the year as shown below. Also, as compared with the previous year, the exchange value of the rupee has risen, which will account for the disproportionate decrease in the revenue as expressed in rupees when compared with the number of words, which has increased.

1st April to 30th April 1896 . .	1 franc =	·66 of a rupee.
1st May to 15th November . .		·68 of a rupee.
16th November to 31st December .		·66 of a rupee.
1st January to 31st March 1897 . .		·64 of a rupee.

19. The following table gives the amounts paid into the Joint Purse by the Department as compared with its independent traffic revenue :—*

——	For Joint Purse, etc.		Independent Revenue.	Total.
	Indian.	Trans-Indian.
	Fcs.	Fcs	Fcs.	Fcs.
Persian Gulf Section .	1,804,090·67⅜	760,237·05⅝	14,589·36½	2,578,917.09¼
Persian Section . .	258,684·82 23/24	109,127·18	9,277·44 1/2	377,089.45¾
TOTAL FRANCS .	2,062,775·50⅛	869,364·23⅝	23,866·81 1/24	2,956,006.55

20. Appendix F. gives the number of messages and words carried under the four following classes during the past five years :—

State. Press.

Commercial and Private. "Times" (special rate).

21. The average length of "private and commercial" messages was 13·27 words in 1896-97 as compared with 13·04 words in the previous year. The average length, calculated from the averages of the past seven years, is 13·25 words. This increased length of messages during the past year is a hopeful sign that codifying has reached its limit.

22. In addition to the messages classified in Appendix I. 797 messages, containing 69,623 words, were forwarded to the British Resident at Bushire free of charge. These are called "Government and Press" telegrams, and would, if charged for, yield R17,107,13·9 at press rates.

23. The percentages of traffic carried on the Teheran and Turkish routes were 94·61 and 5·39 respectively. The following table gives the respective percentages for the past seven years :—

Years.	Viâ Teheran.	Via Turkey.	Remarks
1890-91	93·92	6·08
1891-92	92·37	7·63
1892-93	92·96	7·04
1893-94	93·60	6·40
1894-95	94·36	5·64
1895-96	93·55	6·45
1896-97	94·61	5·39

* NOTE.—The independent traffic revenue is that obtained from traffic dealt with by this Department and not touching India, such as for telegrams between the stations of Jask and Bushire.

24. The mean rate of transmission of telegrams between the United Kingdom and Karachi, and between Karachi and Teheran, the latter being the section worked by the Department, during each of the past six years is as follows:—

Year.	Between the United Kingdom and Karachi, viâ Teheran		Between the United Kingdom and Karachi, viâ Turkey.		Between Karachi and Teheran.
					Karachi to Teheran.		Teheran to Karachi.
	Hours.	Min.	Hours.	Min.	Min.	Sec.	Min.	Sec.
1891-92	0	59	16	12	8	42	6	25
1892-93	0	45	27	47	5	51	4	26
1893-94	0	43	36	49	5	40	4	28
1894-95	0	43½	46	46	7	7	5	00
1895-96	0	46	34	00	5	27	4	41
1896-97	1	12	36	08	19	33	13	28

25. This decreased rate of speed between Karachi and Teheran was partially due to the bad weather on the Persian Section, and largely due to the interruptions of the Eastern route for six days in March 1897. Omitting the figures for that month the result works out as follows:—

	Hours.	Min.	Hours.	Min.	Min.	Sec	Min.	Sec.
1896-97 (excepting March)	—		—		8	32	4	19

Showing an increased rate as compared with last year from Karachi to Teheran, but a decrease from Teheran to Karachi. This increase is no doubt partially due to the daily number of messages from the East being greater than from the West; also to the fact that the Indian Department, having so many more wires terminating at Karachi than we have, batches of messages are handed to us in quick succession during the busiest part of the day.

26. Appendix G. gives the details, month by month, of the speed of working between Karachi and Teheran, and in Appendix H similar details are supplied with regard to the speed between the United Kingdom and Karachi, viâ Teheran and viâ Turkey.

27. Check of Errors.—The accuracy of transmission over the lines of the Department for the past two years is shown below. It will be seen that in this respect the year under review compares favourably with the preceding one:—

1895-96	0·171 per cent.

28. Complaints.—The number of complaints received for investigation amounted to 159, being 11 more than the total for the year 1894-95. Of this number 101 were from Europe and 58 from India; 80 related to messages viâ Turkey, and 6 to local traffic.

The following table gives all details:—

Nature of Complaint.	Received from Europe.	Received from India.	Total.
Non-deliveries	25	17	42
Non-deliveries due to insufficient address	3	1	4
Delays	37	17	54
Errors	18	6	24
Refund of reply deposits not used	5	8	13
Miscellaneous references	13	9	21
TOTAL	101	58	159

Of the above, 59 were not admitted by the Administrations concerned, or are still being investigated by them. Of the remaining 100 this Deparment is responsible for 6 only.

OFFICES.

29. The number of offices open to the public throughout the year (excluding those on the Teheran Meshed and Borazjoon Mohammerah, Persian Government lines) was, in the Persian Gulf Section 8, and in the Persian Section 9. In the Persian Gulf Section a temporary office was opend at Lyari in the Lus Beylak State for a part of the year (see para. 48), and in the Persian Section four extra offices of observation were open throughout the winter.

ESTABLISHMENT.

30. At the close of the year the strength of the signalling establishment, including four Inspectors in the Persian Section, stood at—

General service civilian clerks	58
Unattached list: Non-commissioned officers of Royal Engineers	9
Local service signallers	31
Postal employé	1
TOTAL	99

31. The following casualties occurred during the year:—

Resignations:—

1 Director (retired).
2 Superintendents (retired).
2 Assistant Superintendents (retired).
1 Officer of the "Patrick Stewart" (cable steamer).

Died:

1 Assistant to Traffic Superintendent.

Dismissed:—

1 general service clerk.
1 temporary Assistant Engineer of the "Patrick Stewart."
1 Probationer.

CABLES.

PERSIAN GULF SECTION.

32 The lengths of the various cable sections on the 31st March 1896 and 1897 were as follows:—

Total knots	1,718·938	1,718.144

Showing an increase in length of ·794 since last year, due to repairs and to the correction of errors discovered in the diagrams of the different sections. In addition to the above there is a seven-core Fowler-Waring cable from the Karachi Harbour to the Central Telegraph Office, 1·630 knots in length.

* Incorrectly printed in last year's report owing to each conductor in the three-conductor Fowler-Waring Cable being reckoned as a separate cable.

33. This Department also keeps the following cables in working order:—

(i) The Harbour Defence Revised System, composed as follows:—

	Statute miles.
From Customs Cable House through Junction Box to Marsh Fort (Harbour Cables)	6·703
From Junction Box to Manora and Beach Forts (Fowler-Waring Cables)	1·328
From Central Office to Customs Cable House (one twin Fowler-Waring Cable)	1·630

34. Summary of the History of the Cables and their Electrical and Mechanical Condition during the year 1896-97.

Fao-Bushire Cable.—This cable was repaired and a length renewed in November 1896, when 19·671 knots of new brass-taped cable were inserted and a fault cut out. There are 26·671 knots of the original gutta-percha cable of 1864 in this section, of which 17·799 knots, at the Fao end, have not been touched since laid. The cable tests 43 megohms per knot and works well. It may be considered to be in a satisfactory condition.

Bushire-Jask India-rubber Cable of 1869.—This cable has been twice repaired during the year. In August 1896 the cable broke through corrosion of the guards, and in November 1896 a fault was cut out during the annual trip of the cable steamer. In this section there is a length of 101·679 knots remaining of the original india-rubber cable, which has all been picked up, retaped, and relaid at some time or other. There are also 135·597 knots of the original gutta-percha cable of 1864, which has been inserted at various times. Thus about 237 knots, or nearly half of this section, consists of old cable which may require renewal shortly. At present the insulation is 71 megohms per knot, which, though lower than last year, may be considered satisfactory.

Bushire-Jask Gutta-percha Cable of 1885.—This cable has not required any repairs during the year and has not been disturbed. Although the insulation has fallen from 659 to 326 megohms per knot during the year, probably due to gradual development of a fault, the condition is satisfactory.

Jask-Manora Gutta-percha Cable.—A fault developed in this cable in August 1896 and had not been localised at the end of the year, but has since been found and cut out. A second fault appeared in January 1897, which was cut out. This section contains about 82 knots of the old gutta-percha cable of 1864, and 18 knots of the old india-rubber cable of 1869. This old cable may require renewal shortly, but otherwise the mechanical condition of the cable is satisfactory. The insulation is 73 megohms per knot, which is as high as can be expected.

Harbour Cables.—These are all in good working order. Three faults occurred during the year, but they have all been repaired.

The seven-core Fowler-Waring Cable, after being yarned and compounded, was, together with a twin-core Fowler-Waring Cable belonging to the Indian Telegraph Department, buried during September 1896, between the Customs Cable House and the Central Telegraph Office, and three of its conductors now replace a similar number of wires of the aerial telegraph line existing between the same two points.

Cable Houses and Cable Land Lines.

35. The cable houses and cable land lines were all inspected during the year. At Bushire about 100 feet of each of the three cables entering the cable house, vid the tunnel and shaft were cut off and replaced by 100 yards of brass-taped main cable, the slack being coiled beyond low-water mark. This brass-taped core is said to resist decay better than the old bare core, where exposed to the atmosphere.

Manora Cable Factory.

36. The following is a summary of the work done in the Cable Factory during the past year :—

	Knots.
Cable manufactured, shore end, 2nd class	4·570
" recovered, retaped, and brought on charge	7·295
" Stripped for core	27·982

At present the following core is in store at Manora :—

" " " short lengths on drums to be shipped to England for sale	31·963
India-rubber core fit for use as leads, etc.	4·187
" " condemned	0·207

There is also on hand 7·538 knots of short pieces of wire-guarded cable which are kept for sale or for fencing purposes.

37. Engine Boilers.—The vertical boiler was inspected and a certificate granted for a further period of 12 months by the Government boiler inspector.

The locomotive type boiler, which had been condemned, was removed and a new Cornish boiler, received from England, erected in its place. A certificate for 12 months was granted for a pressure of 125 lbs.

38 Cable Machinery.—This is in good order, and has been slightly altered to enable the Fowler-Waring cables to be served with yarn.

Interruptions.

39. There was one total interruption of the india-rubber cable between Bushire and Jask during the year, lasting 10 days, 7 hours, and 30 minutes. The remainder were partial interruptions due to repairs, and lasted altogether 3 days and 14 hours.

Repairs and Renewals.

40. During the past year three renewals have been made : viz., two in the Bushire-Fao cable, aggregating 19·691 knots, and one in the Bushire-Jask india-rubber cable of 8·144 knots. Repairs necessitated the expenditure of 13·444 knots of cable from our stock ; that made in August, alluded to above, took 6·306 knots of second-class cable, and that in January took 7·138 knots of second-class cable. Of the cable recovered 7·295 knots have been brought on charge and 27·982 knots have been condemned and broken up.

Cable Steamer "Patrick Stewart."

41. The vessel was in dock at Bombay three times during the year for repairs, and made three journeys up to the Gulf for cable repairs and inspections. On 1st March 1897 she left Karachi with the engineer and electrician and cable staff to carry out cable repairs between India and Ceylon for the Indian Telegraph Department.

While lying in harbour at Karachi her main and forecastle decks were renewed and other necessary repairs executed.

During the year the vessel steamed nearly 10,400 nautical miles. A statement of the work done by her is given in Appendix.

The earnings of the ship during the past year amounted to R10,375, of which R11,242 were on account of repairs to the Indo-Ceylon cable.

Working.

42. A slight alteration has been made in translation working, and a system of automatic transmitting has been introduced and promises to give good results when some small difficulties with the instruments have been overcome.

MEKRAN COAST LAND LINE.

43. The lengths of the various sections of this line on the 31st March 1896 were the same as last year, viz. :—

	Miles of Line.	Miles of Wire.

Maintenance and Repairs to Land Lines.

44. Over 70 miles of wire have been renewed on account of corrosion, which is a fruitful cause of interruptions on this line. The iron and wooden poles have been painted or tarred where necessary and the earth wires renewed. The insulators also have deen cleaned and refilled with insulating fluid. Two small diversions of the line have been carried out and surveys made for two other diversions, which are considered necessary for the safety of the line.

Interruptions.

45. The total interruptions on the land line during the past year amounted to 2 days, 5 hours, and 50 minutes, of which 13½ hours were due to wilful damage

The partial interruptions, i.e., those not affecting communication, amounted to 31 days, 3 hours, and 40 minutes, of which 10 days, 15 hours, and 15 minutes were due to wilful damage.

46. The causes of the faults are summarised as follows:—

	Number.	Duration. Hours.
Definitely traced to preventable causes:—
Faulty construction	—	—
Faulty maintenance	12	386
Working parties	1	2
Other preventable causes	—	—
Unpreventable causes:—
Cyclones and storms	4	98
Floods	1	28
Animals and birds	1	19
Malice	7	268
Unknown causes	—	—

Of the 12 faults due to faulty maintenance, 10 were due to corrosion of the line wire.

Inspections.

47. All the offices of this section were inspected during the year by the Director and were found in a satisfactory state. The buildings were also in good order.

General Remarks.

48. During January 1897 a serious riot occurred at Reshire, near Bushire, where our offices are situated. Certain bench marks had lately been fixed near the office by officers of the Survey of India Department. The Persians, incited by their Seyeds, considered that the failure of rain was due to their existence, and that as long as they remained there would be no rain. Consequently a mob, led by their priests, collected in large numbers and destroyed them. The bench marks were rebuilt in April last. For his services on this occasion Mr. Campbell was awarded a bonus of R500 and received the thanks of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

For some time after the assassination of the Shah anarchy reigned in Perso-Beluchistan, and there were several disturbances at Charbar due to the presence of various Chiefs and their followers.

At the request of the political officer, Southern Beluchistan, a temporary land-line office was opened in October at Lyari, about 25 miles north of Sonmiani and was kept open until the end of April 1897.

PERSIAN SECTION.

49. Line Maintenance.—Only ordinary line repairs were carried out during the year, except that the 1,275 four-and-a-half-inch brackets for Hamilton standards which were supplied by the Indian Telegraph Department in 1893 were replaced by others made to fit the Siemens posts in use in Persia.

50. Offices.—The new office buildings at Abadeh, the property of the Persian Government, were completed in August 1896. They take the place of those washed away by a flood in 1894. The office at Kazeroon, also the property of the Persian Government, was repaired, and a separate entrance and separate premises provided for the use of the clerk of the Persian Administration.

(1.) The necessity for this arrangement is to prevent the premises occupied by this Department being overrun by mobs of discontented people, who on the slightest provocation, rush to the telegraph office in hopes of obtaining redress.

An English-speaking clerk was entertained from the 1st November 1896 at the cost of the Persian Government to work in English in the Ispahan city office. By this means the time occupied in the delivery of telegrams for the city is reduced. This clerk also works in English to Yezd, where the Imperial bank propose engaging a signaller with a knowledge of English for their own use.

On the 5th May the office at Dasht Arjin was looted by a party of Kash Kooli Turks, and the whole of the electrical instruments, clocks, tools, etc.

either demolished or carried of. A bill for the amount has been submitted to the Persian Government, and, with the sanction of Her Britannic Majesty's Chargé d' Affaires, has been charged against the Jask Royalty for 1896-97.

51. Interruptions.—During 1896-97 there was only one total interruption of 20 hours, 53 minutes, at Dasht Arjin office, due to the incident mentioned in the last paragraph. That this interruption was of so short duration is entirely due to the bravery and devotion to duty of Sergeant Newey, R.E., and his head gholam Abdullah, who pushed through from Kazeroon to Dasht Arjin at the risk of their lives, Sergeant Newey incurring serious personal injury from the performance of this dangerous duty.

The interruptions on this section from all causes during the past three years have been :—

Year.	1 Wire.	2 Wires.	3 Wires.
	Hours.	Hours.	Hours.
1894-95	591·38	94·27	65·57
1895-96	325·65	13·32	5·16
1896-97	606·00	17·12	20·53

Of the above interruptions to one wire during 1896-97, one lasted 200¼ hours, and was due to an insulator having been smashed by a bullet during the disturbances in the south of Persia, following the Shah's assassination.

52. The causes of the faults are summarised as follows :—

	Number.	Duration. Hours.
Definitely traced to preventable causes :—
Faulty construction and maintenance	3	9·68
Unpreventable :—
Cyclones and exceptional storms	3	13·50
Floods	—	—
Lightning	2	37·48
Snow	—	—
Fires	—	—
Trees falling other than those caused by cyclones .	—	—
Animals and birds	12	145·30
Malice	17	336·39
Other unpreventable causes :—
Faults in offices	4	10·55
Unknown causes	5	79·52

The interruptions caused by birds during the year were heavier than usual. This is attributed to the very bad state of the roads over the mountain passes in the south of Persia, and the consequent large mortality among baggage animals. Vultures attracted by the carcasses when rising come in constant contact with the wires, or deposit offal on them.

53. There were 252 acts of wilful damage committed during 1896-97, being 57 less than in 1895-96, and 79 less than in 1894-95.

Wilful damage caused interruptions on the several wires as follows :—

Year.	1 Wire.	2 Wires.	3 Wires.
	Hours.	Hours.	Hours.
1894-95	150·38	42 16	Nil.
1895-96	158·8	Nil.	5·16
1896-97	315 46	Nil.	20·53

54. The total amount claimed and recovered from the Persian Government for the year was Krans 7,206 or 864·50* more than last year, and Krans 2,848 more than 1894-95. Of the above sum Krans 937 were recovered from local Governors, and the balance of Krans 6,269 has been charged against the Jask Royalty. The accounts for wilful damage are made up from the 1st February to 31st January of each year to suit the convenience of the Persian Government.

The late Shah was assassinated on the 1st May 1896, but notwithstanding the state of anarchy which prevailed in Southern Persia, our relations with the Persian authorities and people were as cordial as ever, and it is a subject for congratulation and a sign of the goodwill of the generality of the Persian people that fewer acts of wilful damage were committed than in previous years.

56. The principal disturbances and outrages which occurred during the year have been fully reported to Government, and those of the local Chiefs and people who rendered conspicuous aid to the Department have been rewarded; while claims have been submitted to the Persian Government, and for the most part met, for damage and injury done to members of the staff and property of the Indian Government. It may, however, be interesting to give a short summary in this Report of the principal events which affected the Telegraph Department, in order to show the position of the officers and men in Persia and the difficulties which have sometimes to be contended with in maintaining telegraphic communication.

May 1st. Shah assassinated and arrangements made that soldiers in Shiraz should receive pay, etc.

May 5th. Dasht Arjin looted and all lines interrupted. Sergeant Newey, R.E., his head gholam and a labourer attacked on way to fault. Sergeant Newey very badly beaten and rendered unconscious; whole party stripped. Several gholams robbed of their horses and stripped while performing their duties.

Shiraz City in a state of uproar and riot; Jews' quarters attacked; some 20 private houses looted, but our people unmolested.

Dehbeed office besieged by marauding Arabs. Arrangements made with ex-Governor of Abadeh to aid Mr. Jefferies in defence of buildings, and also with Khawam at Shiraz for a relief party to go to Dehbeed, accompanied by Inspector Blackman. Roads between Kazeroon and Shiraz strewn with merchandise, and all roads in Persia pronounced unsafe and traffic along them stopped.

May 22nd. Post from Shiraz attacked two miles north of Kazeroon.

June. Regiment in Teheran mutinied for pay. Affairs very disturbed at Shuster. Mr. Tanfield all but killed. Messrs. Hotz' office looted. Assistant Surgeon Salts en route to Shiraz was attacked and struck on the face by a slug.

September. Gholam stopped by highwaymen.

October. Ferash or caretaker at Konar Takhteh robbed and brutally treated. Governor of Borasjoon threatened to boycott the clerk at Borasjoon office and caused people to write defamatory letters about him. The Resident at Bushire when passing through Borasjoon proved these allegations to be false.

October 23rd. Riots broke out at Kashan and lasted until 12th.

October 27th. Telegraph tofangchee badly beaten at Dasht Arjin.

November 4th. Post robbed between Soh and Kashan.

November 18th. Reports from Shiraz of this date show that Fars is in a state of anarchy and Kashgai tribes are in revolt. Robberies take place nightly in the City of Shiraz. The whole of the South of Persia is in a very disturbed state and said to be bristling with Martini rifles.

Buildings.

57. The new quarters for the staff at Teheran were occupied in October and November 1896. There is still some work to be done in finishing off these buildings and ground surrounding them.

The new quarters for the Director are in an advanced stage of construction. The site has been laid out and partly planted, and the 24 Persian yards of ground required to complete the site were purchased on the 23rd March 1897.

Medical.

58. Dr. Scully acted as senior Medical Superintendent at Teheran for eight months during the absence on furlough of Dr. Odling, C.M.G., and Dr. Scully's place at Shiraz was filled by Assistant Surgeon F. Salts, of the Indian Medical Department.

The health of the staff was considerably better than in 1895-96, but there was a good deal of fever at Shiraz in July and August 1896.

Meteorology.

59. At the request of the Meteorological Reporter, India, daily telegrams reporting the state of the weather at Teheran and Ispahan were sent to him from the 15th of November 1896 to 15th March 1897.

MESHED LINE.

60. Maintenance and Repairs.—1,240 new juniper poles and 3,886 Indian Field pattern insulators were placed in position; also 487 old poles were re-erected after rotten bases had been sawn off. The re-poling, re-insulating, and Britannia jointing of the whole line has now been completed, and a new loop line erected at Aiwanikief to carry the wires into the new Telegraph Office, and a diversion made to secure a better crossing of the Gorgerood river.

A sum of krans 24,695 was received from the Persian Government in July 1896, being the last instalment of a sum of krans 98,780 sanctioned by the Persian Government for the purpose of putting this line into thorough repair. Details of the expenditure are given in the Appendix.

61. Offices.—A new office was fitted up at Aiwanikief in October 1896.

62. Interruptions.—The line was interrupted for 186 hours 25 minutes during the year. The interruptions from all causes during the past three years were :—

	Hours.	Min.
1895-96	397	18

The out-station clerks now submit accurate and regular reports of wilful damages perpetrated on their sections. 169 acts of wilful damage were committed during the year, or a decrease of 276 as compared with last year.

This is mainly due to the substitution of Indian insulators and the better condition of the line. The fact that 255 krans have actually been recovered from local governors on account of wilful damage speaks well for the influence of the Assistant Superintendent in charge (Mr. Wood) with the Persian officials along the line, and although the offices at Meshed and Semnan were invaded by mutinous soldiery and mobs, the difficulties were satisfactorily arranged.

63 Traffic.—The table below shows the amount of paid conversational traffic, etc., carried by the line during 1895-96 and 1896-97.

BORASJOON-AHWAZ LINE.

64. Owing to the difficulties of obtaining funds from the Persian Government and the large amount of repairs necessary, it has not been possible to make this line satisfactory.

STORES.

65. During the past year the principal items of expenditure under this head have been as follows:—

	R	a.	p.
Purchase of stores in India	414	14	0
London stores, including frieght, landing charges and exchange	75,110	4	2
Stores from other Departments	3,440	6	0 and the following were the principle issues of stores:—

Repairs to cable	23,118	0	10
Repairs and renewals of land line . . .	3,124	0	1
Issues to signal offices, including Persian Section.	8,384	4	10
Issues to cable steamer	32,112	3	0

Personnel.

66. The Director, Persian Section, brings prominently to notice the good services rendered by the members of his staff at the time of the assassination of the late Shah; Mr. Assistant Superintendent Stainton and Messrs. Inspectors Jefferies, Newey (Sergeant, R.E.), and Blackman, also Head Gholam Abdullah, being specially mentioned. Mr. Jefferies received the thanks of the Secretary of State and a bonus of R500, Sergeant Newey was promoted to full sergeant in his corps and received a special double increment of pay, and Head Gholam Abdullah was also rewarded.

Lieutenant-Colonel Wells, R.E., C.I.E., the Director of the Persian Section, received the thanks of the Secretary of State for his services on the above occasion, and was permitted by the Secretary of State to accept a sword of honour which, together with a firman, had been prepared for presentation to him by the late Nassared-Din Shah. These were presented to him by his successor, the present Shah, in June 1896. Lieutenant-Colonel Wells held charge of the Persian Section throughout the year, his ordinary duties being greatly increased through his having to superintend the building at Teheran of quarters for the numerous staff, and a residence for the Director. He administered his section with his usual success, and my best thanks are due to him.

Mr. W. K. Wood, Assistant Superintendent, held charge of the Meshed Line, which he worked with the best results.

Mr. J. Possmann, who, as Director of the Persian Gulf Section, controlled his charge most satisfactorily, retired on pension on the 19th February 1897. The Department has lost the services of a most conscientious and efficient officer by his retirement, and I take this opportunity of again expressing my warmest thanks for the assistance he has invariably rendered me.

Mr. Sealy, the new Director, expresses his satisfaction with his staff. Those at Karachi during the time of the plague worked in a most praiseworthy manner under the able control of Mr. J. Huntley, Assistant Superintendent.

As mentioned in paragraph 44 of this report, Mr. R. C. Campbell, Assistant Superintendent, by his tact and coolness prevented serious complications during a riot which occurred at Bushire in January 1897. For his services on the occasion he received the thanks of the Secretary of State and was awarded a bonus of R500.

My best thanks are also due to Mr. C. E. J. Twisaday, the senior clerk in my office, who, during my absence in Persia in September and October 1895, and again while I was at the International Telegraph Conference at Buda-Pesth for six weeks during June and July 1896, conducted the current duties of my office, and who, owing to his thorough knowledge on all traffic points, was of the greatest assistance to me. Mr. Twisaday, in communication with Mr. Neilson of the Eastern Telegraph Company, was permitted by the Secretary of State to translate the Intenational Telegraph Service Regulations as revised at Buda-Pesth.

Although the voluminous and ever-increasing account work relating to traffic is dealt with in this office, the administrative accounts of the Department are kept in India, and this separation of the administrative control from the accounts work would undoubtedly lead to unnecessary expenditure, trouble, and perhaps friction, if the Examiner of Accounts did not exercise much tact and discretion in his dealings with the Department. Mr. F. C. Godfrey' who has been for many years the Examiner of our Accounts, has now been transferred to another appointment, and I beg to record my appreciation of his services, and offer him my best thanks for his assistance and courtesy.

INDIA OFFICE,
10th November 1897.

B. T. FFINCH,
Director-in-Chief.

NOTE.—Traffic earnings are primarily worked in francs in accordance with the existing Convention, but in converting the francs into rupees a uniform rate is not adopted. For the receipts from the Indian Department for traffic interchanged with it, a rate of francs 25·21 to the pound sterling is taken; and from sterling to rupees the conversion is made at the latest rate obtained by the Secretary of State for demand bills which is communicated to the Check Office. On the other hand, for the receipts from or payments to the Indo-European Company and Turkey, which are settled in London in sterling, a uniform rate of francs 25 to the pound (in accordance with the Convention) is adopted, and the conversion to rupees made at the average rate of the Secretary of State's drawings for the year, which in the present case is 14·45057494*d*. to the rupee.

Note reviewing the Administration Report of the Indo-European Telegraph Department for the year 1896-97.

The following statement shows the financial results of working the Department during the past five years:—

Year.	Total Capital Outlay.	Gross Receipts.	Expenditure.	Net Receipts.	Percentage of
					Net Receipts to Capital.	Expenditure to Gross Receipts.
1892-93	1,14,59,696	13,02,516	8,64,848	4,37,668	3·82	66·3
1893-94	1,14,46,190	13,50,856	8,60,608	4,90,248	4·28	63·7
1894-95	1,14,42,885	15,70,420	8,26,897	7,43,523	6·50	52·0
1895-96	1,14,89,206	16,70,081	8,17,450	8,52,631	7·42	48·9
1896-97	1,15,49,774	14,84,507	7,71,477	7,13,030	6·17	51·9

The capital account was increased by R60,568. This increase was chiefly due to outlay on construction of quarters for the Director and Signalling Staff at Teheran.

The total earnings of the Department show a decrease of R185,574, as compared with the previous year. This is due to the fact that although there was an increase in Trans-Indian traffic, there was a large falling off in Indian traffic which may be ascribed to the famine and plague in India; owing also to the higher rate of exchange which prevailed during the year, the amount in rupees collected as the equivalent of a franc was less and consequently the earnings as shown in rupees compare unfavourably with the previous year. In miscellaneous revenue there was a decrease of R21,922 owing to less old cable core having been sold in England.

Expenditure shows a decrease of R45,973, due chiefly to a smaller issue of stores for cable and land line repairs and less expenditure on exchange compensation allowance.

The net revenue shows a falling off of R139,601; it yields a dividend of 6·17 per cent. on the capital, against 7·42 per cent. in 1895-96.

The amount of Indian traffic carried by the Indo-European route was again largely in excess of that provided for under the Joint Purse arrangement, being 55·85 per cent. against 50·97 per cent. in the previous year. The Trans-Indian traffic by this route has, however, increased from 15·91 per cent. in 1895-96 to 17 per cent. in the year under review. The percentages of the Indo-European route according to which the Joint Purse is divided are 40·18 for Indian and 19·47 for Trans-Indian traffic.

The general working of the Department has been very satisfactory. Only one interruption, stopping traffic for 20 hours, 53 minutes, occurred, and that was caused by a riot at Dasht Arjin on the Persian Section, when the office was looted by a party of Kash Kooli Turks. The speed and accuracy of transmission were also satisfactory.

On the occasion of the late Shah's assassination there were some disturbances in Southern Persia and Perso-Baluchistan, which are mentioned in the report. Special reports were, however, made of these occurrences at the time and need not be again referred to here.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 19th, 1898.

Unsettled weather has prevailed over India during the week under review. It was at first confined to North-West India, where rain and snow were received on the hills and rain on the neighbouring plains, but later in the week the unsettled conditions spread over a large part of the country where they manifested themselves, not in rain and snow, but in gales and high winds. At the close of the week the weather conditions were most remarkable. Pressure was lowest in North Bengal and highest in Sind and there was a pressure difference over Northern India, which would have been very large for any time of the year and ordinarily only occurs during a period of strongly pronounced hot weather conditions or during the existence of a storm in the rains. This disturbance of the ordinary pressure conditions was not accompanied with much rain. In fact over by far the greater part of the country the weather was clear, but on the evening of the 18th there occurred on the North-West Himalayas the most considerable snowfall of the season, while at the submontane stations of Upper India there had been light rain. The principal cause of rain during the week under review was, however, a storm which appeared over Sind on the 14th. This storm drew the wind into east and north-east over Upper India and between the 14th and 17th occasioned showers of snow and rain over parts of the Punjab, Baluchistan and North-Western Provinces. The temperature changes and the variations of temperature from the normal during the week under review have both been large, due to the passage eastward across India of well marked areas of high and of low temperature.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 13th.—The barometer was falling everywhere. Pressure was highest over the central parts of the country and lowest over the Bay, but the pressure differences were small. The winds were westerly down the Gangetic Valley, northerly over the Bay and easterly over the west of the Peninsula. The mean temperature was higher than usual over Bengal, Burma, the south of the Peninsula and the Indus Valley, and was in slight to large defect of the average elsewhere. The deficiency was between 8° and 9° over Hyderabad and the south of the Central Provinces. Light showers of snow, hail or rain had been experienced over the North-West Himalayas and light rain in Assam and the south of the Peninsula.

Monday, February 14th.—The barometer had fallen briskly to rapidly over Baluchistan and the extreme north-west of India, but had changed little elsewhere. A small but well defined storm had appeared over Sind. The winds were cyclonic over North-West India, but were otherwise little changed. The distribution of temperature relatively to the normal was similar to that reported on the preceding day, except that the area of excessive temperature then noticed over the Indus Valley and the area of deficient temperature over the central districts were advancing eastward. Heaviest rain was falling over the West Punjab and Baluchistan and light showers of hail and snow had again been received over the North-West Himalayas.

Tuesday, February 15th.—The pressure changes had been generally slight. The storm over Sind was still shown and the general conditions of pressure were similar to those reported on the 14th. The barometer read below the normal average everywhere. The winds were irregularly cyclonic in the north-west, and varied a good deal in direction elsewhere. Both the high temperature area over North-West India and the low temperature area over the central parts of the country continued to drift eastward. Showers had been received over the Punjab and the North-West Himalayas.

Wednesday, February 16th.—Pressure had decreased briskly to rapidly over the Punjab, and the depression, noticed during the two preceding days over Sind, had drifted northward to the South Punjab. Elsewhere there had been no important change, and pressure remained low for the time of year generally. The winds were cyclonic in the north-west, northerly over the Bay and variable elsewhere. The area of high temperature from the northwest had extended as for east as Bihar, while the low temperature area overlay the Bay and Burma. Showers had been received over North-West India and the North-West Himalayas.

Thursday, February 17th.—The pressure changes had been generally slight and the depression in the north-west was little changed. Pressure was high over Bombay and low over the western desert and over the Andaman Sea, and the barometer read below the normal average everywhere. The winds were the same as on the 16th. The mean temperature was slightly lower than usual over Burma and the Peninsula, and higher than usual over Northern India. Showers had again been received over North-West India both on the hills and plains.

Friday, February 18th.—The barometer had risen briskly to rapidly over Baluchistan and Sind, but had fallen elsewhere. The change had been very rapid over Northern India, and pressure was very low for the time of year over that area. Pressure was highest over the Bombay Deccan and lowest along the foot of the Himalayas. The winds were northerly along the Bombay Coast and north-westerly to westerly elsewhere. The force was rising and was strong to a gale in the north. The mean temperature remained low in parts of Burma and of the Peninsula, but was generally high for the time of year elsewhere, though a fresh area of low temperature was appearing in the North Punjab.

Saturday, February 19th.—The barometer was rising in the north-west and centre and falling elsewhere. The fall had been rapid to very rapid in the north-east. Pressure was highest in North Bombay and lowest in North Bengal, and the pressure difference was extraordinarily large. Strong north-westerly to westerly winds and gales prevailed over a large part of the country. The mean temperature was low over Burma, high over Bengal and the Gangetic Plain and low again over North-West and Central India, the low temperature area which had begun to appear in the north-west on the 18th having advanced very quickly eastward. A snow storm had occurred over the North-West Himalayas and a few showers of rain over Assam and at some submontane stations in the north-west. Elsewhere the weather, though squally, had been rainless.

Temperature.—As mentioned above the changes of temperature from day to day, as well as the variations of the mean temperature from the normal, have been very large during the week under review. These extensive changes and variations have been attributable to large waves of temperature which have rolled from west to east across the country. These waves have been best marked over Sind, Rajputana and the Central Provinces as will be seen from the following table. Thus on the 13th the mean temperature of the Central Provinces was 6½° below the normal, by the 18th it had risen to 2°·8 above the normal and on the 19th had fallen to 2°·1 below.

The following table gives temperature data for the week :—

The mean temperature of the whole country was below the normal on the 13th, about normal on the 14th, 15th and 16th, above the normal on the 17th and 18th and below again on the 19th, the mean for the whole country for the whole week being ½° above the average. The provincial variations show that the mean temperature of the week was below the normal in Bombay and the Central Provinces, about normal in Burma, the Punjab, Central India, Gujarat and Madras, and above the normal in Bengal, Sind and Rajputana.

Rain.—During the week under review there has been no storm such as that which gave general rain to almost all parts of the country last week, but a small storm in the early part of the week occasioned fair moderate rain over North-West India, and the disturbed weather which prevailed during the latter half of the week was accompanied with a good deal of rain and snow over Northern India and with scattered light showers over other parts of the country. As a result, though the rainfall table at the close shows a much lighter and less extensive fall of rain than was reported last week, a very considerable part of the Indian region reports some rain, though except in the north-west the amounts are generally small. The rainfall table shows that, during the week, rain was received in thirty-two of the rainfall divisions, as compared with forty-nine, last week. Of these thirty-two divisions no less than thirteen had an average rainfall for the week of less than one-tenth of an inch, so that effective and useful rain fell only in nineteen of the rainfall divisions. These nineteen divisions included the Hill and Brahmaputra divisions of Assam, the Bengal Hills, the West, the West Submontane, and the Hill divisions of the North-Western Provinces, all the Punjab divisions, Malabar, South-Central, Madras, the Baluchistan Hills, Western Rajputana, the south division of the East Coast and South Madras. Within these nineteen divisions the average actual rainfall varied from 2·98" in the Punjab Hills, 2·68" in the North Punjab, 2·61" in the Central Punjab and 2·12" in the Submontane Punjab, to 0·11" in the Bengal Hills, and to 0·12" in the south division of the East Coast, while beyond these nineteen divisions the rainfall of the week was actually or practically nil. The third column of the table shows that the rainfall had been heavier than usual in twenty-one of the divisions. In many of these cases the excess was small only amounting to a few hundredths of an inch, but the North Punjab, the Punjab Hills and the Central Punjab had received more than two inches above the normal.

The three concluding columns of the rainfall table show that the winter rainfall, up to date, has been in excess of the normal over the greater part of the country. The exceptions are the Burma divisions, East Bengal and Cachar, deltaic Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, North Bihar, Coorg, Mysore, Sind, Baluchistan, and the south of the East Coast, in all of which divisions the total rainfall from January 2nd to February 19th has been less than usual. In all other places the total rainfall has been more or less in excess. This excess has been actually largest over North-West India, where in some cases it has been more than two inches, but it has been, relatively to the normal, largest over the west of the Peninsula and North Bombay.

During the week under review the largest totals for the week are as follows :—

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 26th February.—Rainfall during the week nil, except in Tinnevelly, where there were light scattered showers. The water-supply is generally insufficient for irrigation, except in Malabar and in parts of the Circars and the Deccan. Agricultural operations continue. The harvest continues, and the outturn of crops is generally middling. Pasture and fodder are growing scanty in parts. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are steady or are slightly easier. There is no improvement in prospects, except in the Markapur taluk of Kurnool district. The numbers on relief in Nellore were—test-workers—1,970 men, 3,207 women, 1,738 children, total 6,915. Gratuitously relieved—(a) in Kitchens—dependants—7 men, 5 women, 137 children, total 149. Others—1 man, 12 women, total 13. (b) Otherwise relieved—2 women, total on gratuitous relief 164. Grand total on relief 7,079.

Bombay.—For week ending 28th February.—The standing crops are in good condition, except in parts of five districts, where they have been damaged by blight, cold, drought, or locusts. Cotton is poor in Dharwar. Late crops are being harvested in seventeen, and preparations are being made for next season in six districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is generally healthy. Prices have risen in one and fallen in nine districts; elsewhere they are stationary. The price of jowari in Sholapur was 17 $\frac{8}{20}$ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—8,001, of whom 7,524 are relief workers and 477 dependants. Of relief workers—2,513 are men, 3,689 women, and 1,322 children. Of dependants—18 are men, 39 women, and 420 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 3,747, of whom 1,897 are men, 1,376 women, and 474 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 28th February.—There was no rain during the week. The general prospects of the spring and other crops on the ground continue favourable, but in Chittagong rain is badly needed. The earlier spring crops are being gathered, and the pressing of sugarcane is going on. Boro or spring rice is doing well, and ploughing for autumn rice and jute is proceeding in parts of Bengal Proper. The collection of opium is going on everywhere in Bihar, but in Chupra and Monghyr it is suffering from the west wind. There is a good supply of fodder everywhere, except in parts of Rangpur and Chittagong as previously reported. In these parts and in parts of Mymensingh there is also a want of good drinking water. Prices continue steady.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 2nd March—No rain of any consequence fell during the week, but the weather was at times cloudy. The spring crops are everywhere in excellent condition and harvesting is becoming general. The sowing of sugarcane and the extraction of opium have commenced. New grains are coming into the market and prices are easier in most districts. Supplies and fodder are ample.

Punjab.—For week ending 28th February.—A fall of half an inch is reported from Sialkot only. Sugarcane is being pressed. Extra spring and autumn sowings have commenced in some places. The crops are generally in good condition and prospects are promising. The stocks of food-grain are sufficient. Hail is reported to have damaged crops in parts of Lahore. Locusts re-appeared in parts of Shahpur, but did no damage. The crops have also been injured by water in some low-lying tracts of Sialkot. Cattle are generally in good condition and are improving in Sialkot. Fodder is scarce in Amritsar and sufficient elsewhere. Prices are falling in Delhi, Lahore, Amritsar, Sialkot, Rawalpindi, Peshawar, Dera Ismail Khan; and are almost unchanged elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 11 to 15½, gram 13 to 14, barley 19, maize 18½ to 23, bulrush millet 18 to 23, great millet 20, and rice 10 to 11 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 28th February.—The weather is generally clear with light clouds occasionally. The nights and mornings are still cold, but the days are growing warmer. The harvesting of winter staples is in full swing in the south of the provinces, and reaping of the earlier crops has commenced in other parts. The present prospects point to a wheat crop of approximately three-fourths of a full average; while the outturn of linseed should be little below normal. Slight damage by frost is reported from the Ramgarh tahsil of Mandla. Ploughing of fields for summer sowings is in progress in portions of Damoh, Mandla, and other districts. The price of juar has fallen still further in some districts and is now selling at 28 seers per rupee in Nimar. Rice is cheaper in the northern districts, but the rate has stiffened somewhat in Seoni and Sambalpur. Wheat shows a tendency to cheapen in most districts and the price of gram has fallen everywhere, the quotation in Chhindwara being 16 seers per rupee. Relief is confined to 125 sick in poor-houses and 93 children in orphanages.

Burma.—For week ending 26th February.—In Lower Burma threshing and winnowing still continue in some districts and have been completed in others. In Upper Burma the cultivation of early wet weather paddy has commenced in Shwebo. The standing crops are generally in good condition. The price of paddy has risen considerably in Mandalay and slightly in Akyab, Rangoon, Bassein, and Henzada; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 29th February.—There was slight rain in Lakhimpur during the week. Rain is wanted in Goalpara. Land is being prepared for summer paddy in the Assam Valley and for low land late rice in Sylhet. Gathering of pulses and mustard; pressing of sugarcane; and pruning of tea are in progress. Prices—common rice—Silchar, Nowgong, and Lakhimpur 10, Sylhet and Dhubri 11½, Gauhati 11, Tezpur 10½, and Sibsagar 13, seers per rupee. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, the Naga Hills, and Khasi and Jaintia Hills.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 2nd March.—MYSORE: Prospects are favourable. Prices have fallen in Tumkur, Mysore, and Hassan; and have risen in Bangalore, Kolar, and Shimoga. Paddy has been harvested in Bangalore and Tumkur and sown in Kolar and Chitaldroog.

COORG: Threshing of rice and ragi (Eleusine coracana) continues. Coffee-picking has been completed. Prices of food-grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 28th February.—BERAR: The weather is getting hot. Cotton-picking is nearing completion. Threshing of jowar and cutting of gram, wheat, and linseed continue. Land is being prepared for the next monsoon crop. Fodder and water are enough for requirements. Prices have fallen in three districts and are stationary elsewhere. Prices—jowar—Akola 23, Amraoti 23, Basim 20, Buldana 23, Ellichpur 23, Wun 24, seers per rupee.

HYDERABAD: Rainfall during week one cent. The spring harvest is progressing in parts. The standing winter rice crop is in fair condition. Prices of grain are almost stationary. Prices—wheat 5½, coarse rice 6¾, and jowari 11⅝, seers per current sicca rupee.

Rajputana.—For week ending 2nd March.—Rainfall—Bikanir State average 21 cents; there were also good showers last week in parganah Bap and slight showers in Dewa parganah of Jaisulmere. The standing crops and prospects are good. Crops have been damaged by frost in parts of Meywar. Agricultural stock is in fair condition in Bikanir, and good elsewhere. Cattle are suffering from foot disease in parts of Meywar. Pasturage or fodder is sufficient. Prices are rising in two States; falling in seven; fluctuating in one; and are steady elsewhere.

Central India.—For week ending 28th February.—No rain fell in Central India during the week. Agricultural operations are in progress in all agencies. The condition of the standing crops and the probable outturn are good. Agricultural stock and pasturage are in good condition. Prices are falling in two districts of Gwalior, in Bundelkhand and Baghelkhand, and in Indore territory; and are steady elsewhere. The opium crops are in fairly good condition in Gwalior, Bhopal, Malwa, and Indore.

Kashmir.—For week ending 1st March.—The weather is cloudy. Prices continue below normal.

Nepal.—For week ending 28th February.—No rain. Spring weather has set in. The crops are in excellent condition, but another shower is necessary.

The total numbers in receipt of relief during the preceding and present weeks were as follows:—

Government of India letter No. 748 R. T., dated 5th October 1897, to the Governments of Madras, Bombay and Bengal, the Director General of Railways and the Consulting Engineer to the Government of India for Railways, Calcutta, and the replies received thereto, regarding the differential treatment of "safety" and "lucifer" matches.

OBSERVATIONS.—In rule III, clauses 7(1) and 7(2), of Appendix A to the open line General Rules of 1895 regarding the carriage of dangerous goods other than explosives, it was laid down that goods marked C in rule 14, Part II, which are not explosives to which the rules for the time being in force under the Indian Explosives Act, 1884, apply, must be packed in strong dust-tight wooden cases having a metal lining; and that no such case should contain more than one pound and no box or package more than ten such cases.

It was, however, represented that the application of these rules to consignments of matches would greatly hamper the trade and prevent the carriage of matches by rail. The rules were accordingly modified, and the following rule was added in Government of India resolution No. 535 R. T., dated 14th July 1896, as rule iii (7) (3) of Appendix A to the General Rules :—

"The outer wooden cases used for the carriage of matches (lucifer and vesuvian) shall be of the following thickness of wood—gross weight of case with contents not exceeding $2\frac{1}{2}$ maunds; top, bottom and sides $\frac{1}{2}$-inch thick, and ends $\frac{3}{4}$-inch thick with two battens $2\frac{1}{2}$-inches wide by $\frac{1}{2}$-inch thick nailed to the sides, or $\frac{7}{8}$-inch thick throughout. Gross weight of case exceeding $2\frac{1}{2}$ maunds, 1 inch thick throughout."

2. Owing to further representations it was subsequently decided in Government of India letter No. 227 R. T., dated 8th March 1897, that the above rule should, for the present, be applied only to matches packed in India, and that imported matches may be carried in the cases in which they are imported provided that these are tin-lined; the rules regarding the size of planks to be used in the construction of the cases being held in abeyance for a period of twelve months from the date of that letter to permit of the question receiving further consideration in the light of the proposals made by the Director General of Railways in his letter No. 2 T., dated 5th January 1897, read above.

3. The Governor General in Council has now considered the views of the Railway Administrations, the Chambers of Commerce and the manufacturers on the rules proposed by the Director General of Railways, and approves of the said rules with the modification suggested in favour of limiting the thickness of the planks to $\frac{7}{8}$-inch instead of 1 inch in the case of boxes exceeding 4 maunds in weight, the revised rules to be applicable both to matches packed in India as well as to imported matches with effect from the 8th March 1898.

RESOLUTION.—In exercise of the powers conferred by section 47(4) of the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, the Governor General in Council is pleased to cancel Government of India resolution No. 535 R. T., dated the 14th July 1896, and to sanction the adoption of the accompanying modifications of the General Rules for working open lines of railway referred to above on all railways whether in British India, in foreign territory or in native states, to which the said rules have been applied.

2. The Governor General in Council further directs that "safety" matches should be held as coming under the definition of "lucifer" matches and that no distinction should be observed between "safety" and other matches in regard to packing and conditions of carriage.

ORDER.—Ordered that this circular and its enclosure be published under a notification in Part I of the Gazette of India, as required by section 47, sub-section (3) of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, and that the General Rules as now further amended be kept for inspection at railway stations as directed by sub-section (6) of the same section.

Ordered, also, that a copy of this circular and of its enclosure be communicated to the Local Governments and Administrations, and to the Officers noted in the margin, for information and guidance; and to the Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Punjab, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Agents to the Governor General in Central India and Baluchistan, the Resident in Mysore, and to the Accountant General, Public Works Department, for information.

[Enclosure to Government of India circular No. 1 Ry., dated 3rd March 1898.]

Corrigendum to the General Rules for working open lines of railway promulgated with Government of India circular No. 6 Ry., dated the 12th March 1895.

Appendix A, Rule III (7) (1).—After the word "lining" add—

The contents being branded, painted or labelled on the outside in legibly printed or written characters.

Appendix A, Rule III (7) (2).—Add a note—

This restriction will not apply to matches (lucifer or vesuvian).

(7) (3) The outer wooden cases used for the carriage of matches (lucifer and vesuvian) shall be of the following thickness of wood—gross weight of case with contents not exceeding 4 maunds in weight, ½-inch thick throughout; gross weight of case with contents exceeding 4 maunds, ¾-inch thick throughout.

PART V.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 11th March, 1898:—

No. 2 OF 1898.

A Bill to further amend the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882; (XV of 1882.) It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1898; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

Amendment of section 4, Act XV, 1882.

2. To section 4 of the said Act the words 'and the expression "Registrar" includes a Deputy Registrar' shall be added.

Substitution of new section for section 8A, Act XV, 1882, as amended by Act I, 1895, s. 4.

3. For section 8A of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, (XV of 1882.) as amended by the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1895, (I of 1895.) the following section shall be substituted, namely:—

Performance of duties of absent Judge.

"8A. (1) During any absence of the Chief Judge or any Judge of the said Court, or during the period for which any Judge is acting as Chief Judge, the Local Government may appoint any person, having the qualifications required by section 7, to act as Chief Judge or Judge of the said Court, as the case may be.

(2) Every person so appointed shall be authorized to perform the duties of the Chief Judge or a Judge of the said Court until the return of the absent Chief Judge or Judge, or of the Judge acting as Chief Judge, or until the Local Government sees cause to cancel the appointment of such acting Chief Judge or Judge, as the case may be."

Amendment of section 9, Act XV, 1882, as amended by Act I, 1895.

4. In section 9, sub-section (1), of the said Act as so amended, after clause (a) the following clause shall be added, namely:—

"(aa) empower the Registrar to hear and dispose of undefended suits and interlocutory applications or matters;".

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

SECTION 8A of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882, which was inserted by the amending Act I of 1895, does not admit of the appointment to officiate as Chief Judge of a person who, though otherwise qualified to be Chief Judge, is not already a Judge of the Court. Clause 3 of the Bill proposes to make such an appointment admissible by substituting a differently worded provision.

2. The fourth clause is intended to amplify section 9 of the Act, as amended in 1895, so as to enable the High Court, when making rules thereunder, to empower the Registrar of the Presidency Small Cause Court to hear and dispose of non-contentious causes and interlocutory applications or matters.

3. The opportunity has been taken by clause 2 of the Bill to add a few words to section 4 of the Act in order to make the expression "Registrar" cover a Deputy Registrar.

Secretary to the Government of India.

2. Clause 1 (3).—We have inserted the 1st July, 1898, as the date of the commencement of the Act in order to make it correspond with the date of the issue of the half-yearly Postal Guide.

3. Clause 2 (d).—We have made a drafting alteration in the definition of "mail-ship" to cover the case of a ship not ordinarily used to carry the mails, but belonging to a company having a mail contract.

4. Clause 3 (a).—We have made an addition here to meet cases in which postal articles cannot be delivered to the addressees.

5. Clause 4.—We have added a paragraph to provide that the expression "letters" includes postcards. We think it inadvisable to attempt an exhaustive definition.

6. Clauses 7 and 8.—Clause 8 (2) (a) of the Bill as introduced appears to us to be out of place. We have, therefore, transposed the provision so as to form paragraph (3) of clause 7, and we have made some drafting alterations in clause 8.

7. Clause 10.—We have added a paragraph saving existing arrangements until altered.

8. Clause 11 (1).—We have added a proviso similar to the proviso to section 28 of the present Act.

9. Clause 20.—We have cut out the word "defamatory" as being too wide, and substituted the words "scurrilous, threatening".

10. Clause 23.—The provisions of paragraph (2) were intended mainly for fiscal purposes and we have, therefore, inserted words of limitation. The third paragraph we have re-cast so as to provide that postal articles sent in contravention of the provisions of section 19 may be opened and destroyed, and that postal articles sent in contravention of the provisions of section 20 may be destroyed. In both cases we have made it clear that the authority of the Post Master General is to be required before the action provided for can be taken.

11. Clause 44.—We have made an alteration so as to provide that sums unclaimed for a year, instead of being actually forfeited, shall no longer be claimable from the Government. This will leave the matter to the discretion of the Government.

12. Clause 47.—We have made an addition in order to provide for the case of excess payments as well as for that of payments to the wrong person.

13. Clause 48.—We have added some words to bar after one year suits in respect of wrong payments which are not covered by sub-clause (b).

14. Clause 50.—We have confined this provision to cases of voluntary withdrawal from duty, and we have provided for punishment with one month's imprisonment as well as with fine.

15. Clause 52.—We have qualified the word "misappropriates" by prefixing "dishonestly", and we have transposed the expression "for any purpose whatsoever" so as to govern the secreting, destroying or throwing away of postal articles.

16. Clauses 53 and 67.—We have made amendments so as to save also the authority of a competent Court acting under, for example, the provisions of section 95 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The language of the two clauses has at the same time been assimilated.

17. Clause 54.—We have omitted as unnecessary sub-clause (c) of the clause in the original Bill, and inserted the word "knowingly" before the words "demands or receives" in the latter part of the provision.

18. Clause 57.—We have added a paragraph to exclude in the cases here dealt with the provisions of section 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which require special certificates before proceedings can be taken in British India for offences committed by certain British subjects elsewhere.

19. Clause 72.—We have confined this provision to the particular cases in which the Postal Department, rather than the public, seems to us to be primarily concerned, or in which we think that prosecutions ought not to be instituted without a guarantee that the expediency of prosecuting has been considered by a high officer of the Department. We have at the same time followed the language of section 196 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

20. Such other alterations as we have made seem to call for no comment.

P. ANANDA CHARLU.

The 10th March, 1898.

As to the power taken under section 26 (1), I recognise the necessity for it to meet an emergency in the first instance, but I do not see why, after the action shall have been taken, the grounds for it should not see the light or the action itself should not run the gauntlet of a judicial investigation if necessary. Under the section the Government themselves will, in any event, be perfectly safe when reasonable or primâ facie grounds exist; and I can realise no reason why anything more than this should be sought to be secured. To hush up an affair or to fight shy of its publication is bad policy, while to give it publicity will be a tangible warning to similar offenders as to what they should avoid. The balance of advantage to the public, for whose protection the power is taken, is in placing even the Government under the reign of law; for, with a bonâ fide case, the position of the Government would be absolutely impregnable. These are some of my reasons for this dissent.

[Cf. XIV of 1866, s. 67.]

Customs-duty paid by the Post Office to be recoverable as postage.

13. When a postal article, on which any duty of customs is payable, has been received by post from any place beyond the limits of British India, and the duty has been paid by the postal authorities at any customs-port or elsewhere, the amount of the duty shall be recoverable as if it were postage due under this Act.

14. In every proceeding for the recovery of any postage or other sum alleged to be due under this Act in respect of a postal article,—

(b) the person from whom the postal article purports to have come, shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to be the sender thereof.

[New. Cf. 38 & 39 Vict., c. 22, s. 8; and Eng. Bill, cl. 9.]

16. (1) The Governor General in Council shall cause postage stamps to be provided of such kinds and denoting such values as he may think necessary for the purposes of this Act.

(2) The Governor General in Council may make rules as to the supply, sale and use of postage stamps.

(3) In particular and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(a) fix the price at which postage stamps shall be sold ;

(b) declare the classes of postal articles in respect of which postage stamps shall be used for the payment of postage or other sums chargeable under this Act ;

(c) prescribe the conditions with regard to perforation, defacement and all other matters subject to which postage stamps may be accepted or refused in payment of postage or other sums ;

(d) regulate the custody, supply and sale of postage stamps ;

(e) declare the persons by whom and the terms and conditions subject to which postage stamps may be sold ; and

(f) prescribe the duties and remuneration of persons selling postage stamps.

[Cf. XIV of 1866, ss. 35 and 37.]

Postage stamps to be deemed to be stamps for the purpose of revenue.

17. Postage stamps provided under section 16 shall be deemed to be stamps issued by Government for the purpose of revenue within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code, and, subject to the other provisions of this Act, shall be used for the prepayment of postage or other sums chargeable under this Act in respect of postal articles, except where the Governor General in Council directs that prepayment shall be made in some other way. (b) regulate covers, form, dimensions, maximum weight and enclosures, and the use of postal articles, other than letters, for making communications.

(3) Notwithstanding anything in sub-section (1),—

(a) any postal article sent by post in contravention of the provisions of section 19 may, under the authority of the Post Master General, if necessary, be opened and destroyed ; and

(b) any postal article sent by post in contravention of the provisions of section 20 may, under the authority of the Post Master General, be destroyed.

Power to deal with postal articles containing goods contraband or liable to duty.

24. Where a postal article, suspected to contain any contraband goods or anything liable to duty, is received for delivery at a post office, the officer in charge of the post office shall send a notice in writing to the addressee inviting him to attend, either in person or by agent, within a specified time at the post office, and shall in the presence of the addressee or his agent, or if the addressee or his agent fails to attend as aforesaid then in his absence, open and examine the postal article :

Provided, first, that, if the Director General so directs in the case of any post office or class of post offices, the officer in charge of the post office shall call in two respectable persons as witnesses before he opens a postal article in the absence of the addressee or his agent :

Provided, secondly, that in all cases a postal article, after being opened under this section, shall be delivered to the addressee, unless it is required for the purpose of any further proceeding under this or any other law or enactment for the time being in force, and that the opening of the postal article and the circumstances connected therewith shall be immediately reported to the Post Master General :

Provided, thirdly, that nothing in this section shall prevent the detention of parcels, received by post from any place beyond the limits of British India, at the customs-port or other place at which they are received, and the opening of parcels so received by the Customs-authorities for the purpose of levying any duty of customs.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, February 26th, 1898.

The weather, during the past week, has been marked by large pressure differences and strong winds, and little or no rainfall. The most disturbed day was the 23rd, when a small depression lay over the north-east angle of the Arabian Sea, while pressure was high over the Punjab and Rajputana. On this day there was a pressure difference of 0·326" between Peshawar and Veraval, and north-easterly to easterly gales were blowing over a large part of North-West India. There has been practically no rain throughout the week, yet notwithstanding this absence of rain the general temperature of the country has been very largely below the normal average. This deficiency in the mean temperature was most marked on the 20th, when, in the Central Provinces the mean temperature was 10°, in the North-Western Provinces 8°, and in the Punjab 7½° lower than usual.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 20th.—Pressure had risen over the eastern and fallen over the western half of India. The changes were considerable to large. Pressure was highest over the east of Rajputana, Central India, the west of the Central Provinces and the Bombay Deccan, and was low over North Bengal and Central Burma. The winds were westerly to north-westerly over Northern India, northerly over the Bay and the Peninsula, and variable over the central parts of the country. The force was strong to a gale. The mean temperature exceeded the normal over Lower Sind, the south of the Peninsula and Central Burma, but was low for the time of year elsewere, the deficiency being over 10° over the central parts of the country and Eastern Rajputana. Light showers had been received at a few places in the extreme north-east, but elsewere the weather was dry.

Monday, February 21st.—The barometer showed a slight fall in parts of Bombay, but elsewhere pressure had increased. Pressure was relatively low over North Bombay, otherwise barometric readings decreased fairly steadily from a high pressure area over the Punjab to a low pressure area over Central Burma. The winds were generally unchanged in direction, but were lighter in force. The mean temperature was low for the time of year except over Sind, the south of the Peninsula and Tenasserim. A few trifling showers was the only rainfall reported.

Tuesday, February 22nd.—Pressure had increased everywhere and, over Sind, exceeded the normal average, though in all other parts of the country there was still a large to considerable deficiency. Pressure was highest over Sind and low over the Bay and the south-east of the Arabian Sea. The winds were still little changed, blowing generally from the westward in the north and from the northward elsewhere. The heat was slightly excessive in the south of the Peninsula, but in all other places the mean temperature was more or less below the normal average. One or two trifling showers was all the rainfall reported.

Wednesday, February 23rd.—The barometer had fallen slightly at Veraval and Bombay, but had continued to rise elsewere. Pressure was highest over the Punjab and lowest over the south-east of the Bay, but off the Konkan and Kathiawar coasts pressure was almost equally low, and the pressure differences over North Bombay and Rajputana were very large. The wind had shifted to north-east, east, and south-east over the central parts of the country and the centre and west of the Peninsula, but elsewere the general directions were unchanged. The force was strong over parts of North-Western, Central and Western India. The mean temperature was more or less in defect of the normal except at a few places in the south of the Peninsula. There had been no rain.

Thursday, February 24th.—The barometer had risen very slightly over parts of Burma and of the Peninsula, and had fallen elsewhere—most over North-West India. The general conditions of pressure were the same as on the preceding day, but the pressure differences over North Bombay and Rajputana were slighter. The winds were practically unaltered. The mean temperature slightly exceeded the normal average over the Konkan and the Bombay Deccan, but was more or less below the average elsewhere. There had been practically no rain.

Friday, February 25th.—Pressure had increased over a large part of the Peninsula and of Burma, as well as along the foot of the Himalayas, but had decreased elsewhere. Pressure was highest over North-West India and lowest over the south-east of the Bay. The winds were north-westerly and westerly over Northern India, northerly over the Bay, and south-easterly to easterly elsewhere. The force was light or moderate. The mean temperature was higher than usual over part of Bombay and of the Central Provinces and over Burma, but remained more or less in defect elsewhere. There had been no rain.

Saturday, February 26th.—The barometer had risen over parts of Burma and of North-West India, and had fallen elsewhere. The general conditions of pressure were unchanged. The wind directions were also practically unchanged. The heat was greater than usual over Sind, over part of Bombay and of the Central Provinces, and over Burma, but elsewhere the mean temperature continued in defect. There was still no rain of any importance.

Temperature.—The sudden fall of temperature which occurred practically all over the country at the close of last week left the mean temperature lower than usual almost everywhere. These temperature conditions held steadily throughout the week under review. In part of Burma, in the south of the Peninsula, in parts of Bombay and of the Central Provinces and in Sind, at different times during the week, the heat was greater than usual, but in all other places the mean temperature was steadily and uninterruptedly low for the time of year, and over the central parts of the country, the Gangetic Plain and

Bengal the deficiency was very large. The following table gives the temperature data for the week:—

Province.	February 1898.							Mean variation of week.
	20th.	21st.	22nd.	23rd.	24th.	25th.	26th.
Burma	+0·9	—1·4	—3·7	—3·3	—1·3	+1·5	+2·0	—0·8

Mean for whole of India	—5·0	—4·5	—4·1	—4·2	—4·6	—2·8	—1·9	—3·9

The above shows that on each day of the week, the mean temperature of the whole country was lower than usual. Between the 20th and 24th the deficiency was fairly steady between 4° and 5°, but on the 25th the amount of the deficiency decreased to 2°·8 and on the 26th to 1°·9. The provincial variations show that the mean temperature of the week was about normal in Burma, but was below the normal, by amounts varying from 1°·5 in Bombay to 6°·2 in the North-Western Provinces, in all other parts of the country. In the beginning of the week the day temperatures, relatively to the normal, were generally lower than the night temperature, but in the latter part of the week this condition was reversed, and the principal part of the deficiency of temperature was attributable to the lowness of the night temperatures.

Rain.—The week under review has been more completely rainless than any previous week during the present cold weather. The rainfall table at the close shows, that only in one division has the average actual rainfall of the week been of any importance and even in that case, viz., Assam (Surma) the actual fall for the division averaged only 0·12". In eight other divisions, viz., Arakan, the Assam Hills, the Brahmaputra Valley, the Bengal Hills, the North-Western Provinces Hills, the Submontane and West Punjab, and the south division of Madras trifling showers were received at different times; but in no division did the rainfall of the week average one-tenth of an inch. The rainfall was of course less than the average everywhere, but the anticipated rainfall of the present week is so small, except perhaps on the Baluchistan Hills and the North-West Himalayas, that the general conditions of the seasonal rainfall are the same as those described last week. With the present week the winter rainfall season comes to a close, and the three last columns of the rainfall table, at the end of the summary, show that the rainfall of the two months, January and February 1898, has been in defect of the normal by 20% or more in the following thirteen divisions, viz., all the Burma divisions except Central Burma, East Bengal, Deltaic Bengal, Orissa, Chota Nagpur, North Bihar, Coorg, Mysore, Sind and Baluchistan; it has been normal, i.e., has varied by less than 20% from the normal average in the following nine divisions, viz., Central Burma, Cachar, the Assam Hills, the Brahmaputra Valley, Central Bengal, the Hills of the North-Western Provinces, the Hills of the Punjab, Berar, and the south division of the East Coast, and has been more or less excessive elsewhere. The excess relatively to the normal was large over parts of North-West India and of the Peninsula and was greatest in Gujarat.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 5th March.—Rainfall during the week nil. The water-supply is generally insufficient for irrigation, except in Malabar and in parts of the Circars and the Deccan. Agricultural operations continue. The standing crops are in fair condition in Ganjam, Vizagapatam, and South Canara and in parts of other districts, but are generally suffering from want of rain. The harvest continues and the outturn of crops is generally middling. Pasture and fodder are growing scanty in parts. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are generally slightly easier, but the prices of dry grains are approaching or higher than scarcity rates in Kistna, Nellore, and North Arcot. There is no improvement in prospects. The numbers on relief in Nellore were—test workers—1,939 men, 3,054 women, 2,046 children, total 7,039. Gratuitously relieved—(a) in Kitchens—dependants—6 men, 6 women, 123 children, total 135. (b) Otherwise relieved—2 women, total on gratuitous relief 137. Grand total on relief 7,176.

Bombay.—For week ending 7th March.—The standing crops have been injured by high winds, frost, or locusts in parts of Sind. The harvesting of the late crops continues in fourteen districts and preparations for next season in five districts. Cotton-picking is progressing in seven districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is generally healthy. Prices have risen in three and fallen in six districts, and are stationary elsewhere. The price of jowari in Sholapur was 18⅝ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works, including dependants, was—Sholapur 7,682, of whom 7,257 are relief workers and 425 dependants. Of relief workers—2,408 are men, 3,626 women, and 1,223 children. Of dependants—16 are men, 34 women, and 375 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 2,824, of whom 1,189 are men, 1,241 women, and 394 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 7th March.—There was slight rain over a considerable portion of the Province during the week. The prospects of all standing crops continue favourable, but in Chittagong, where no rain has fallen, rain is wanted for the spring crops. The harvesting of the spring crops is progressing, and the crushing of sugarcane is going on. In Bihar the collection of opium is proceeding, but in parts it has suffered from the west wind. Lands are being ploughed for early rice and jute in several parts of Bengal Proper. Prices are steady. Scarcity of fodder and drinking water still exists in parts of Rangpur and Chittagong.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 9th March.—Light rain has fallen in some districts. Prospects of the spring crops are good. Harvest operations and opium collections continue. Sugarcane-planting is progressing and extra crops are being sown. Markets are fully supplied. Hail fell in tahsil Khajuha of the Fatehpur district but did no damage. Fodder is sufficient. Prices are generally easier.

Punjab.—For week ending 7th March.—Rain has fallen in the Rawalpindi and Peshawar districts. Harvesting of the rapeseed crop is in progress. Sowings of extra spring crops and ploughings for autumn crops have commenced in some districts. Crops are generally in good condition and prospects are promising. The recent rain has benefited the standing crops in Rawalpindi and Peshawar. The stocks of food-grain are sufficient. The gram crop is reported to have been damaged by high winds in certain districts. Hail fell in parts of Peshawar and damaged the crops to a certain extent. Locusts appeared in parts of Shahpur but did no damage. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is said to be sufficient in all districts. Prices are rising in Dera Ismail Khan; are unchanged in Hissar, Delhi, and Lahore; and are falling elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 12 to 15½, gram 14 to 16, bulrush millet 18 to 23, maize 18 to 23$\frac{1}{16}$, great millet 20, and rice 11 to 12 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 7th March.—The weather is generally clear. Four cents of rain fell in Saugor during the week. The nights and mornings are cool but the days are getting warmer. The harvesting of spring crops is being pushed on. Prospects are unaltered, but slight damage has been caused by insects in Chanda and by frost in Mandla. Sugarcane-pressing and planting are approaching completion. Ploughing of fields for summer sowings is in progress in portions of Seoni, Bilaspur, and other districts. Prices show a general downward tendency, and the rate for gram has fallen considerably almost everywhere. The price of juar has advanced somewhat in Damoh, Narsinghpur, and Nimar, but continues easy. Relief is confined to 57 children in Balaghat orphanage.

Burma.—For week ending 5th March.—In Lower Burma threshing of wet weather paddy is nearly completed. In Upper Burma sowing or transplanting of dry weather crops continues, and harvesting of cotton, tobacco and peas is in progress. Other miscellaneous crops are generally in good condition. The price of paddy has risen largely in Rangoon, and slightly in Akyab, Prome, Myaungmya, and Thaton and has fallen considerably in Toungoo and slightly in Thayetmyo; elsewhere it is stationary.

Assam.—For week ending 8th March.—Slight rainfall in the Surma Valley, Upper Assam, Naga Hills, and Khasi and Jaintia Hills. Rain is wanted in Goalpara. Preparation of land for early rice in Assam Valley and for low land winter rice in Sylhet is in progress. Gathering of pulses and mustard; pressing of sugarcane; and pruning of tea are nearly finished. Prices—common rice—Silchar and Tezpur 10½, Sylhet 11¾, Dhubri and Sibsagar 12, Gauhati and Dibrugarh 10, and Nowgong 9, seers per rupee. Fodder is scarce in Cachar, Naga Hills, and Khasi and Jaintia Hills. Water is scanty in parts of Nowgong.

Mysore and Coorg.—For week ending 9th March.—MYSORE: Standing crops are in good condition. Prices have fallen slightly in Tumkur and Hassan; and have risen in Kadur. Paddy has been sown in parts of Bangalore, Tumkur, and Chitaldroog.

COORG: Threshing of rice and ragi (Eleusine coracana) continues. Prices of food-grains are stationary. Water and fodder for cattle are sufficient.

Berar and Hyderabad.—For week ending 7th March.—BERAR:—The weather is getting hot. Picking of cotton and threshing of jowar have been almost completed. Cutting of wheat, gram, and linseed is in progress. Ploughing of fields for next monsoon crop continues. Fodder and water are sufficient. Prices are almost stationary. Letter from the Comptroller and Auditor General, No. 2352, dated the 28th February 1898, submitting a report on the Cash Balances and Resource Operations of the Indian Treasuries for the twelve months ending September 1897.

No. 2352, dated Calcutta, the 28th February 1898.

From—The Comptroller and Auditor General,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I have the honour to submit my report on the Cash Balances and Resource Operations of our Treasuries for the twelve months from October 1896 to September 1897.

Minimum Balances.

2. The following Table gives the estimated Minimum Balances for all India for each month, from October 1897 to September 1898, and their distribution between the District Treasuries of the several Provinces and the Reserve Treasuries and Presidency Banks. The usual statements, marked A and B, showing the comparison of these balances with the estimates of previous years, are appended at the end. In the table the total balances at the Presidency towns have been shown as usual in a lump sum in a separate column :—

3. In consequence of the unusually heavy pressure on our cash balances during the last year it was necessary to reduce them at most of the Treasuries to the lowest possible level, and it was found that we could in many cases go below the amounts which have hitherto been considered as the minima, while in others, we could not go down even to the level of the existing minima. The actual balances of the past year will thus be a good guide for the calculation of the minimum balances required in future years. For the next year the minimum balances for District Treasuries have been estimated by most of the Accountants General on the usual plan, and I have accordingly corrected them with reference to the actuals of the past year. The balances for all India have been estimated by me on the principle explained in previous reports.

5. The year under report was specially remarkable for its unprecedentedly low balances. The lowest point reached was 55 lakhs lower than the least amount, with which it was hitherto considered possible to work the treasuries with safety. This excessive pressure on the balances was brought about by the loss of revenue and the increased expenditure consequent on the unique combination of disasters, viz., plague, famine, earthquake and war, which afflicted the country.

6. The year opened with a balance lower than that of the previous year by 118 lakhs. Very soon after, the effects of the famine began to be felt, and revenue collections fell off, while the opening of relief works added considerably to the expenditure. Almost simultaneously plague broke out in the Bombay Presidency, and the restriction of trade due to quarantine regulations reduced the Railway, Customs and other revenues, while special measures taken to prevent the spread of the disease involved extra expenditure. The balances went down quickly, and by the end of November they fell below 800 lakhs hitherto considered to be the lowest limit of safety. The investment of 200 lakhs of the Currency Reserve, authorised by Act XXI of 1896, enabled Government at this crisis to tide over the difficulties for a time. But famine and plague were increasing and the balances grew worse and worse every month compared with the previous year. Then came the earthquake of June, involving loss of Railway revenue and extra expenditure in repairing damages. And the money market became so tight in consequence of the dullness of the export trade on account of quarantine for plague and failure of crops that it was necessary to reduce the estimated loan of 400 lakhs to 300 lakhs, and to postpone it from July to August. Then came the military disturbances on the North-Western Frontier, necessitating very heavy expenditure on military operations. These unfavourable circumstances rendered it imperative to reduce the programme of Capital Expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works by 100 lakhs; but all these measures were insufficient to keep the treasuries in funds, and in September the Secretary of State was compelled to suspend his drawings of Council Bills to afford relief to the Indian treasuries.

7. The details given in the statement contained in para. 4 show that the balances in the hands of the Presidency Banks were not reduced so long as it was possible to meet the pressure by a reduction of the balances in the District Treasuries, and that in fact they were generally higher than at the corresponding date in the previous year.

9. The details of the Inter-Provincial remittances are given in the statement marked C annexed to this report. The most striking features of the statement are: (1) a large increase in the transfers through the Currency Department, and (2) a decrease in specie remittances and transfers through Banks. With low balances it became necessary very frequently to move funds at short notice, and the expedient of transfers through currency chests was extensively employed, numerous temporary chests being opened for the purpose. That over 1,250 treasuries and sub-treasuries in the empire could be worked with less than 8 crores, was chiefly due to the assistance thus afforded.

10. The decrease in specie remittances and transfers through Banks was a natural consequence of the adverse circumstances of the year, which diminished the Government surpluses and depressed trade. The transfers between Bengal and India in the accounts of the Bank of Bengal are only technically remittances, and the decrease of 390 lakhs under this head from the previous year was caused partly by a falling off in Opium, Railway and Customs revenues and partly by smaller issues of supply bills from Calcutta on District Treasuries.

11. Turning now to the table in para. 8 it will be seen that the comparison with the previous year, even excluding the transfers between Bengal and India, referred to in the preceding paragraph, discloses large differences in all the provinces except Burma and Assam. This resulted from the peculiar circumstances of the year mentioned in para. 5 having injuriously affected every province by either reducing its surplus or increasing its need for help from other provinces, as well as from the variations in payments of Council Bills and Loan transactions. The worst results are shewn by the Central Provinces, the North-Western Provinces, and Bengal which ordinarily supply funds to India at Calcutta, while this year the first two had to draw largely upon other Provinces and the last supplied much less than usual. Punjab required more than the usual amount of help from the other provinces on account of the war expenditure and famine, while famine reduced the surplus of Madras which is usually remitted to Calcutta and Bombay. Calcutta had to pay 773 lakhs less in Council Bills than in the previous year. It also received 200 lakhs from the currency investment and 115 lakhs from the Famine Charitable Relief Fund for Remittance Transfer Receipts issued on other provinces and remitted to Bombay only 26 lakhs against 220 lakhs in the previous year. But all these improvements were counterbalanced by a large falling off in the remittances from other provinces, by smaller receipts on account of the new loan as compared with the previous year, by a special payment on account of the withdrawal of the deposit of the East Indian Railway Provident Fund in the Post Office Savings Banks and by payments on account of the war and the discharge of the 3½ per cent. loan of 1893-94. Bombay, notwithstanding the large falling off in the remittances received by it from other provinces and its heavy expenditure on account of the famine, was able to pay its way only because it had to pay a very much smaller amount of Council Bills than in the previous year.

12. The variations due to each of the above-mentioned causes are best explained by the following table :—

13. The following statement gives the usual particulars of the large Foreign Remittances, as well as the more important of the Local Remittances, including Supply Bills, local and foreign. They illustrate the remarks contained in the foregoing paragraphs, and show further that larger demands were made by the District Treasuries upon their Head-quarters both in Madras and Bombay than in previous years. The net currency remittances were unusual in the cases of Allahabad and Lahore which ordinarily remit and receive specie respectively :—

15. The following points in the Resource operations of the year under report may be specially noticed.

16. In India the requirements in Government rupees of the Hyderabad Political Treasury to meet the increased demand arising out of the troops in the Secunderabad Military District being paid in Government currency, could be supplied, without recourse to actual remittance, by means of the receipts on account of Remittance Transfer Receipts issued to the Hyderabad Contingent. The Treasury was thus enabled not only to supply all its wants, but to make over 5 lakhs of surplus coin to the local branch of the Bank of Bengal. Five lakhs of Bhopali rupees were sent from Bhopal to Bombay Mint for coinage in December 1890. The remaining Bhopali coins in the Treasury, amounting to 2 lakhs, have been exchanged for Government rupees at the Native State Treasury under the State's Notification calling in such coin.

17. In the Central Provinces the demand for Foreign Supply Bills revived and 14 lakhs were drawn during the year on Calcutta and Bombay. The Bank of Bengal took over 31 lakhs from the currency chest at Nagpore against 25 in the previous year. Owing to the prevailing scarcity no remittances of coin were made from the currency chests to other provinces, but 104 lakhs were received.

18. In Burma the total amount of local Bills sold on the Bassein Currency Agency was 5 lakhs less than last year, the decrease being due to shortness of funds there in January and February. On the other hand, Bills on Henzada Currency Agency increased by about 10 lakhs. The Mandalay Treasury continued to the depôt for the supply of coin to the treasuries dependent on it, and was the only permanent Currency Agency in Upper Burma. The issue of local Supply Bills showed the large increase of 39 lakhs, of which 23 were due to larger demands at Mandalay alone. Remittances of whole rupees aggregating 18 lakhs were made to Upper Burma during the year. There was a decrease in the payment of Foreign Bills, due to the smaller issues of Remittance Transfer Receipts by the Vizagapatam Treasury in payment of the Bills of the Bombay-Burma Trading Corporation, Rangoon, for wooden sleepers supplied to the East Coast Railway, but this was counterbalanced by the payment of Remittance Transfer Receipts connected with Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund. The total surplus transferred to India amounted to 2,29 lakhs as against 2,59½ lakhs last year.

19. In Assam there was an increase in specie remittances from India and Foreign Supply Bills issued, while there was a considerable falling off in the payment of Supply Bills drawn by Bengal. The drawings of Bengal show a decrease in each year since 1892-93. The restriction in the issue of Bills formed the subject of a special enquiry in connection with a complaint received from the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce through the Government of Bengal during this year. Steps have now been taken to secure as free an issue in future as possible for supplying the full requirements of the trade. The receipts of coin from Bengal were 6 lakhs from the Rungpore and 7 lakhs from the Chittagong Currency chests.

20. In Bengal the remittances to Calcutta decreased by 106 lakhs in Supply Bills and by 23 in transfers through the branches of the Bank of Bengal, while there was a small increase of 3 in Bank Post Bills. The large falling off was due to expenditure on Famine Relief and Railways. The remittances to the Opium-paying treasuries were 71 lakhs more than in the preceding year, of which 13 were sent in specie and 58 were supplied from the local Currency chests, the increase being due to requirements on account of the famine in the districts of the Patna division. The remittances made to the several centres of trade to facilitate the drawing of Supply Bills decreased by 48 lakhs, as the surpluses available were smaller. There were also decreases of about 7 and 5 lakhs, respectively, in the issue of Foreign Supply Bills on Treasuries in Assam and the Central Provinces, as compared with the transactions of last year.

21. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh there was an increase of 4,34 lakhs in the total volume of local remittances, namely, 3,15 lakhs in the remittances of whole rupees, 1,12 lakhs in Currency Notes, and 7 lakhs in small silver and copper. The demand for Supply Bills on local treasuries also increased by 58 lakhs, while there was an increase again in the amount of Foreign Supply Bills issued.

22. In the Punjab there was a brisk demand for Supply Bills on Bombay and Karachi, and the largest sales took place at Delhi, Simla, Rawalpindi, Dehra Ismail Khan, Peshawar, Mooltan and Sialkot. The amount of local coin remittances showed a decrease compared with last year owing to the increase in the supplies obtained by the issue of Bills.

23. In Madras the Bank of Madras continued to utilize a part of the surplus district balances, but the amount taken over by it for its several Branches fell off by nearly 43 lakhs. The issue of Supply Bills and wire transfers on District Treasuries for Cotton Presses had also to be restricted, as the net surplus of District Treasuries fell short of that of the previous year by over 2,22 lakhs mainly on account of famine.

24. In Bombay a special transfer of 50 lakhs was received from the Currency Department after the investment of two crores. The remittances from the Reserve Treasury to the District Treasuries were about 23 lakhs more than in the previous year, chiefly due to the demands of the Famine Districts and to the heavy drawings of the Postal Department in consequence of a run on the Savings Banks. There was a better demand for Bills at Aden, Cutch, Rajkot and Ratnagiri, and the treasuries at Poona, Ahmednagar, Bijapur and Sholapur were able to draw largely on Bombay, thereby reducing the actual remittances to those Districts to meet famine demands. The issue of Bills on Ahmednagar, Belgaum, Bijapur and Sholapur was stopped by the end of October, when it was known that the crops there had failed entirely. The slackness of trade on account of plague considerably reduced the drawings on Dharwar, Dhulia and Kanara. There was a considerable increase in the amount of Bills issued by India and the Punjab, and the issue of Bills for 7½ lakhs by the Central Provinces was a new feature of the year.

Small Silver and Copper Coin.

25. Statement D annexed to this report shews the absorption of these coins in the different Provinces during the year under review and in the three preceding years. The absorption of each kind of coin increased considerably, as compared with any one of the previous years, especially in the Provinces most severely affected by the famine. The increase was mainly due to the payment of wages to the large numbers of men employed on Famine Relief Works and to the money dole of gratuitous relief in the affected Districts. Nagpur and Lahore continued to receive large amounts of copper on account of the earnings of the Bengal-Nagpur and the North-Western Railways, respectively. The special features of the several Provinces are noted below.

26. In India the circulation decreased owing chiefly to large receipts of Railway earnings at Ajmere and to the completion of the Ujjain-Bhopal Railway. In the Central Provinces small silver coin of the value of R1,69,000 and copper coin of the value of R2,70,000 were absorbed in excess of the previous year in connection with Famine Relief Works. In Burma the absorption of small silver increased by 31 thousands in the Lower Provinces, due to a bumper rice crop, and 112 thousands in the Upper Provinces, due to large remittances to famine-stricken districts. The total remittances of small silver and copper coin to Upper Burma, since the annexation, have amounted to 29 and 6 lakhs of Rupees, respectively. In Assam the demand for small coin exists chiefly in connection with the payment of wages in Tea Estates, the Assam-Bengal Railway and the Military and Public Works Departments. The issues from the treasuries had to be restricted to some extent owing to the shortness of supplies to this Province necessitated by the heavy supplies to other provinces, where the demands were more imperative in connection with famine. In Bengal the Small Coin depôts are all practically closed having had no transactions since 1893. The large absorption is accounted for by the requirements of Famine Relief Works, Tea Gardens, Railways, and the Trade. In the North-Western Provinces the consumption was exceptionally high particularly in single pice in the districts affected by famine. It was indeed a matter of considerable difficulty to meet their requirements. Some of the single pice is now returning from circulation to the treasuries. In the Punjab the increase in the absorption of small silver was chiefly due to Famine Relief Works, and in a minor degree to the concentration of troops on the Frontier; the decrease under copper coin is ascribed to the return to treasuries of coins collected by agents following relief camps, but the explanation does not appear to be sufficient. In Madras the local circulation rose on account of the opening of Famine Relief Works and would have risen higher but for the restriction of issues in the non-affected to meet the more urgent demands of the affected districts. Trichinopoly collected as usual large amounts from the South Indian Railway, but these had to be supplemented by large remittances from other provinces. In Bombay famine accounts for the increased circulation of all denominations of small silver and single pice.

Return of the number of persons in receipt of relief in districts affected by scarcity.

NOTE.—The figures are compiled from the Local Gazettes, and give the District details of the Provincial totals published weekly in the Crop and Weather Summary in the Gazette of India.

Non-labouring children and other dependants of relief workers are classed as on relief works when distinguished in the local returns from persons gratuitously relieved in poor-houses or at their homes.

while on service in Mombassa (7,4) and the smaller charge for Exchange Compensation Allowance (19,5), and in the opposite direction the under-estimate of good-conduct pay (4,8) and of the strength of the troops (19,0). The excess under the same sub-head, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due chiefly to the increased rate of pay sanctioned for non-commissioned officers and men in G. G. O. 670 of 1895 having been drawn for the whole year, against 8 months in 1895-96, but this increase was partly counterbalanced by less payments of Exchange Compensation Allowance. The excess under Annual Grant-in-aid of half mounting was also due to the G. G. O. quoted above, the allowance admissible to recruits enlisted on and after 1st July 1895 having under it been drawn on the completion of the first year's service, instead of after 18 months' service as formerly. Under Hutting money the decrease as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to less special grants having been sanctioned for construction and repairs of lines of native soldiers. Under Reserve Forces the saving was due to fewer reservists than anticipated having been trained. Under Special Services the excess, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to the charges on account of special services and expeditions having been charged under Miscellaneous Services.

Commissariat Charges.

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
525,0	Establishment	534,2	511,3	512,4
1,520,5	Supplies	1,553,0	1,657,2	1,763,9
773,7	Services	1,475,3	1,336,7	1,166,7
260,2	Transport Branch	325,2	338,1	457,6
3,079,4	TOTAL	3,887,7	3,843,3	3,900,6

299. The bulk of the mobilization charges were provided for under Special Services, while they have in the accounts been taken under the ordinary heads, so that it is necessary to recast the figures as below to enable even a general comparison of the Budget and actuals to be made:—

	Budget.	Accounts.
Establishment (excluding Mobilization)	534,2	505,2
Supplies (ditto)	1,553,0	1,742,2
Services (ditto)	876,9	863,1
Transport Branch(ditto)	301,5	338,4
Special Services	278,4	247,1
Mobilization	343,7	204,6
TOTAL	3,887,7	3,900,6

The principal variations are thus shown to be the increased charge for supplies (189,2) and the saving against mobilization (139,1). The former is due to the extra charge for compensation for dearness of Provisions (160,0) and of Forage (82,3) against which there are savings under other heads, especially under "Provisions for Natives" (24,7), partly owing to the replacement of troops in the Chin Hills by Military Police (19,1), and partly owing to an over-estimate of the rates for food-supplies in Madras. Under Services and Transport Branch, there are also heavy extra charges owing to the rise in the price of food (97,9 and 59,5), but they are wiped out in the one case and reduced in the other by savings under other sub-heads, especially in respect of the movement of troops and conveyance of stores by sea and railway (80,0), and in consequence of smaller charges for purchase of animals (20,0).

Of the excess of 12,9 under this head, 11,2 was reported to the Government of India by the Accountant General, Military Department, in his letter No. 2571, dated 16th November 1897.

300. The increase of 821,2 as compared with the actuals of the previous year was chiefly due to higher prices for articles of food-supply for both men and animals, which resulted also in larger payments of compensation to native troops for dearness of provisions and forage, to the large expenditure on mobilization arrangements and to the inclusion under this head of the charges on Special Services, which in 1895-96 were compiled under Miscellaneous Services, counterbalanced by savings due to the withdrawal of troops from the Chin Hills and of two regiments of Madras Infantry from Burma without relief, and to less movements of troops and store.

301. The details of the expenditure under Establishment excluding mobilization charges, are given below :—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
52,0	Supervising Staff	54,6	51,4	52,0
243,2	Executive Establishment	246,1	238,0	236,9
44,8	Ambulance Transport	46,4	45,5	43,2
167,6	Subordinate Establishment	175,3	165,3	161,5
14,6	Khedda Establishment	8,5	8,7	9,9
2,8	Other Heads	3,3	2,4	1,7
525,0		534,2	511,3	505,2

Under Executive Establishment the saving was due chiefly to insufficient deduction having been made in the Budget for probable savings (2,6), to less Exchange Compensation Allowance (3,3), and to smaller charges for contingencies and advertisements (2,3). Under Ambulance Transport the saving was due to short strength of bearers. Under Subordinate Establishment the saving was due principally to less cattle establishment owing to short strength of transport animals in Burma and certain Indian stations (8,9), and to reduction of surplus camels returned from the Chitral Relief Force (2,8).

302. Under Supplies (again excluding mobilization charges from Budget and Accounts) the details are as follows :—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
682,3	Provisions for Europeans	707,1	725,8	701,2
174,7	Provisions for Natives	190,3	153,2	155,6
	Compensation to Natives—

28,9	(b) for dearness of forage	26,6	66,2	107,8
20,0	Purchase of Reserve Stock	21,3	19,2	16,1
349,5	Malt Liquor purchased locally	360,0	360,0	353,3
8,1	Rum	7,4	6,8	7,4
1,7	Dairy Farms	1,0	2	2,8
...	Contingent Expenses	5	2	...
—2,5	Deduct,—Value of Supplies to other Departments .	—6,8	—9,4	—7,6
1,520,5		1,553,0	1,657,2	1,742,2

The saving under Provisions for Europeans is the net outcome of a saving in the Madras Command (28,9) and of increased charges in the other Commands, especially the Punjab (15,4), due to higher prices of food. Charges in Madras remained at about the same figure as in 1895-96, and the extra provision of about 3 lakhs made for them in the Budget was not required. Under Provisions for Natives the saving also occurred chiefly in the Madras Command (34,5), and was due partly to the withdrawal of troops from the Southern Chin Hills and their replacement by Military Police (19,1), and to the withdrawal of certain Madras regiments from Burma without relief (5,9), but partly also to an over-estimate. The charges in the Bombay Command were in excess of the Budget (10,9) chiefly owing to higher rates of money compensation paid to troops and followers in the Quetta district, owing to scarcity (9,3), but against this there was a saving in the Bengal Command (10,7) chiefly owing to lower prices at Kohima and Manipur. The excesses under Compensation to Natives for dearness of provisions and for dearness of forage, both as compared with the Budget and the actuals of the previous year, were due to high prices. The excess under Dairy Farms was due to loss in working the dairy farms at Allahabad and Jubbulpore, and to expenditure on the model farm and school of instruction at Umballa (1,3) not provided for in the Budget.

303. Under Services, excluding Special Services and, as before, Mobilization, the following details are supplied :—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
42,3	Hire of Transport	53,9	46,9	33,4
18,2	Sea and Inland Water Charges	29,4	20,9	18,7

Commissariat Charges—concluded.

Under the first three heads the saving was due to fewer movements of European and Native troops and to the conveyance of smaller consignments of stores, especially Commissariat and Ordnance stores, owing partly to local contracts in the Madras Command for stores formerly procured through the Store-keeper General, Madras (5,7), and partly to the Chin Hills having been handed over to the Military Police (5,4). Under feed of Horses, Battery Mules, etc., the excess both over the Budget (97,9) and the actuals of the previous year was due to higher prices owing to scarcity. Under Implements, Godown Furniture and Contingencies there were less charges for purchase and repair of fixed dead stock articles in Commissariat godowns owing to fewer condemnations. Under Other Heads the saving occurred chiefly under Miscellaneous (15,3), and was due chiefly to less incidental charges which are liable to considerable variations (9,6), and to less warm clothing than anticipated being charged to this head, partly by reason of the cost of cardigan jackets purchased for issue to British troops proceeding to Europe having been charged to Sea Transport charges (10,9).

304. The details of the charges in the Transport Branch (excluding mobilization) are as follows:—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
255,9	Depôt and Regimental	293,3	331,5	333,6
4,3	Ambulance Transport	8,2	6,6	4,8
260,2	TOTAL	301,5	338,1	338,4

Under Depôt and Regimental the excess was chiefly due to the increased charges for feed of animals owing to the rise in prices on account of scarcity (59,5), partly counterbalanced by fewer purchases of animals than expected (20,0).

305. Under Special Services the saving was due mainly to the purchase locally of ration articles in connection with the "Occupation of Chitral and its communications" (28,6) and to arrear recoveries and reduction of the garrison in the "Gilgit Agency" (7,9), partly counterbalanced by an under-estimate on account of "Wano garrison" (6,9).

306. The variations in the Mobilisation charges have been explained above (see para. 285).

Remounts and Veterinary.

307. Under this head also provision was made for mobilization charges under the sub-head Special Services, while the charges were taken in the accounts against the ordinary sub-head to which they pertained. The details are accordingly given below, the mobilization charges in the accounts column being shown separately:—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	Accounts. A.	Accounts. B.

A—Ordinary. B—Mobilization.

The total saving (18,4), under this head comparing the Budget, excluding mobilization, with the actuals (column A), was mainly the outcome of a large saving in the purchase of fewer remounts and young stock (28,9) and of excess expenditure (18,6) incurred on account of famine rates of articles of food and by the purchase of cooltbie and fodder for consumption during 1897-98.

308. The saving under this grant (13,2) was spread over most of the sub-heads, but occurred mainly under Compensation in lieu of clothing (7,4) and was due to the full amount of compensation in lieu of clothing not having been drawn by corps in consequence of the late publication of revised rules for the supply of clothing to British troops in India, and to less compensation having been granted to time-expired men. The total actuals of 1896-97 show an increase over those of 1895-96 of 112,1, due almost entirely to the introduction of the new clothing scheme.

309. The total decrease under this grant was 6,2. The variations from the Budget are generally unimportant, the only items worth mentioning being the saving under Barrack Bedding (11,9) due to the issue of part-worn bedding to British Troops on arrival in India, to the longer period for which new issues of bedding are required to last under the new rules, and to smaller purchases of Blankets than anticipated, and the excess (4,9) under Lighting Charges, mainly due to the larger purchase at higher rates of kerosine oil for stock purposes. It must also be noted that the small excess of 9 under Station Conservancy was provided for by reappropriation from the "Grants-in-aid to Hospitals" under 9—Medical.

In comparing the actuals of 1895-96 and 1896-97 an excess of 16,4 is disclosed. The excess was chiefly made up of an increase of 7,1 under Lighting charges due to larger purchases of oil in 1896-97 and an increase of 7,8 under Miscellaneous, due to larger purchases of coal, coke, and firewood in the Quetta district.

41,9		41,9	41,6	42,2

310. There is a trifling excess under this grant head, which requires sanction. It was due chiefly to the charges under Miscellaneous on account of Garrison and Station prisons having been under-estimated.

Medical Establishments.

311. The charges are classified under the following heads, the charges for mobilization in the accounts being shown against the grant in the Budget :—

* Mobilization charge deducted from Medical supplies and shown against Special Services.

Excluding Special Services there is a saving under this head of 20,2, of which 7,6 arises from the lower rate of Exchange Compensation Allowance, the greater part (6,4) under Medical Establishments,—Districts, the rest of the saving under which occurs in the charges for salaries and is due to insufficient deduction in the Budget for officers absent on furlough. The rest of the savings under individual heads are small and are partly due to the cause just mentioned. Under Miscellaneous there was a saving of 6,1, due to fewer military pupils having been under tuition at Medical Schools and Colleges (1 7), to an erroneous provision of house-rent for pupils in Madras which was borne by the Military Works Department (7), and to smaller grants-in-aid to Cantonment Hospitals in Madras (owing to closure of certain hospitals), and in the Punjab (3,1), part of the savings under this sub-head having been reappropriated for enlarging the grants for Station Conservancy under 7—Barrack Establishments, etc., (see para. 309). Under Medical Supplies there was an excess charge for extra medical comforts and for dieting the sick due to increased sickness, to large purchases for stock, and to higher prices of articles owing to scarcity, but this excess was practically met by the increased credit (taken in the accounts by deduction from the charge) under Issues to other Departments, owing partly to supply of stores (2,6) to famine relief camps and plague and segregation hospitals, but chiefly to larger issues to civil hospitals and dispensaries.

The leading features in the difference between the actuals of 1895-96 and 1896-97 were the decrease in the latter year of 17,4 under Medical Establishment, due chiefly to less payments of Exchange Compensation Allowance, and the excess of 25,0 under Special Services due chiefly to extra mobilization expenditure.

The total saving in the Accounts (column A) as compared with the Budget amounted to 49,6. The principal decrease occurred under Manufacturing Establishments (28,8) and Supplies for Manufacturing Establishments (10,9), and arose chiefly from less charges (24,5) for extra-temporary artificers and for local supplies (10,9), due to less outturn generally than was provided, as it was found impossible in some cases to work up to the large extra grants provided for, while some saving was also effected by the appropriation for ordinary requirements of supplies made up for Chitral, and by the diversion of a part of the establishment to the manufacture of mobilization articles, charged to the special grant. The balance of the saving was caused by less charges for repairs, under Purchase and Repair of Camp Equipage (4,3), and by excess recoveries under Supplies to other Departments (5,4). The difference between the actuals of 1895-96 and 1896-97 (74,3) was chiefly due to the special mobilization expenditure and to larger grants for Arsenals and Depôts and Factories, both under Establishments and Supplies.

Other Effective Charges.

313. Under Sea Transport charges, owing to a change in classification, the cost of cardigan jackets purchased for issue to British Troops proceeding to Europe (provided for under Grant 4—Commissariat) has been charged under this head, (see para. 303), but this was more than counterbalanced by less expenditure on passages from Port to Port.

314. The figures under Miscellaneous Services may be sub-divided as follows :—

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
1,966,9	Expeditions and special charges . . .	58,0	68,3	62,2
74,9	Other Items	105,2	94,3	78,9
2,041,8		163,2	162,6	141,1

The expenditure on expeditions has been detailed above (para. 284). Under Other Items the saving was due chiefly to an over-estimate for contingencies (11,3), to the grant for camps-of-exercise being only partially utilized (7,3), and to less telegram charges, owing chiefly to the transfer of the Chin Hills to the Military Police (3,9.)

Non-effective Charges.

315. Under Military Pensions to Europeans the decrease (9,4) was due chiefly to less capitalised payments (8,7) to British officers than anticipated. Under Military Pensions to Natives there were increased payments of compensation for dearness of provisions to Madras pensioners owing to scarcity (1,5), but this was covered by a decrease owing to casualties, and to stipends not having been claimed when due. Under Widows' Pensions and Compassionate Allowances the decrease was due to casualties and transfers to Europe.

Expenditure in England.

316. The saving in the home effective charges (200,0) occurred mainly under Stores for India (164,3), and was due partly to a smaller demand especially for ordnance stores, and partly to the Budget Estimate having included certain stores which were chargeable to Special Defence Works. There was also a large saving (21,3) under Indian Troop Service in the payments for coal, canal dues, fittings, etc. The fluctuations in non-effective charges were trifling.

317. The distribution of expenditure is noted below:—

21,7	India	49,1	25,6	21,7

101,3	TOTAL .	57,5	123,5	94,6

The decrease of 6,7, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was mainly due to Exchange. Compared with the Budget Estimate, the actuals showed an increase of 37,1, which is made up of short outlay of 27,4 in India, and of an increased expenditure of 64,5 in England, including exchange. The short outlay in India was due to (1) inability to prepare an estimate for the new Rowlee Magazine at Bombay owing to a suitable site for the building not having been settled by the local military authorities (4,5), (2) delay in the receipt of guns and howitzers for the Quetta, Attock, and Sukkur defences, and of other English stores (13,0), (3) stoppage of works in the Bombay Presidency consequent on the existence of plague (2,5), (4) transfer of 3,5 from the Indian to the English grant for stores for works, and (5) delay in the arrival of dacoit fencing and other English stores for defence works at Rawalpindi and Peshawar (2,6). The increase in the expenditure in England was chiefly due to the Secretary of State having provided for payments on account of stores for India under the head "Army Stores for India" in the Budget Estimate, and partly to payments for stores for the Aden defences having been deferred till 1896-97 instead of being made in 1895-96 as was anticipated.

318. The figures shown under this head represent the surplus or deficit of each Provincial Government in respect of the revenues and charges assigned to it, including Incorporated Local Funds. The differences between the Estimates and Accounts under the various Revenue and Expenditure heads have been explained in detail in the foregoing pages, and the share of these pertaining to the Provincial and Local sections of the accounts for the several groups is given below separately for each province. The Budget provided for an expenditure from Provincial balances of 71¼ lakhs and from Local balances of 17¼ lakhs; but the accounts show the net provincial expenditure more by 18¾ lakhs and the Local less by 4¾ lakhs. The actual decrease in the balances in the course of the year therefore amounted to 90 lakhs Provincial and 12½ lakhs Local, or 102½ lakhs in all. These figures do not, however, give a true idea of the actual transactions of the year, for, in order to produce even this result, Imperial Revenues had to bear four-fifths of the charge for direct Famine Relief (2,079,5) for which Provincial and Local Revenues are in the first instance responsible and had also to make special grants amounting to 213,5, to the North-Western Provinces (160,9) and the Central Provinces (52,6). It will be seen that even with these grants these two Local Governments closed the year without any Provincial balances; while two other Local Governments (Bombay and Punjab) were compelled to reduce their balances below the prescribed minima. It was the intention of the Government of India that the balances of these two Governments should be still further reduced to half the prescribed minima (Punjab 100,0 and Bombay 200,0) by charging to Provincial a portion of the Famine Relief expenditure; but by an oversight this adjustment was not effected.

319. The agricultural distress prevailing almost all over India was the cause of this unfavourable result. The drafts on the Provincial balances exceeded the Budget Estimate in the case of all the provinces except Burma, Assam and Bengal, the famine having in almost all Provinces had the effect of reducing the revenue and of increasing the expenditure (both that charged to Famine Relief and that not directly so charged). In Burma all the revenue and expenditure heads (taking Public Works heads net) show an improvement; this province had a very prosperous year, the famine being confined to Upper Burma, the expenditure in which was, during the year under report, Imperial. Assam also did not suffer from famine and there the slight improvement was due to ordinary fluctuations. Bengal had to meet largely increased expenditure owing to agricultural distress, which raised the charges for Civil Departments and Famine Relief by 259,2, part of which was met by reducing the expenditure on Buildings and Roads by 70,1; the Local Government also made large additional grants from Provincial to Local (41,1); but the Railway Revenue (82,0), the Irrigation Revenue (the net charge under that head being reduced by 58,8) and the principal Revenue heads (80,7) especially Stamps improved so largely as to more than cover the extra charges; the Provincial deficit was thus reduced by 24,6. In three Provinces, Bengal, the Punjab and Madras the total Provincial and Local expenditure exceeded the Budget grant. This excess requires the sanction of the Government of India, as mentioned above (see para. 26).

320. As compared with the actuals of the previous year, the deficiency, occasioned by famine, was increased by the refund to Provincial in the previous year, of the special contribution of 405,0 made to Imperial in 1894-95.

322. The principal savings in the Budget grant were due to the East Indian Railway having raised funds by the issue of debentures greatly in excess of the estimated outlay of the year, the charge of 112,2 in the Budget being thus converted into a credit of 786,3 and to the transfer of the Railways in Burma to a private Company, with effect from 1st September 1896, the outlay from that date having been met from Company's funds, and having thus led to a saving of 582,5. There was also a large lapse on the Tirhoot Extension (235,8). Against these savings there was large additional expenditure on the East Coast Railway (108,0), partly for the Godavari Bridge, and on the North-Western Railway (200,1).

323. The main difference between the Revised and the Actuals was due to the failure of the Assam Bengal Railway to raise debentures to the extent anticipated.

324. As regards the Lines under Construction, the lapse on the Rutlam-Nagda Railway was due chiefly to short outlay under Formation, Bridgework, and Ballast and Permanent-way, to increased issues of stores to the Nagda-Ujjain Railway, and to the transfer of surplus materials to the Rajputana-Malwa Railway. The lapse on the Mu Valley and Mandalay-Kunlon Railways was due to the transfer of the Railways in Burma to a Company, with effect from 1st September 1896, from which date the outlay on the construction of these lines has been met from Company's funds. The lapse on the Assam-Bengal Railway, Part I, was due to the estimates of their expenditure by land acquisition officers having been considerably in excess of what was actually spent. In accordance with the agreement with the Assam-Bengal Railway Company, the Secretary of State provides funds for Part II—Construction—when the Company's paid-up capital is exhausted ; the expenditure on this account in excess of the Company's paid-up capital during 1896-97 was 1,100,6. The lapse on the Wazirabad-Lyallpur Railway was due to the transfer of stores to the North-Western Railway. On the Muskhaf-Bolan Railway the lapse was attributable to adjustments on account of the value of Rolling Stock. The lapse on the Kotri-Rohri Railway was due to the late arrival from England of plant for the Kotri Bridge, to reduction of establishment charges consequent on the amalgamation of Divisions, and to the issues of stores to Rolling Stock being less than was provided for. The grants of the Mari-Attock and Rae Bareli-Benares Railways were exceeded owing to work having been pushed on more vigorously, with a view to the early completion of these lines. The excess on the East Coast Railway was due to work having been pushed on more vigorously than was anticipated, and to the inclusion of outlay on the Godavari bridge.

325. The construction of the following Railway projects was commenced during the course of the year, the funds required for the first two being met from the reserve and from savings on the grants of other lines; for the Hajipur-Katihar extensions there was Budget provision of 400,0, but owing to late commencement of work there was a lapse of 245,8.

Godavari Bridge.
Lyallpur-Khanewal.

326. As regards the Open Lines there was a lapse on the East Indian Railway. In the Budget Estimate for this line provision to the extent of 112,2 was made under this head "48" and it was intended that the balance of the requirements of the year should be met from funds raised by the Company by the issue of debentures. The Secretary of State directed that the expenditure should be charged against the debenture capital before funds under this head were operated on, and as the Company raised funds greatly in excess of the year's requirements, the transactions resulted in a net credit of 786,3. There was a lapse on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway system due to the transfer to "41.—Miscellaneous Railway Expenditure" of outlay incurred in previous years on works for the Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway at Delhi, and to the greater portion of the provision for unsanctioned works not having been utilized. The lapse on the Burma Railway was due to the transfer of the line to a Company from 1st September 1896, the outlay incurred after this date having been met from Company's funds. The excess over the Budget Estimate, which occurred on the Eastern Bengal Railway, was due chiefly to new works at Chitpore, and to the transfer of 8 Locomotive Engines from the East Coast Railway. The lapse on the Tirhoot State Railway was due chiefly to short outlay under Land and Bridge-work ; provision was made for land at Samastipur Junction, Mozufferpur and Semaria Ghât, but no debit was raised by the Civil Department during the year, whilst the changing of girders over Boor Gunduck, Korai, and Bagmatti bridges was not carried out ; there was also a saving under "Plant" owing to certain tools not having been received during the year. The lapse on the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway was due to the temporary postponement of additional waterway, Ramganga, strengthening the Balawali Bridge, and interlocking signals at Stations, work on the last two items not having been begun during the year. The grant for the North-Western Railway was exceeded owing to additional outlay having been incurred on doubling the line between Karachi and Kotri and on account of the transfer of Engines from the Muskhaf-Bolan Railway, and of surplus stores from the Wazirabad-Lyallpur Railway. The lapse on the South Indian Railway was due to the postponement of several large works entered in the Budget Estimate; to the late arrival of the bars and 50 lb. rails from England, and to the transfer of stores to the Peralam-Karikal Railway.

327. On Other Railways the principal lapses occurred on the Warora colliery and Wardha Coal Railway. On the former the lapse was due to the sale of machinery to the Umaria colliery, to the abandonment of the proposal for putting down Worthington pumps, and to work in connection with the roofing, tiling, etc., of the Engine-house at No. 9 pit not having been completed during the year. On the latter the lapse was due to the work of renewing 60 feet girders not having been put in hand owing to the estimate not having been sanctioned.

328. The decrease in the expenditure in England was due to the demands for stores having been less than was estimated.

331. Under Special Loans the debit of 8 represents the commutation value of pensions lapsed to Government (7) and the payment of the commutation value of Wasika pensions during the year (1). The large falling off of 78,0 under Treasury notes and Service Funds was chiefly due to the absence of adjustment on account of interest on the deposits of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund for 1895-96, it having been adjusted in that year, (vide paragraph 110). The details of Savings Bank deposits transactions are as follow :—

The figure against Presidency Savings Bank represents the net amount transferred to the Post Office Savings Bank up to the 30th September 1897, the date on which the transfer of the accounts to the Post Office Savings Bank was finally made. Taking these two classes of Savings Banks together there was a heavy net withdrawal; part of this (about 200,0) occurred in the transfer of the Presidency Savings Bank Accounts, some of the depositors preferring to withdraw their accounts and leave them with the Presidency Banks. The closing of the Account of the East Indian Railway Provident Fund also caused a net withdrawal of about 250,0. Agricultural distress and high prices tended also to diminish deposits and increase withdrawals. The variations under Regimental Savings Bank depend to a great extent on the transfers of British Regiments between India and England, and therefore an accurate estimate cannot be made. The net outgoings under Special Accounts chiefly represent the withdrawals by the General Family Pension Fund (34,0) and the Hindu Family Pension Fund (22,7) for investment in Government securities owing to the low price prevailing. The Forest Officers' Provident Fund was established in the course of the year under the order of the Government of India No. 2881 P., dated 1st July 1896.

332. The net debit to Provincial Balances has been explained in paragraph 318. Under Excluded Local Funds and Railway Funds the variations on the whole are not large and require no detailed explanation. The character and magnitude of the transactions recorded under Departmental and Judicial Deposits render an accurate forecast impossible. The net debit was contributed chiefly by the North-Western Provinces (242,2 out of the total of 377,8), where it was mainly due to a large net withdrawal from Municipal Funds (156,4) in consequence of capital expenditure on water-works and drainage and of the large repayment of debt mentioned in para. 339. The other fluctuations are not sufficiently important to require special explanation.

333. The net figures entered against the head Advances may be divided as follows :—

	Budget.	Revised.	Accounts.
Coinage Accounts	...	+ 111,2	— 41,1
Other Advances	+ 18,5	— 122,1	—43,2
	+ 18,5	— 10,9	— 84,3

Under Coinage Account the difference between the Revised and the Budget is due to a net debit of 152,0 under Bullion Advances by reason of increase in the balance of Bullion at the Mints on account both of Government silver and of the silver tendered for the coinage of British dollars. There was also a net credit of 32,7 on account of Mint certificates issued for silver tendered for the coinage of British dollars at the Bombay Mint. The Budget did not anticipate any reduction in the small coin depôt balances, but the actuals show a reduction of 82,0, owing to the special demand for small coin for Famine Relief works. This demand resulted in a small net debit of 3,8 under Copper Coinage Account due to a credit of 51,8, being the amount by which the stock of coin and copper at the Mints and small coin depôts at the close of the year was decreased, counterbalanced by a debit of 55,6 owing to the reduction, in consequence of this decrease, of the balance at credit of the Mint Profit Account.

The net debit under Other Advances is the final outcome of a number of transactions ; the cause of the net debit of 43,2 is however brought out by the following figures—

Special Advances	—41,1
Permanent Advances	—97,7
Other "	+10,2
Account with Foreign States	+85,4

The debit under Special Advances was due to the discount on the stock certificate issued to the Currency Department (see para. 104) having been debited temporarily to this head to be set off against the first receipt of interest on the certificate. The large net disbursement for Permanent Advances occurred mainly in Bengal (47,0), the North-Western Provinces (34,1) and the Central Provinces (13,1). Under Accounts with Foreign States the large credit was mainly owing to the recovery of outstandings due from States in the Punjab (58,6), especially Kashmir.

Under Suspense Account the variations are chiefly on account of fluctuations in the balances in the hands of departmental officers. The main differences were the increase in the balances of the Buildings and Roads Branch of the Public Works Department (124,7), especially in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in consequence of famine relief operations and the decrease in the balances in the hands of Civil Departmental officers (66,0), chiefly Opium Agents in Bengal.

The payment under Loans to Native States represents Loans to Baoni State (2,5), to the Maharaja of Ajaigarh (5,0) and to the Cooch Behar State for the Railway (6,6) against 1,0 only on account of Loans to Cooch Behar State provided in the Budget. Of the amount repaid 2,2, against a provision of 2,4 in the Budget, was on account of repayment of Loans by the Sultan of Muscat and the remainder 10,7 includes 10,0, the actual amount repaid by the Maharaja of Cooch Behar out of the loan of 35,0 which was estimated for under the head "R.R. Provincial Advance and Loan account", but was subsequently taken under this head, and 7 represents the adjustment of a portion of the principal of this loan erroneously credited to interest in 1895-96. Under Loans to Presidency Corporations and Port Trusts the Budget provided for an advance of 22,5 to the Bombay Port Trust for Victoria dock, but only 16,7 was actually required. The repayments almost correspond with the Budget. The difference occurred almost entirely in Bombay and represents the fixed annual surplus and the sale proceeds of lands and old stores which are applied equally by the Trustees to the reduction of their interest-bearing and non-interest-bearing debt to Government. The excess advance under District and Other Local Committees was due to loans advanced in the Military Department not provided for under this head. Under Advances to Cultivators the account includes chiefly the advances and repayments in Upper Burma.

The striking features of this table are the reduction of the advances to and the increase of the repayments by Municipalities and the very large increase in the advances to cultivators in consequence of the agricultural distress.

339. Under Loans to Mofussil Municipalities the following are the details by Provinces of advances and repayments during the year :—

In the advances there were savings in all the provinces on the total grants; but in the North-Western Provinces and Madras certain specific allotments, shown separately in the table, were made, savings from which are not available for other loans. On the ordinary account, therefore, the Madras Budget allotment has been exceeded by 12,8, this being the result especially, as it would seem, of two large loans of 15,0 to the Vizagapatam Municipality and of 9,3 to the Coconada Municipality. This excess of 12,8 was, however, more than covered by the saving in Madras of 19,7 under Loans to Cultivators. The total net charge in that province was 56,1 against a grant of 77,4; which gives a saving of 21,3, or after deducting the special grants of 16,5, a saving on the whole of 4,8. In the North-Western Provinces only one of the special allotments was disbursed in full, and the Hurdwar Municipality took only 5 against an estimate of 30,0; but the savings were not utilised for other purposes as there were large savings on the ordinary allotment as well. The saving in Bombay is only apparent as the provision of 16,6 for unforeseen demands was transferred to Advances to Cultivators. Subsequently special advances, amounting to 5,3, were made for plague purposes, and an additional allotment of 5,0 was made which nearly covers the net excess of 5,2 (16,6—11,4). The large improvement in the receipts due to the payments of 10,0 and 3,0 by Ahmedabad and Hyderabad Municipalities renders it unnecessary to obtain sanction to this small excess in advances. In the repayments the largest difference occurred in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and was due to unexpected repayments of 7½ lakhs by the Cawnpore and Benares Municipalities.

340. Under Port Funds the debit of 3,3 represents an advance to the Chittagong Port Trust not provided for. Under District Committees the smaller outlay in Bengal is due to the full amount of advances not having been drawn by the District Board of Monghyr. In Madras, the special provision of 1,5 for the District Board, Ganjam, for Railway feeder roads was not utilized during the year. The increase in receipts was chiefly due to the payment (2,2) by the Ratnagiri District Board, and to the receipts in the Punjab which were not anticipated. Under Loans to Landholders, etc., provision of 10,0 was made for repayment by the Maharajah of Cooch Behar; but the adjustment on this account was made under Section R, Imperial Advance and Loan Account (see para. 337). In Bombay, there was an excess due to the advance of 7,5 to the Jath State, not provided for, reduced by a payment of 3,5 against an estimate of 6,1 to the Chief of Kurundvad (senior) State.

341. Under Advances to Cultivators the following are the details:—

	Budget, 1896-97.		Accounts, 1896-97.		Difference Advanced.	Difference Repaid.
	Advanced.	Repaid.	Advanced.	Repaid.
Central Provinces	40,0	36,3	128,7	57,4	+88,7	+21,1

TOTAL	387,8	234,7	1,073,8	261,9	+686,0	+27,2

The advances exceeded the estimate in all the Provinces, except Burma, Assam and Madras. The increase was due to famine, in consequence of which large advances were made under the Land Improvements and Agriculturists Loans Act, and the following additional grants were sanctioned by the Government of India to meet them:—

Central Provinces	95,0
Bengal	10,0
North-Western Provinces	325,0
Punjab	53,0
Bombay	230,0

In Bombay in addition to the above grant 16,6 and 1,5 respectively from the heads Loans to Mofussil Municipalities and Advances under Special Laws were transferred to this head. In Burma owing to the prevalence of cattle-disease, provision was made for large advances, but the progress of the disease having been checked the actual outgoings fell below the estimate. In Madras there was a large saving on the Budget grant of 50,0 for loans to ryots holding lands under the Periyar Project.

342. Under Advances under Special Laws, provision made in Bengal for advances chiefly in the Hooghly and 24-Pergunnahs districts was not required. In Bombay the provision under this head was transferred to the head Advances to Cultivators.

343. As explained in former reports, these are all net sums. The Indian figures represent the difference between the advances taken by the Railway Companies and the credits given to them chiefly on account of stores used on revenue account. The English figures represent the difference between the capital deposited by the companies with the Secretary of State, and the withdrawals for expenditure on stores, establishment charges, etc. These figures are necessarily liable to great fluctuations. But the following general explanations are furnished. Under Guaranteed Companies the difference in India under the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway is due to heavier consumption of stores on Revenue account for renewals of permanent way and Warren girders and to larger sales of stores to outsiders, and under the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to the provision for unsanctioned works not having been fully utilized and to smaller purchases of stores consequent on decreased traffic due to famine and plague. In England there were smaller purchases of stores on both these lines. Under Subsidised Companies the Budget Estimate provided funds to meet the estimated outlay of the Burma Railway under 48.—State Railways, but the Railway was handed over from 1st September 1896 to the Burma Railway Company, which raised capital in England amounting to 1,836,5, and funds required since that date for expenditure in England and in India have been charged to Capital of Railway Companies. In the case of the Indian Midland and the Bengal-Nagpur Railways the requirements for expenditure in India on the extensions were over-estimated. The estimate provided for the raising of debentures in England in the case of the Assam-Bengal Railway, and for the expenditure in India being charged to this head as far as any surplus capital was available. No debentures were, however, raised, and there being no capital of the Company against which the expenditure of 82,1 in England might be taken, the amount was debited in India to 48—State Railways by credit to Capital of Railway Companies. The Indian expenditure was also charged in full to 48—State Railways. No provision was made for the Mymensing-Jamalpur, Brahmaputra Sultanpur, Hardwar-Dehra and Tapti Valley lines in the estimate, but capital was raised and work commenced in the course of the year. Debentures for 861,7 were renewed during the year instead of being replaced by fresh capital as was anticipated in the Budget, but this does not affect the net result.

Weather Review of India for the week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, March 5th, 1898.

During the first two days of the week under review the weather was fairly quiet and fine over the Indian region, and practically no rain fell throughout the whole area. On Tuesday, the 1st of March, a change set in. A sudden and very rapid barometric fall occurred over the Punjab, and a well-defined and deepish depression was shown over that province. Light snow fell over the Kashmir and Baluchistan Hills, but only strong squally cyclonic winds were reported over North-West India. Subsequently a low pressure area was slowly transferred eastward down the Gangetic Plain, light showers of snow occurring over the Himalayas and light showers of rain over the Gangetic Plain. In the rear of this low pressure area an exceedingly rapid rise of the barometer took place, and a large anti-cyclonic area, with steep surrounding gradients, was established over North-West and Central India. Strong dry winds blew out from this high pressure area and these winds were accompanied with a most remarkable fall of temperature. This depression of temperature was the most important meteorological feature of the week. The depression of temperature was most marked on the 4th, when, omitting Burma and the Peninsula, the mean temperature was 13° lower than usual.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, February 27th.—Pressure had been steady over North-West India and had increased slightly to rapidly elsewhere. The barometer was high and uniform over Northern and Central India, whence pressure slowly decreased southward. The winds were generally northerly over the Bay area, generally easterly over the west of the Peninsula and variable elsewhere. The mean temperature was high for the time of year over the Punjab and Sind, over Bombay and the Central Provinces, over the extreme south of the Peninsula and over part of Burma, while it was low elsewhere. The principal variations from the normal were +7°·0 at Quetta +6°·6 at Surat, —7°·2 at Vizagapatam and —6°·4 at Benares. One or two local showers were reported, but the general weather was rainless.

Monday, February 28th.—The pressure changes were generally upward. Pressure was uniform and higher than usual in all parts of the country The winds were practically unchanged. The mean temperature was high for the time of year over the Punjab, Sind, Bombay, the Central Provinces, the west and south of the Peninsula and part of Burma, but remained low elsewhere. At Surat the variation was +7°·6 and at Jessore —7° 1. The weather had been practically rainless.

Tuesday, March 1st.—The barometer had risen over Baluchistan and fallen over India and Burma. The fall had been exceedingly rapid over the Punjab and a deepish depression was shown over that province. Over the Bay and the Peninsula pressure remained very uniform. Strong cyclonic winds and gales prevailed in the north-west and light variable winds elsewhere. The mean temperature exceeded the normal average over North-Western and Central India, the west and south of the Peninsula and part of Burma and was below the normal elsewhere. The excess was 8° 6 at Khandwa, the deficiency 6°·7 at Jessore. Light snow had fallen in Kashmir and a few drops of rain at one or two plains stations.

Wednesday, March 2nd.—The barometer had risen slightly to rapidly over North-West India and had fallen elsewhere. A large high pressure area was shown advancing over Sind from the westward, while a shallow low pressure area was travelling eastward down the Gangetic Plain Over the Peninsula and the Bay there had been no important change. The winds were westerly to northerly in the north-west of India and southerly to easterly over North-East India and variable over the Peninsula. The thermometer had fallen very fast and an area of very low temperature, relatively to the normal, was appearing over the extreme north-west of India. Temperature was also lower than usual over the Peninsula and the north of the Bay; while, on the contrary, over the Gangetic Plain, the central parts of India and Bombay there intervened a large area of excessive temperature. Light snow had fallen over the North-West Hills, and light rain at a few stations on the plains of the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces and Bihar.

Thursday, March 3rd—The barometer had fallen over the Peninsula, North-East India and Burma and had risen elsewhere. The rise in the north-west and centre had been very rapid and the high pressure area which was appearing over Sind on the 2nd had covered the whole of the north-west. Gradients were very steep over the Gangetic Plain, the central parts of the country and the head of the Peninsula. The winds which blew out from this high pressure area were strong to a gale in force. The area of very low temperature had extended eastward and covered the whole of North-Western and Central India, while over Bengal, Assam and Burma the heat was somewhat excessive. Light snow had been received over the North-West Himalayas and light showers of rain over North-East India.

Friday, March 4th.—The barometer had risen over Bengal and the north of the Peninsula and had fallen elsewhere. Baric gradients were slighter than usual on the 3rd, but otherwise the distribution of pressure was unchanged. The winds were also unaltered. Extremely low temperatures for the time of year were reported from all parts of the Indian region, except Burma and the south of the Peninsula. The deficiency was between 15° and 20° over the central districts. A few local showers were reported from Bengal and Ceylon.

Saturday, March 5th.—Pressure had continued to increase over North-East India and the east of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the changes were unimportant. Pressure was high over North-West and Central India, low over North Bihar, Lower Burma, the Bay and the West Coast, but the pressure differences were less than on the two preceding days. The winds were practically unaltered and were light to fresh in force. Temperature had generally risen except over Burma, Assam, Bengal and Madras, but in all provinces the mean temperature was lower than usual. The deficiency averaged 12° over the Central Provinces, 11° over the North-Western Provinces and Bengal and only 0°·3 in Madras. There had been no rain of any importance.

Temperature.—The temperature conditions of the past week have been most remarkable and the variations of the mean temperature from the normal have been exceptionally large. During the first three days of the week the western half of India experienced a generally excessive and the eastern half a generally deficient temperature, but, on Wednesday, the 2nd of March, an area of exceedingly low temperature made a sudden appearance on the Sind frontier, and subsequently this area extended quickly eastward and finally enveloped almost the whole country.

The following table gives temperature data for the week under review:—

On the 27th February the mean temperature of the whole country was nearly normal, though the different provinces showed considerable opposite variations. On the 28th the mean temperature exhibited an upward tendency, though the average for the whole country was still nearly normal. On the 1st of March the upward movement had reached its maximum and the mean temperature of the whole country was 2° higher than usual. On the 2nd the temperature had begun to fall and the suddenness of the appearance of the cold wave on the Sind frontier was shown by the fall of 13° in Sind and Rajputana. By the 3rd the cold wave had extended to all provinces except Burma and Bengal, by the 4th to all except Burma and Madras, while by the 5th it had reached all the provinces of India. Though most widespread on the 5th, the cold was not, however, so intense as on the 4th, when in the Central Provinces the variation from the normal was —15° and in the North-Western Provinces, Central India, Gujarat, Sind and Rajputana —14°.

Rain.—The low pressure area, which traversed Northern India from west to east between the 1st and the 3rd of March, occasioned a certain amount of rain on the plains and of snow on the hills of Northern India, but with this exception any rainfall during the week under review occurred during light scattered showers. The rainfall table at the close of the Summary shows that, though the rainfall area was somewhat more extensive than that of last week, the rainfall amounts were almost equally small. During the present week rain was received in 21 of the rainfall divisions, as compared with 9 during the previous week, but of these 21 divisions no less than 17 received an average actual rainfall for the week of less than one-tenth of an inch. There were thus only four divisions, viz., Assam (Surma), North Bihar, the Punjab Hills and the North Punjab, which reported effective rainfall, and within these four divisions the amount ranged from 0·34" in the North Punjab to 0·10" in the Punjab Hills and to 0·11" in the Surma division of Assam.

In Cachar about one inch of rain is anticipated during the week under review, and in East Bengal, the Assam Hills, the Brahmaputra valley, Deltaic Bengal, the hills of the North-Western Provinces, the hills of the Punjab, and the hills of Baluchistan about half an inch of rain or a little more. Hence in these few divisions the rainfall deficiency for the week is more or less of importance, but in all other parts of the country the anticipated rainfall is exceedingly small and the absence of rain is unimportant.

With the present return a new rainfall period is commenced, and the information given in the three last columns of the table is the same, in another form, as that given in the first three columns.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weekly Report on the state of the Season and Prospects of the Crops.

Madras.—For week ending 12th March.—The rainfall during the week was nil, except for light showers in Tinnevelly and Travancore. The water-supply is generally insufficient for irrigation except in Malabar and the Circars. Agricultural operations continue. Standing crops are fair in parts, but are generally suffering from want of rain. The harvest continues, and the outturn of crops is generally middling. Pasture and fodder are growing scanty in parts. The condition of cattle is normal. Prices are slightly easier in the Circars and the Deccan, elsewhere they are steady, but have risen very slightly in Nellore. Dry grains are near or dearer than scarcity rates in Kistna, Nellore, and North Arcot. There is no improvement in prospects. The numbers on relief in Nellore were—test workers—1,504 men, 2,736 women, 1,749 children, total 5,989. Gratuitously relieved in kitchens—dependants—3 men, 6 women, 98 children, total 107. Grand total on relief—6,096.

Bombay.—For week ending 14th March.—The standing crops have been injured by frost in parts of Shikarpur. Harvesting of late crops continues generally, and preparations for next season are in progress in nine districts. Cotton-picking is progressing in seven districts. Fodder is sufficient. Agricultural stock is generally healthy. Prices have risen in three and fallen in nine districts; elsewhere they are stationary. The price of jowari in Sholapur was—18⅝ seers per rupee. The average number on relief works including dependants was—Sholapur 7,534, of whom 7,168 are relief workers, and 366 dependants. Of relief workers—2,349 are men, 3,632 women, and 1,187 children. Of dependants—14 are men, 25 women, and 327 children. On gratuitous relief—Sholapur 2,654, of whom 1,110 are men, 1,159 women and 385 children.

Bengal.—For week ending 14th March.—No rain during the week, except in Chittagong, where rain is badly needed. The general prospects of the crops in all other districts are reported to be favourable. The harvesting of the spring crops and of sugarcane is going on. Some damage has been done by insect pests to the oilseed crops in the Narail sub-division of Jessore. The collection of opium is proceeding, but in Hazaribagh it is retarded by strong winds. Ploughing for early rice and jute is going on, but rain is required. Prices continue steady. The fodder-supply is everywhere good, except in parts of Rangpur and Chittagong.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 16th March.—Seasonable weather prevails. Harvesting of the spring crops is general in the eastern and has commenced in the western districts. Opium is being collected. Prospects are everywhere reported favourable. Extra crops are doing well. Supplies are sufficient and prices are either stationary or falling.

Punjab.—For week ending 14th March.—Slight rain has fallen in the Dera Ismail Khan and Peshawar districts. Harvesting of the rape seed crop is in progress. Sowings of extra spring crops and ploughings for autumn crops have commenced. Sugarcane is being sown in Amritsar. Prospects and condition of standing crops are generally reported good. The recent rain has benefited the standing crops in Rawalpindi and Peshawar. The gram and barley crops have been damaged to some extent by high winds in parts of Hissar and Ferozepore. Locusts appeared and laid eggs in parts of Shahpur; the eggs are being destroyed. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is sufficient in all districts; green fodder is now procurable in Sialkot. Prices are unchanged in Hissar, Jullundur, Ferozepore, Lahore, and Sialkot, and are falling elsewhere. Wheat is selling from 12 to 17 seers, gram 14 to 16, barley 20 to 23, bulrush millet 18 to 22½, maize 18½ to 25¾, great millet 20, and rice 10 to 11 seers per rupee.

Central Provinces.—For week ending 14th March.—The weather is generally clear but clouds occasionally bank up, and Damoh has received 15 cents of rain. The nights are cool but day temperature continues to rise. Harvesting of spring crops progresses and is nearly completed in a few districts. Prospects remain generally favourable, but slight damage has been caused by insects to gram in Balaghat. Scarcity of labour for harvesting is reported from places in Jubbulpore. Ploughing of fields for summer sowings continues in portions of Mandla, Chhindwara, Wardha, Bilaspur and other districts. Sowings of irrigated rice are in progress in the Sironcha tahsil of Chanda. The price of gram has fallen rapidly; it is now selling in most northern districts at 17 or 18 seers per rupee. The quotations for wheat have eased but to a less extent. The prices of juar and rice fluctuate slightly but continue low. Relief is confined to 55 children in orphanages in Balaghat. A test work started at Balaghat attracted 90 persons.

Burma.—For week ending 12th March.—In Lower Burma threshing is nearly completed in Thongwa and completed in other districts. In Upper Burma the crops of the season are generally reported healthy. Destruction of wheat by insects is reported from Monywa township, Lower Chindwin district, and wheat has also suffered from blight in Sagaing. The harvesting of island and riverside crops, such as peas, beans and tobacco is continuing throughout. In Upper Burma prospects are generally fair. Wheat and gram are being reaped. PROCEDURE.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"The list of business before the Council to-day being exceptionally heavy, it may be convenient if I mention the manner in which I propose to deal with it.

"I propose that the Council should take the ordinary interval at 2 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock, if I see no reasonable prospect of finishing the business to-day, I shall suggest to the Council that we should break up at the next convenient stage of the proceedings and resume at 11 o'clock to-morrow with the object of completing the consideration of the business on the paper."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Hon'ble GANGADHAR RAO MADHAV CHITNAVIS asked: —

"1. Will Government be pleased to state if the Local Administration have been requested to enquire into the condition of the Central Provinces during the recent famine, and how far they have been able to withstand it?

"2. If so, will Government be pleased to obtain non-official local opinion in the matter and also so to conduct the enquiry as to enable it to ascertain whether the high percentage of 65 to 74 inclusive of cesses assessed in many places in the recent re-settlement of land-revenue in the Central Provinces had the effect of reducing very greatly the power of the malguzars to bear up against the effects of the calamity, and to render that aid to their tenants and others in the villages which even now the Government and the people expect from them and which in many places was offered and in many other places actually demanded and received from them?

"3. Will Government be pleased to state what has been the total increase in the land-revenue demand and in the cesses including patwari-cess under the operations of the new settlement undertaken since 1885?

"4. Will Government be pleased to state what has been the increased cost to the Administration from (1) increase of establishment, and (2) from increase of pay of existing establishment since 1885?

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN replied :—

"Question 1.—All Local Governments and Administrations, and amongst them the Administration of the Central Provinces, have been requested to include in their reports on the recent famine a full examination of the question whether the people have shown themselves better or worse able to meet famine than before. The local inquiries and inspections which formed a necessary feature of the operations for famine relief will, it is believed, furnish ample material for dealing with this question, and the Government of India do not propose to set any other enquiries on foot.

"Question 2.—Any investigation into the possible connection between the effects of famine and the incidence of the land-revenue assessment would yield in the Central Provinces no results of value, as those of the districts recently resettled, in which the land-revenue assessments have always been highest in proportion to assets, are situated in the portion of the Provinces which was least affected by famine.

"Question 3.—Since the 1st October, 1885, the land-revenue demand of the Central Provinces has increased by Rs. 22,83,233, and the demand on account of cesses, including patwari-cess, has increased by Rs. 3,33,107, of which however Rs. 23,000 is merely nominal."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND replied :—

"Question 4.—The total increase of cost from 1885-86 to 1896-97 has been from Rs. 43,42,000 to Rs. 54,53,000. It is quite impossible to say how much of this increase is due to additions of new appointments and how much to increase of pay in old ones. For example, if a clerkship on Rs. 40 is added to an establishment already consisting of two clerks on Rs. 30, it is pure matter of opinion whether the new clerkship is an entirely new one or is an increase of one of the old ones from Rs. 30 to Rs. 40."

COURT-FEES ACT (1870) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN moved that he be substituted for Mr. Rivaz as a member of the Select Committee on the Bill to further amend the Court-fees Act, 1870.

The motion was put and agreed to.

PETROLEUM ACT (1886) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN also moved that the Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Joy Gobind Law, the Hon'ble Mr. Nicholson, the Hon'ble Mr. Allan Arthur and the mover.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN POST OFFICE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Post Office in India. He said:—"The Select Committee have gone through a variety of suggestions made for the amendment of the Bill as it was first brought before the Council. The Report of the Committee will show that in the case of a very large number of these suggestions, effect has been given to them by altering the wording of the Bill. It is not necessary for me therefore to make any mention of the points on which we have accepted the suggestions, but I will, with the permission of the Council, notice a few points on which we have not accepted the suggestions made. The first of these is a difficulty which arises in connection with the definitions, namely, that the words 'Post Office' have two definitions according as Post Office is spelt with small letters or capital letters. There is a certain incongruity in this, but we have copied in this respect the English Consolidating Bill, and, as a matter of fact, there is no difficulty in distinguishing which of the two expressions is used wherever they occur: one refers to a particular building or place, and the other refers to the Department of the Post Office. The next point on which certain suggestions have been made is with regard to section 6, which defines the responsibility of the Post Office officials. Some persons, mostly, strange to say, officials, and not members of the mercantile community, have desired to fasten upon the Post Office officials a greater responsibility than the Bill originally provided. We have, however, in this respect adhered to the original Bill, and one good reason for doing so is that it defines the responsibility of Post Office officials in terms which as nearly as possible express the English law on the subject. The difficulty of making a Post Office official liable for mere negligence, that is to say, for doing something which, if he had taken better care, he would not have done, arises out of the circumstance that Post Office business has always to be done at enormous pressure. It does not suit the mercantile community to have to send their letters to the post office a few hours before they have to be despatched. The consequence is that both in the despatch of letters and in delivery of letters any extremely careful sorting of the letters is a practical impossibility. Of course it may be said, with reference to this, 'increase your establishments and you will have everything better done and more carefully performed'; but increase of establishments means increased expenditure upon them. It also means increase of space, and that also means increased expenditure. If we have to spend more than we do upon the Post Office, we cannot afford to continue to carry letters at a half-anna rate. Every person will, I think, admit that after all the Post Office, when they do make a mistake by mis-sending or mis-delivering a letter, do it only under extremely exceptional circumstances, and I am quite sure that the public will prefer to receive the present measure of service at half an anna to having a more perfect service performed for them at a higher rate. Section 11 provides that, if an underpaid postal article is sent by post and the addressee is not found, and if thereafter it is returned to the sender, the sender shall be chargeable with the forward postage. It has been said that this charge is not at present made upon him, and that may be the case, but it is a charge that obviously ought to be made. If a person posts a letter which is understamped, he requires of the Post Office a service which is not paid for in advance. It is true we can recover this from the addressee when the letter is delivered, but, if the addressee is dead, the responsibility ought to rest upon the person who sends the letters and not upon the Post Office. The Post Office has performed a service for which it ought to be paid, and, if the sender has not paid, the responsibility seems to me to properly fall upon him as he can easily avoid the charge by properly prepaying his letter. A very large amount of violent language has been poured out upon section 20. The whole of this violent language is based upon a complete misunderstanding. It has been imagined that this section lays down that no newspaper or any other document containing any seditious article could be sent by post, and that a subsequent section, which refers back to it, provides a punishment for any person who thus posts a seditious article ; but if reference be made to the wording it will be found that it is directed against the practice of putting seditious or libellous or scurrilous matter outside postal articles. A person if he desires to put anything outside his letter beyond the address of the person to whom the letter or article is to be sent does so at his own responsibility. If he adds scurrilous or offensive matter to the address, it is right that he should not be permitted to use the Post Office as the disseminator or conveyor of that scurrilous, defamatory or seditious matter. The kind of practice which is chiefly aimed at is this sort of thing Some person desires to vent his spite upon a Native Chief, and instead of addressing him in respectful terms and by his proper designation as 'The Maharaja' of so and so, he addresses it to the 'Robber Chief' of so and so. Or a person addresses a letter to a lady, and embodies in the address some words which imply disgraceful conduct on the part of that lady. This is a thing which obviously ought not to be permitted, and in every Postal Law to which my attention has been drawn there are distinct provisions against it. We do not take any power to open Post Office packets or letters or newspapers in order to find whether there is any sedition inside of them ; but we take power when libellous and seditious writing is stuck outside a letter, to prevent the Post Office being used for the conveyance of that letter. I trust with this explanation a large number of people, who have, as I say, poured out violent language upon this section, will be satisfied that we are not attempting the great interference with their correspondence which they imagine. With reference to section 39 the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce has suggested to us that we ought to provide in the law that, when a letter or article fails to be delivered, the fact should be notified by the issue of local lists. We have not provided for this in the law, but as a matter of fact the practice is carried out under the rules of the Post Office. All the law provides is that undelivered articles should be dealt with in such manner as the Governor General in Council may by rule direct. The reason why we are not able to adopt the suggestion of the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce is this : if we were to take upon us the responsibility of publishing lists of undelivered articles at all the post offices in the country, the result would be a very large amount of perfectly useless labour thrown upon our officials, because the number of post offices where people would take the trouble to, or be able to, read such notices is extremely small. The practice of the Department—which practice will be continued—is to publish notices of the kind only at the principal post offices, that is, at those places where they will really serve some useful purpose. At a place like Cawnpore of course they will be published. We therefore fully accept, so far as the working of the Department is concerned, the suggestion of the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce, but we do not embody it in the law, as we cannot embody it in the law without carrying it too far. Another point to which objection has been taken is section 47, which provides for the summary recovery of small sums, chiefly due from persons in respect of postage. The procedure is laid down that the amount should be recovered as if it were an arrear of land-revenue due from him. A section of an Act was quoted in the margin of this, but unfortunately it was quoted by a wrong year. The consequence is that officers in criticising this section have failed to observe that, under the law to which reference was made, when an officer of the Postal Department proceeds to recover the amount as if it were an arrear of land-revenue, he does not proceed to recover it himself, but sets the land-revenue authorities in motion. That is what was suggested to us in those criticisms as desirable, and the law as it stands, as I have explained, provides it. There is one other suggestion of the Cawnpore Chamber which I desire to take cognizance of. It is a suggestion not arising upon the Bill as before the Council, but arising generally in the administration of the Department. It is this, namely, that a letter which weighs over a tola, but less than a tola and a half, may bear a postage of $1\frac{1}{2}$ annas instead of, according to the existing practice, two annas. Personally I have every sympathy with the suggestion of the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce. I know that the last letter I happened to post just turned the scale at one tola, and I was obliged to put an extra anna upon it. My feelings were exactly those described by the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce, for I perceived that if I had only put the enclosure of the letter into another envelope, I should have sent both letter and enclosure for one and a half annas, but sending them together I was charged two. The suggestion of the Cawnpore Chamber of Commerce has been referred by me to the Director General of Post Offices for consideration, and the Chamber will no doubt be satisfied if I say that I have made that reference and cannot at present give any definite answer upon the point. With Your Excellency's permission I shall take up the Bill ten days or a fortnight hence with a view to its being passed before the session ends."

PRESIDENCY SMALL CAUSE COURTS ACT (1882) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved for leave to introduce a Bill to further amend the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, 1882. He said:—"The Bill which I am asking leave to introduce amends in two details the existing procedure of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act. The first amendment which we propose is this. There is a difficulty at times in providing a substitute for the Chief Judge when he goes on leave. The Madras Government have called our attention to a difficulty which arose there, and we propose to provide that any person who is qualified to be appointed substantively a Chief Judge may be, during his absence, appointed to act. This is the first matter dealt with by the Bill. The second matter dealt with by the Bill is this. As Hon'ble Members are aware, the High Court has power to make rules of practice and procedure for the Small Cause Courts, and the Calcutta High Court has recently framed some rules with a view to accelerating the proceedings in the Calcutta Small Cause Court; but the learned Judges who framed these rules have withheld them hitherto because they thought that in two respects they might be ultra vires. The rules propose that under certain limitations and conditions authority should be given for the Registrar to dispose of undefended cases and certain minor interlocutory matters. The learned Judges of the High Court doubted whether such a rule would come within the powers of regulating the procedure of the Court. At any rate it is better to remove that doubt and to declare expressly that the power to make rules includes the power to enable the High Court to authorise the Registrar, and in his absence the Deputy Registrar, to dispose of undefended cases and interlocutory matters."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India and in the Fort St. George Gazette, the Bombay Government Gazette and the Calcutta Gazette in English.

The motion was put and agreed to.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure be taken into consideration. He said:—"On this motion I do not propose to address the Council. There are a good many amendments down for consideration, and I have no doubt I shall have an opportunity of speaking on those amendments. I will only say at the present moment that the amendments do raise in many cases doubtful points—points on which the Select Committee themselves felt great doubts, and on which I am sure the Government will be very glad to have the consideration and decision of the Council at large."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said :—" My Lord, I think that, whatever be the view taken by any member of this Council of the Bill which is before us, there will be a general admission that the task undertaken by the Hon'ble the Legal Member and the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep has been performed by them with great ability, and, although I am not prepared to subscribe to all that is embodied in the Bill, there is much in it in which I heartily concur.

" My Lord, the Criminal Procedure Code is a law of every-day reference. If an alteration of a few words here, a slight addition there, or an explanation or illustration in another place would add clearness to it, everyone ought to be grateful for such amendments. My own experience as an Honorary Magistrate in the province I have the honour to represent has forced upon me the conviction that some of the amendments which the Bill proposes to make are necessary, and that the smooth working of the law is likely to be much facilitated by greater plainness of language and the introduction of additional explanations.

" But the consideration of a measure of such length and importance requires a great deal more time and more special knowledge than I am able to bestow on it. I would therefore leave the consideration of all verbal amendments and of all knotty and subtle points in the Bill to the Hon'ble Members learned in the law, and confine myself to some very brief observations upon two or three matters of general interest.

" As regards the proposal that offences under section 124A of the Penal Code should be triable by a District Magistrate or a specially empowered Magistrate of the first class, I should be failing in my duty were I to disguise the fact that it has produced something like consternation amongst all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in India. Personally speaking, I have the highest respect for those members of the Civil Service who fill the offices of Magistrates in this country. Still it will not be denied that, as a whole, they do not form so experienced and so skilled a body of Judges as the Sessions Judges and the Judges of the High Court. They have not that judicial habit of mind, acquired by a course of long and systematic training, which characterises the latter. Magistrates have no jurors and assessors to assist them in their deliberations, and offences under section 124A are of as highly technical character and often tax the best abilities and the nicest discrimination of a Judge and a jury. There is, therefore, much reason for apprehending that the new procedure, if sanctioned by the Legislature, will be attended with injurious results to the well-being of society, and will greatly imperil the safety of individuals criticising public matters.

"Moreover, it must be remembered that Magistrates are essentially executive officers and subordinate to executive authority. Public writers and speakers direct their criticism more often against the actions of the executive than against the proceedings of the Legislature or the judiciary. It is therefore feared, not without reason, that it will be difficult for an executive officer to bring an unbiassed mind to the consideration of such cases. The supposed safeguard of the previous sanction of the Local Government will not be sufficient to ensure the confidence of the public.

" On the contrary, it is apprehended that the sanction given by Government will make it extremely difficult and delicate for a Magistrate, who in his executive capacity is subordinate to the Local Government, and at whose instance the prosecution would in many cases have been initiated, to acquit a prisoner and so shake the prestige of the prosecuting Government. Every trial for sedition is a trial of strength between the Government and the prisoner; and it would therefore seem to be an essential principle that such trials should be held in Courts independent of the Executive.

" I would therefore humbly suggest that all cases under section 124A of the Penal Code should continue to be triable by Courts of Sessions and High Courts as heretofore.

"My Lord, with regard to the power proposed to be given to a Magistrate to require security for good behaviour under section 108, for the dissemination of seditious or defamatory matter concerning a Judge, I would beg leave to observe that such a procedure would amount to a revival of the Vernacular Press Act in an apparently judicial garb, for the effect of it would be that all newspapers would be placed under executive control, which would not only lower the status of the Press, but even demoralize it by preventing the expression of honest and candid opinion on public questions. It would place the Press under the complete control of the very persons who, as the Calcutta Bar have pointed out, 'by virtue of their public position and the very wide powers they enjoy, are likely to be the objects of disapproval and often of strong criticism at the hands of the Press, and who, therefore, will be the most intolerant of such criticism and the most inclined to be prejudiced against the journals publishing such criticism.' That the actions of Magistrates will often be subjects of adverse criticism at the hands of the Press cannot be reasonably doubted; that the mind of a Magistrate may be prejudiced by local feelings and a thousand other causes, everyone, I believe, will admit. It is for Your Excellency's Council to consider whether the safety of individuals criticising public officials will not be jeopardised by placing them under the thumb of the very persons who are likely to be criticised, and whether the terrorism of the section will not be fatal to that independence on which the usefulness of the Press admittedly depends.

"My Lord, in the consideration of this question there is one important element which cannot be entirely overlooked, and that is the association of feelings. I confess it is a sentimental consideration at best, but it is very important nevertheless. The power conferred by the section has hitherto been used as a means of regulating the conduct of bad and desperate characters. But editors and managers of papers, however faulty and intemperate may their writings be, cannot be classed in that category. These men will feel greatly mortified and terribly humiliated when they come to know that, though respectable members of society, they may, for trival offences, such as defamation and the like, which in no way affect the safety or the dignity of the State, be branded as badmash's or abandoned wretches whom society looks down upon with contempt. It is for Your Excellency's Council to consider whether such an apprehension is likely to impart a healthy tone to their writings.

"Whilst on this topic, I would, with Your Excellency's permission, advert for a moment to a first principle. In matters of inheritance, adoption, religious and social usage, and dealing between party and party, it was determined by an ancient statute that the laws of the Hindus should apply to the Hindus, and the laws of the Muhammadans to Muhammadans. But as regards crimes it was settled at a very early period that neither the Hindu nor the Muhammadan law could with justice be administered, and the criminal law of the country came to be administered according to English principles. So strict was the adherence to these principles that a Hindu was hanged for forgery, though the Court that passed the sentence knew that it would be abhorrent to the feelings of the Hindus. I think I speak the sense of all my educated countrymen when I say that the English criminal law is highly appreciated for its fairness, and the Indian criminal law, being framed on that pattern, is similarly appreciated. I do not see, my Lord, that any circumstances have arisen to justify a departure from the principle of the English law. In England security for good behaviour is demanded from vagabonds and men of desperate character, and I cannot imagine why in India a writer or speaker should be treated as a loafer merely because he is supposed to have slandered somebody.

"I therefore contend that men charged with defamation concerning a Judge or sedition should be dealt with according to no extraordinary procedure, but according to accepted principles, by tribunals above every suspicion of bias or incompetency. It has sometimes been contended that England is a free country with a homogenous population, in which subject and sovereign belong to the same race, and that, therefore, the same liberal principles of criminal jurisprudence that may be applicable to England will not suit India. Paradoxical as it may seem, I beg leave to submit that the conditions of India call for the recognition of even more liberal principles than those which prevail in England. The history of that country and the records of its State trials show how many have been the trials for treason, conspiracy and other offences of that kind, whereas in our country, under British rule, on the contrary, such cases may almost be counted on the fingers of one hand. I think it necessary also to point out that precisely because races and creeds, and therefore interests and prejudices, are so numerous and diversified in India, the difficulty of obtaining a fair trial is greater than would be the case in England. In England a prisoner is tried by a Judge and a jury of the same race and religion with him, who understand his language and appreciate his prejudices. The Judge is subordinate to no executive authority and is subject to no executive bias. There is no danger of the prestige of the Government being damaged by an acquittal. The situation here is very different, and I have not the heart to emphasize the distinction by an elaborate reference to details. I can only state my conviction that in this country a person charged with an offence against Government stands in need of special safeguards of a legal character against a failure of justice.

"My Lord, I hope my remarks with regard to the procedure in the trial of offences under section 124A of the Penal Code and to the enlargement of the scope of section 108 of this Code will not be taken as evidence of sympathy with rebels and libellors or as a brief on behalf of their friends. I am afraid sometimes hardihood of statement is apt to be taken as evidence of sympathy with persons disloyally inclined. But I am aware and my own conscience is guarantee for such a statement that that feeling—I mean of disloyalty—does not exist anywhere in an appreciable form among a very large majority of Her Majesty's grateful Indian subjects, and I am sure it does not prevail so largely as to call for any exceptional procedure such as that laid down in the above sections of the Bill.

"With regard to the rest of the Bill, my observations must be brief.

"As regards sections 256 and 257, I am of opinion that the procedure in the trial of warrant-cases is likely to be rendered more cumbrous by the innovations introduced.

"As regards section 392, I think the law ought to be made clearer to the effect that boys under 14 should be punished with a light rattan on the hand.

"With regard to section 259 and sections 451, 456 and 457, I have two amendments to propose, and I will make whatever observations I have to make on them whilst proposing the amendments which are against my name.

"I think a provision which is likely to facilitate the ends of justice would be that when two or more accused persons have to be tried at the same time, and for the same offence and in the same Court, the Court should have the discretion to examine the accused together or separately as it thinks fit.

"With regard to the clauses 561, 562 and 563, those which relate to the release of first offenders, I feel confident that the operation of these sections would prove very wholesome. The power to release first offenders upon probation of good conduct is, I understand, very extensively made use of in England, and the carrying out of the same principle in this country is urgently needed both in the interest of the prisoners and of society. This I had the honour, my Lord, to point out to Your Excellency's Council in the course of my observations on the Prisons Bill of 1894. I then observed that the trivial offender of tender years and yet undepraved morals, the honest and industrious citizen whom a momentary impulse of passion or violence of provocation had betrayed into the commission of an assault, the modest female whom the strength of temptation had impelled into a breach of trust or a petty theft, the young and artless who had been the dupes of the designing,—'the serious consequence of sending such offenders to prison and of allowing them to be contaminated by association with confirmed and hardened criminals, in whom the moral sense was altogether dead, would be at once apparent.' In the interest of justice and humanity, such culprits ought to be restored to society with warnings to amend their morals and to cultivate habits of honest industry. I therefore give my hearty support to these new provisions regarding the treatment of first offenders, which, while securing for the prisoner the element of punishment (for to a first offender the ignominy of standing as a felon in the dock is often a sufficient punishment) and of protection and reclamation, will act as a preventive against a prolific generation of crime.

"As regards section 565, requiring habitual offenders on release to give notice of their intended residence to the police, I may observe that I would have gladly welcomed the retention of the section as it was originally drafted, for I am of opinion that very strict police-supervision is necessary in the cases of habitual offenders. I am aware that, even after the recasting of the section by the Select Committee, it has been held by many that too much power has been left with the police—a power that will lend itself to abuse in their hands. I myself do not share these apprehensions. Having regard to the state of things in my own province, I welcome these provisions as most useful and necessary. That the framers of the law have been actuated by the very best intention will never be questioned. That surveillance ought to be exercised over habitual offenders, and that a system which has worked well in England, France and other continental countries should have a fair trial in this country, everyone will admit. Whether the rules laid down by the Local Governments will be worked with discrimination, or otherwise, by the police, is a different matter altogether, and one that rests entirely with the Executive. But the provision itself I consider a move in the right direction.

"My Lord, in conclusion, I would only be expressing the mind of many of my countrymen when I say that they gratefully appreciate the marked and in many respects satisfactory improvement which the Bill has undergone at the hands of the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble MAHARAJA BAHADUR OF DURBHANGA, with the special permission of the President, handed in a speech which he had prepared, but was unable, through indisposition, to deliver. It will be found at the end of these Proceedings (Appendix A).

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR P. ANANDA CHARLU said:—"This Bill contains a second batch of innovations as to the impolicy of which my conviction is just the same as what I avowed as to the first batch. But in closing the debate at the last meeting Your Lordship said that your Government would be satisfied with nothing less than what was given then. I hope that Your Lordship has not made up your mind to wind up to-day's debate also with a like decisive pronouncement. By and by and in dealing with the amendments of which Hon'ble Members have given notice, I shall endeavour to point out how the two cases are different and how certain of the arguments, insisted during the last debate on behalf of the Government, do themselves necessitate a departure in the present instance. In closing the debate on the last meeting of the Council, Your Lordship, in calm and dignified language, expressed the hope that when the Bill then on the eve of passing was given a fair trial, some of the feelings then excited might subside. Those were certainly reassuring words as regards the mode of trials in store for public men, and the grateful country has not been slow to value them highly. It will nevertheless be affectation on my part, if I say that, as yet, there have been any signs of such subsidence or any cause for it; for how could there be any such, when that fair trial is yet to take place, to which Your Lordship looked forward as calculated to allay anxieties, which, with the profoundest respect for Your Lordship, I cannot bring myself to regard as unduly excited. For all that, I feel bound to declare my sincere conviction that, notwithstanding the undiminished continuance of the apprehensions then entertained, the ebbing of the tide of excitement will be begun and greatly accelerated, if only we accept certain of the amendments on the agenda paper. That we can well do so may be easily shown. In following that course we shall be doing only what we ought to. Take for an instance those relating to the new section 108. It must be in the recollection of us all that, when we dealt with the new sections 124A, etc., of the Penal Code, it was strongly urged upon us, on behalf of the Government, that the prior sanction by the Local Governments would prove an effectual safeguard against unfair or hasty action by freakish or high-handed magistracy or police. That guarantee the Government is bound to extend to this analogous case. Its presence told heavily in favour of the Government then. Its absence ought, in logical and common fairness, tell in a like degree against the innovation now proposed. To leave the proposal at least without the modification which my friend Mr. Sayani has asked for, is tacitly and practically to let in that very state of things which Your Lordship rightly abhorred, viz., an executive control of the freedom of utterance by public men. Subtlety and ingenuity apart, nothing short of a concession in this respect will get rid of a strong impression to that effect from the minds of men of common sense; for if the safeguard of a prior sanction of the Local Government was necessary as regards sections 124A, etc., the present is an à fortiori case for it. The most cogent reason for the acceptance of some such amendment has yet to be told. It is this. It is the Government who, acting in its full sense of responsibility, asks for the power given by this section. Upon that Government its subjects have a right to lay the entire burden of responsibility by entreating it to take the initiative in this as in other matters of gravity. Despite much that might be said to the contrary, it is by the establishment of mutual confidence between the Government and the people that the smooth working of any measure can be ensured, and, having regard to this inter-dependence, the people are clearly entitled to secure the intercession of their Government against the tendencies and possibilities of busy policemen and hasty magistrates, smitten by what the Americans call "cursedness," or goaded by some real or fancied personal affront. Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that the action of the Government in matters like this is expected to ensure an intense and judicious caution, while neither the inquisitorial meddlesomeness of the police nor the exercise of even the judicial function of the magistracy is subject to any such wholesome break-power. Quite as much and nothing less is necessarily implied by all those provisions which prescribe a prior sanction, and I think that I venture on no debatable or unsafe ground in asking that a like provision be made to control the operation of section 108 of this Code as well. Reserving my further remarks to be made as the amendments come up, I think I may say at this stage that I believe, and I hope I am right in believing, that we have met to-day in a spirit of restored kindliness and with a frame of mind, not combative but prone to promote harmony; and I make bold to be sanguine that we shall proceed to consider this new sheaf of changes with a sympathetic regard for the not unjust fears felt all round and with a temper favourably disposed to make an offer of a fair measure of concessions to the public demand. Much of what I meant to add at this stage has already been well put by my friend Mr. Chitnavis. Without taking up time by repeating them, I shall conclude with saying that I heartily endorse almost all his remarks."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES said :—" My Lord, greatly improved as the Code now is in many respects over the old, thanks to the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep and the arduous labours of the Select Committee,—the first offenders and habitual offenders sections are a distinct gain—still there remains an amari aliquid though quite different from that which my hon'ble friend Mr. Ananda Charlu finds in it.

" My Lord, I regret the changes that have been made since the Bill was first published. Provisions introduced to strengthen the administration of the law and prevent innocent witnesses being put to serious inconvenience and enable swift justice to be done have been completely changed. The vigorous and masculine bantling which was conceived and brought to birth in the bracing air of the Himalayas has, in fact, suffered severely, as so many other babies do, since its transportation into the enervating air of Calcutta. This Council of Doctors will, I hope, administer, before we separate, a few strong tonics for restoring it to health. Curiously enough, my Lord, almost the last paper we received on the Bill confirms what I say. This has been sent us from the Secretary, Vakils' Association, Calcutta High Court, and expresses their gratitude to the members of the Select Committee for removing from the Bill as amended most of the objectionable matters in the Bill as originally framed. Now, my Lord, I have not a word to say against the vakils of Calcutta. They are, no doubt, a very intelligent body of men, who have expressed their opinion conscientiously, accordingly to their lights and their interests. That opinion, in common with the opinion of any other of Her Majesty's Indian subjects, merits, and no doubt will receive from this Council, dispassionate consideration. Were this a highly technical Bill like the Transfer of Property Act for instance or the Negotiable Instruments Act, one could receive the vakils' comments with much respect. But in regard to a Bill to enable the Government and its officers to keep order and repress and punish crime amongst Baluchis and Pathans, Rajputs and Sikhs, Jats and Mahrattas, when the Select Committee weakens it and the Bengali vakil applauds it, my Lord, it sounds suspicious. 'Non tali auxilio et defensoribus istis tempus eget,' which I may roughly translate for my friends who do not know Latin—the Calcutta vakils are not precisely the best advisers of Government in a matter of this kind.

"Another criticism, I venture to submit, is that the Code is far too long and contains a great amount of matter which is not required by 99 out of 100 of the persons who have to use it. What does a third-class Magistrate or a constable in the Sind Desert or Baluchistan or the Anamalli Hills want to know of the procedure in Presidency Magistrates' Courts or in the High Court for instance? Next, I submit, that in an Empire with at least 23 different nations and languages, it is a mistake to lay down too iron a procedure for the prevention and punishment of crime. Some years ago, when the Under Secretary of State for India, Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff, was speaking on the Act which enables Your Excellency's Government to make Regulations for certain parts of India, he said—

'There are certain districts in India which are scattered up and down, and which are not nearly up in point of civilisation to the ordinary level of Indian society, to which, in fact, the legislation, say, for example in Lower Bengal, is just about as applicable as the legislation which was good for Surrey, as Surrey is, in the year 1870, would have been to Lochabar on Strathspey in the year 1370.'

"And the same principle can, I submit, be extended more widely. Procedure is mostly a matter of pure local expediency, not of principle. There is no statute of procedure at all in England which is certainly a free country. You cannot of course avoid having one Code for all India in regard to some matters. Local Governments, for instance, cannot legislate so as to affect the jurisdiction of the High Courts. And there would be one particular danger in the Supreme Government letting too much power slip out of their hands, viz., provisions might be extended to one province which could not be allowed to another, and trouble might arise from that. Still there are a good many minute details as to the arrest, taking security, bail, summonsing and examination of witnesses, which the Government of India might wash its hands of and leave to local Police Acts. The Code in its origin was only tentative. It began with 445 sections; 90 more were added in 1872 by Sir Fitzjames Stephen, and it is now 565 sections long. And you may think this Code will last; but its very expansion makes it only the more vulnerable. Since Lord Hobhouse and Mr. Whitley Stokes tried their hands on it in 1882, no less than 16 amending Acts, or on an average one a year, have had to be passed to fill up omissions and make the law clear; and so it will be with this Code. My Hon'ble friend on my left has written a magnificent portly volume full of rulings on previous Codes. Perhaps some one may think it will now shrink to more handy dimensions. Is it not plain that the more we add to the Code the greater the opportunity we give for divergent interpretations? Take, for example, a sensible section of the first Code, to the effect that mere irregularity in procedure should not as such entitle a guilty person to be acquitted. Promptly the High Courts set to work to say of this and that irregularity that it was not an irregularity, but a breach of the law, and did vitiate the proceedings, and this Council long ago came to the stage of making long catalogues of irregularities that do not vitiate proceedings, and now we are to solemnly enact (on account of one sapient Court's decision) that if a Magistrate in the hurry of signing his daily correspondence has initialled a warrant instead of signing his name in full, this warrant is not void. Could anything be more ridiculous? Each High Court, too, as the Council knows, is a law unto itself, and if Mr. Justice Rhadamanthus sitting in Bombay says 'black is black' we too often find Mr. Justice Minos sitting in Calcutta say 'No, black is white.' When this Bill becomes law, the lawyers will pounce upon it like a pack of hounds on a fox. They will tear it to shreds in no time, each one striving so far as he can, and as it suits his own views to put his own interpretation on what the Legislature must have meant. My Hon'ble friend's treatise will soon be double its present thickness. And the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers or his successor will wearily and disheartened have to try and put the Code straight again. I well remember, my Lord, a speech by Sir Fitzjames Stephen, or perhaps Mr. Whitley Stokes, in which the superior merits of Codes over case-law were extolled. And, my Lord, if Government itself refrained from publishing the various decisions of the different High Courts, and if the Judges, as some of them do, refused to hear cases quoted and stuck to the plain provisions of the law, applying it to each case as it arose, Codes would be admirable things. But there are Judges who will not stick to the Code. Nothing pleases them better than to write reams of references, not merely to Indian, but to English, cases. And the Government publishes these, though expense precludes more than a small part of the magistracy having access to them So you get back to case-law after all. My Lord, it is impossible for the Council, whatever its wisdom and capacity, to foresee every point that may arise in interpreting the Code. It is Sisyphus over again, and the more you amend, the more weapons you put into the hands of a narrow-minded section of the Bar which has not been nurtured in English air or on English traditions. They look not to the object of the law but fight about the meaning of the English language, while there are individuals who deliberately use the provisions of the Code to obstruct the administration of justice by way of showing their independence. You tie up your Judges and magistracy in a tightly tied tangle of codified red tape to prevent the misuse of arbitrary power in the theory of it, while you deliberately refrain from attempting to control the abuses of the Bar in your desire, as Englishmen, to give an accused every fair chance. However, I do not like to take up the time of the Council with further criticisms. We have got the Code, and all we can do is leave as few loopholes as possible for misinterpretation; and this, I believe, thanks to the labours of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers and the Members of the Select Committee, has been done. Still I cannot help feeling that the Code should be much shorter and that the sooner much elaborate detail is cut out the better.

"One more remark I venture to make, my Lord, even at the risk of repeating myself. Let me invite attention to one portion of the letter sent to us by the Calcutta Bar in regard to one clause of the Bill:

'The Bar cannot regard the fact that the Governments of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces. Madras, Bombay and Burma and the majority of the authorities consulted approve the decision of the Allahabad High Court as sufficient to close the discussion on this point. The opinion of such purely executive bodies cannot be accepted as in any way conclusive on a legal question of this kind.'

"I have not mentioned this on account of the ex cathedra tone adopted, but I wish to express the hope and confidence that 'that purely executive body,' the Government of India, will in the future as in the past consult and act upon the practical opinions of the Local Governments rather than upon the views of legal theorists when passing an important Bill of this kind; for a great deal of the peace of the country depends upon it."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said:—"I wish to say a few words with reference to the speeches made by the Hon'ble Members of this Council who preceded me. It seems to me that the remarks we have been listening to are hardly applicable to a motion to consider the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill. They would seem to me to be more appropriate when either the Bill is introduced or when the motion was put that the Bill be passed, and I am trembling to think what may overtake us when that stage may be reached."

The Hon'ble BABU JOY GOBIND LAW said:—"My Lord, in considering the Bill as a whole, there is one fact which stands out conspicuously, and that is, that it embodies to a great extent the suggestions of the executive officers of the Government, and very little the recommendations of the non-official communities. Naturally those who are charged with the administration of a district or division and are responsible for its peace would wish to be possessed of as much power as possible, but the question arises whether those who are governed would view it in the same light, and from the number of amendments on the notice-paper it is apparent that this is not the case. Now I do not wish to be misunderstood. I am far from suggesting that the governing classes wish to have powers for the purpose of misusing them; on the contrary, I willingly give them credit for the best intentions; but, my Lord, so long as human nature is what it is, there will always be some danger of misuse, not intentional misuse, but sometimes misuse with the best motives. Therefore, my Lord, it is absolutely necessary that safeguards should be provided. Now, the revisional power of the High Courts is one of these safeguards, but it is now intended to take it away to a certain extent. Look at clause 108, empowering Magistrates to require persons to show cause why they should not be bound down for good behaviour. Now, this appears to me to be going behind the substantive law which was passed the other day. What we are saying to the person concerned is in effect something like this: 'you are charged with such and such an offence; we are not going to put you on your trial and have you convicted, but we order that you find surety, and, if you fail to do so, you must go to jail'; and this notwithstanding the fact that the person has never been put on his trial. Now these are a few of the instances which await consideration, and in considering them I have no doubt the Council will look at the clauses of the Bill, not only from the point of view of the administrator and the executive officer, but also from that of those who will be affected by them. It is also to be remembered that the Council is not legislating in view of an emergency."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH said:—"Taking a lesson from the laconic speech by the Hon'ble Sir H. Prinsep, just delivered, I should like, on this occasion, to be as brief as I possibly can. On the whole, I am entirely in favour of the second reading of the Bill, so to say, I could not be otherwise. I must at least be loyal to my own position. I sat on the Select Committee and shared in the protracted discussion that we had there from day to day. Of course, I have to move and support certain amendments, which I propose to maintain. Beyond that, I think, I have not much to say against the Bill, or its general arrangement. No such measure, I presume, can be ideally perfect, and that observation would equally apply to the proposed legislation."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI said:—"My Lord, I beg leave to make a few observations upon the Bill before the Council. It is a Bill consisting of 565 sections, besides 5 schedules. It is mainly a Consolidation Bill, with the exception of two important amendments. To consider the Bill properly the Select Committee would have had to go through the whole of the mass of literature in the shape of both criticisms and suggestions, as also through various judicial decisions. This part of the work was performed by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep. Owing to this fact, as also to the great industry and the deep insight and experience which he brought to bear upon the Bill, and the great care and impartiality, as also the lucidity and brevity, with which he placed the pith of the whole of the aforesaid criticisms and suggestions and the decisions before the Select Committee, the work of the Select Committee was much lightened. Without the aforesaid aid the Select Committee would have found the task entrusted to it a most laborious one, and would in all probability have not been able to place its Report before the Council in time to allow of its consideration during the current session. For the valuable aid thus rendered the Select Committee owes its acknowledgments to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep, and as one of the members of that Committee I avail myself of this opportunity and beg publicly to tender to him my grateful thanks.

"Referring to the Bill generally, it may be observed that, in the form in which it went to the Select Committee, its general tendency was towards enhancing the powers of the Police and of the Magistracy and restricting the remedies of the accused; that tendency has to some extent been modified, but the Bill, even in its present form, is not what it ought to be; further modification is desirable, but almost impossible, as it is very difficult to get a Bill materially altered in Council, after it has emerged from the Select Committee.

"As to the two amendments hereinbefore referred to, notice had been given of them in the Council on the 21st December last. They form a part of the intended legislation announced on that date. The portion relating to the Penal Code has already become law. The portion relating to the Criminal Procedure Code Bill was placed before the Select Committee, and has been considerably modified by it. My opinion regarding these latter amendments is the same as I expressed regarding the former at the last sitting of the Council. I humbly think these amendments, even in their modified form, ought not to be passed.

"It was stated that the amendments were intended 'to supplement the substantive law by providing a prompt and workable procedure.' Primâ facie, I admit, it is a good intention, provided the substantive law which is intended to be supplemented has been generally approved of and is such as has to be daily applied in the ordinary course of the administration of justice. Neither of these conditions, I submit, is present in the case of the substantive law which is intended to be now supplemented. Indeed, the substantive law evoked considerable opposition, instead of approval, and in its former form had generally been allowed to remain a dead-letter, and circumstances have not arisen to put it now in constant force. In ordinary times such law is, by a consensus of opinion, hardly resorted to, even in countries where the rulers and the ruled belong to the same community and speak the same language and the ruled are adequately represented in the Councils of the rulers. There is the greater reason, therefore, why such law should not be resorted to in a country like India, under the British rule, inasmuch as the rulers and the ruled are of different communities, speak different languages, and the ruled cannot effectually bring their views and sentiments, even on important questions, to the notice of the rulers, and as a necessary consequence freedom of speech and writing are indispensable to avoid misunderstanding, and form a useful medium of conveying the real sentiments of the ruled regarding the measures, the actions and the policy of Government, and contribute to successful administration; for in every country the administration is rendered successful only so far as the acts and the measures of Government approximate to the genuine requirements of the subjects, and the more the administrative and the legislative machinery of Government is in touch with popular thought and feeling, the better it is for the Government as well as for the subjects. The so-called 'prompt and workable procedure' hereinbefore referred to and intended to 'supplement the substantive law,' will simply tend to prevent the expression of the real sentiments of the people, and thus, instead of doing any good to either the rulers or the ruled, contribute to render still more wide the wide enough gulf already existing between them.

"It has been contended on behalf of Government, 'How much license of speech can be safely allowed is a question of time and place,' that 'Language may be tolerated in England which is unsafe to tolerate in India, because in India it is apt to be transformed into action instead of passing off as harmless gas,' that 'in legislating for India we must have regard to Indian conditions, and we must rely mainly on the advice of those who speak under the weight of responsibility and have the peace and good government of India under their charge.' Further, it has been suggested 'that the safeguards to honest discussion and disapprobation as distinguished from disaffection lie not merely, perhaps not so much, in the expressions in which the law may be clothed as in the judicial common-sense with which the law will be applied and the political common-sense with which the rights of free discussion will be used.' At the same time it is also admitted that 'the advantages of free and intelligent criticism and discussion of the acts and measures of Government, and of pointing out abuses and failures and suggesting remedies are apparent and undeniable, and the liberty of the Press is a household word dear to the heart of every Englishman, that a large number of the newspapers in India, English and Vernacular, have carried out these objects and have discharged their duties as fearless critics to the benefit alike of governors and governed,' that 'contentment and good-will can only be produced by just and beneficent government and not by repressive legislation.' In fact, no Government ought to check or retard the educational or political advancement of the people under its charge, for to do so can in the long run only tend to the prejudice of both the Government and the people. The law is but the mirror reflecting the spirit of Government, and the expression of public criticism can only follow general modes of thought, habits of life, and form of language. It is true there has lately been a considerable progress in education, and the English language and Western thought have been to some extent adopted in this country. But the Indian people, as a whole, are slow, and Government has to be watchful that legislation does not press too heavily on the tender plant of liberty and of civilisation which has been sown by itself.

"I shall now refer to the new amendments. One of them is the new section 108. In order to ascertain how it will affect the people, it will be sufficient to express what the section really is in its full details. The section runs :—

'Whenever a Chief Presidency or District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class specially empowered by the Local Government in this behalf has information that there is within the limits of his jurisdiction any person who within or without such limits, either orally or in writing, disseminates or attempts to disseminate or in anywise abets the dissemination of—

(a) any seditious matter, that is to say, any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(b) any matter the publication of which is punishable under section 153A of the Indian Penal Code, or

(c) any matter concerning a Judge which amounts to criminal intimidation or defamation under the Indian Penal Code, such Magistrate may (in manner hereinafter provided) require such person to show cause why he should not be ordered to execute a bond, with or without sureties, for his good behaviour for such period, not exceeding one year, as the Magistrate thinks fit to fix.'

"Section 124 A of the Indian Penal Code provides—

'Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection, towards, Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished.'

"Section 153A of the Indian Penal Code provides—

'Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations, or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects, shall be punished.

"The word 'Judge' under the Indian Penal Code denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such a judgment.'

"A person is said to commit criminal intimidation when he—

'threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act, which that person is legally entitled to do as the means of avoiding execution of such threat.'

"A person is said to defame who—

'by words, either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations, makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person, intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm, the reputation of such person.

'A person abets the doing of a thing who instigates any person to do that thing, or engages with one or more other person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy and in order to the doing of that thing, or intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.'

"It is obvious from the above statement of the section that the section in its full development is so wide and so far-reaching as to be capable of being easily made applicable to any person, however well-meaning, honest or inoffensive such person may be. Any person may become liable to be taken up under the section. The section, therefore, will be a standing menace to all persons, as it is impossible in human nature to remain absolutely silent or perfectly passive. What is more, it will press more heavily on good persons, who will always be afraid of coming under the law, whilst reckless persons will become more reckless than before, as both careful and careless persons will be alike liable to fall under the law. When law is too severe, the people are likely to become more reckless.

"But, as if this is not sufficiently bad, the information to put the Magistrate in motion need not be in writing, much less upon oath or solemn affirmation; nay, further, the informant need not be a respectable or a reliable person. He may be an unworthy, unreliable or even disreputable person; and yet on his information, which may be good, bad or indifferent, a Magistrate may proceed. Further, under certain circumstances the word "may" has to be construed as 'shall,' and the Magistrate under those circumstances shall be bound to proceed.

"Again, no previous Government sanction is necessary for initiating such proceedings. The Magistrate is free to proceed against any person at his own will, and practically upon his own motion, provided such person happens to be personally within his jurisdiction; and it does not matter at all whether such person is alleged to commit the act or to abet the act within or without the jurisdiction of such Magistrate.

"Again, the person proceeded against is not entitled to know who the informant is, and he has no means of proceeding against the informant even if such information is deliberately and maliciously false, inasmuch as the information is not on oath or affirmation. He has no opportunity of cross-examining the informant in order to show to the Magistrate that there cannot be any foundation for the information or that the informant is not worthy of credit. In fact, the person proceeded against is in the position of a person who is suddenly stabbed in the dark and is to be treated as a criminal, and his reputation and his position in society are liable to be taken away from him without giving him a proper chance of establishing his innocence or defending his character.

"Now, when such person informed against is brought before the Magistrate, he has to show cause under the section why he should not be ordered to execute a bond with or without sureties for his good behaviour. In other words, the information which, as has been already above pointed out, may not be worth credence at all, is to be taken as a primâ facie case against him, and he is to be put on his defence. He has to show cause why he should not be bound over, or, in other words, to prove that the information against him is not true. The principle of English law is that every man is to be presumed to be innocent unless and until he is proved to be guilty. But this section makes a diametrically opposite presumption, namely, that all persons informed against are to be presumed to be guilty. What cause can such person show? It is generally difficult, sometimes impossible, to prove a negative. The only thing a person under these circumstances can possibly do is to state that the information is false and that he is a respectable person; and he may call a few persons to state that they know him and believe him to be a respectable person. Thus the inquiry provided for under section 117 as to the truth of the information and the injunction to take such further evidence as may appear necessary are almost futile. In almost all such cases the inquiry must end against the informed person, as the Magistrate may not be satisfied.

"Now, if the Magistrate is not satisfied, he can make an order on the 'informed' person to execute a bond for good behaviour for a period not exceeding one year and also that he should give sureties. In fact, the person is to be treated as a vagrant or a suspected person (see section 109), or as if he were 'by habit a robber, house-breaker or thief or by habit a receiver of stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen, or habitually protecting or harbouring thieves or aiding in the concealment or disposal of stolen property or habitually committing mischief, extortion or cheating or attempting to do so,' the only difference between the latter and the person informed against under section 108 being (1) that the person informed against is to be called upon to give security for a period up to one year whilst the habitual offender is to be called upon to give security for a period up to three years, and (2) that the person informed against may be called upon to give sureties whilst the habitual offender must be called upon to give sureties (see section 110).

"Now, supposing the person informed against is ordered to give sureties and he is not able to give sureties—which is not at all improbable, having regard to the fact that he will be considered as a person obnoxious to the authorities—then 'he shall be committed to prison' (see section 123), and such imprisonment may be rigorous or simple (see section 123, clause 5), that is, the person may be punished with rigorous imprisonment which may extend to one year.

"From the above statement of the effect of section 108 and the manner in which it is liable to operate, the following conclusions, it is humbly submitted, may reasonably be drawn:—

(a) that it is an impolitic section, inasmuch as it is contrary to the ordinary principles of the administration of justice and goes far beyond the limits usually observed in such matters;

(b) that it is an unfair section, inasmuch as it is contrary to the principles of English law, and to justice, equity and good conscience;

(c) that it is an unjust section, inasmuch as it is inconsistent with the other parts of the Indian criminal law and procedure;

(d) that it is a demoralising section, inasmuch as it is calculated to silence careful people and to make careless people more careless still, or, in other words, to stop good people from expressing their honest opinions and to make bad people worse; it will prevent people whose opinion is worth listening to from speaking out, and tend to increase the volume of mischievous sound;

(e) that it will put too much power in the hands of the police and the Magistracy;

(f) that it is calculated to create and to increase unrest, although the ostensible object of the section is to diminish and remove such unrest, as it is a matter of political danger;

(g) that it is calculated to encourage bad people, who will be enabled by means of the section to feed upon innocent people by keeping them in fear of being falsely informed against, and thus create the disturbance of public tranquillity, to diminish and remove which disturbance it is to be enacted;

(h) that it is calculated to prejudice Government, as it will unjustly tend to diminish its popularity.

"For the reasons hereinbefore stated the best course would be to drop the section altogether. If, however, Government has made up its mind to enact the section, and cannot see its way to abandon it, then, it is humbly submitted, Government will be pleased to allow the section to be modified so as to render it less liable to the objections above enumerated. It is the principle of the English law that it is better that nine guilty persons should escape rather than that one innocent person should suffer. English love of justice and fair play is proverbial. It was only the other day that an eminent English Judge is reported to have publicly stated in England—

'In the struggle now going on among the nations to secure the largest share of the commerce of the world, their best hope of securing their share consisted, not so much in any appeal to force but in the fact that wherever the English commercial community went, they carried with them that sense of justice which recommended English commerce and Englishmen of commerce to every one with whom they dealt.'

"There was very recently a unanimous chorus of hostile criticism in the Anglo-Indian Press in Calcutta and in other places in India, as also in the Press in England, against the new Sedition Act. Was it because the Anglo-Indian Press or the Anglo-Indian community or Englishmen at home were afraid that the new Act would be put in force against them or any of them? No. It was their sense of justice, their sense of fair play, and not fear, that prompted them freely and fearlessly to express their disapprobation against the measure. Even Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for India is reported to have said that repression was not intended, and the Government had no desire to coerce the Native Press, which requires guidance and not restraint. The section, therefore, ought to be hemmed in by providing that it shall not be put into force against any person without the previous sanction of the Local Government, that the orders thereunder made shall be subject to appeal, that the information upon which a Magistrate may act shall be on oath or solemn affirmation, that the whole of such information, together with the name and address of the informant, shall be communicated to the person informed against, that no surety shall be required, and that the period for which the bond may be called for shall be a very limited one, and that the imprisonment in default shall be simple.

"History teaches us that empires are best maintained by justice and mercy, which are their most permanent foundations, as they produce love and confidence on the part of the people.

"The people of India are extremely loyal and law-abiding, and the generosity of Government will only make it more popular and stronger, and its mercy, justice, judgment and sympathy will become more prominent; for clemency, though it may at moments seem to be weakness, is in reality only another form of prudence, and, whatever may be the faults of the Indian people, ingratitude is not one of them.

"Coming now to the change proposed to be made in Schedule II, column 8, section 124A, the observations made regarding section 108 are also applicable to this proposal. The pleas put forward are (1) that it is advisable to provide a simple and easy method of trying trivial offences and trival offenders, and (2) the publication and notoriety consequent on solemn proceedings which defeat their own object should be avoided. If the latter argument is pursued to its logical consequences, it may even be concluded that even a summary trial before a Magistrate is inadvisable, as, though it is summary yet it must result in some publication and notoriety. As to the former argument, the nature of the offence is such that the accused must necessarily have a formal trial, inasmuch as the administration of law has to be carried on upon the rules of justice, equity and good conscience, and the offences of the nature covered by section 124A must be tried with all the formality and safeguards hitherto observed. Trial of political offences ought not to be easily resorted to and ought not to be easily resortable. A great, strong, just and sympathetic Government ought not to be easily aroused to stoop to notice slight ebullitions of temper on the part of its subjects, for a frequent resort to a law of this nature, instead of raising the prestige of Government, will only tend to lower it. Trivial offenders and trivial offences ought to be left severely alone.

"Again, if the proposed change is made, an Indian accused will be tried by a Magistrate without jury and will be liable to be sentenced to rigorous imprisonment which may extend to two years. On the other hand, if the accused happens to be an European, he can only be tried by jury and sentenced up to six months. Thus the mode of trial and the amount of punishment will both be different in the two cases. That this tendency to differentiate the trials of the European and the Native subjects is neither fair nor politic will, I hope, be admitted on all hands.

"I will now proceed to notice some of the proposed changes in the Bill, treated as a Consolidation Bill.

"Sections 162 and 172.—These sections as originally drafted were highly objectionable, inasmuch as they were calculated to prevent informations given to the police from being reduced to writing, and, if reduced to writing, from being signed, and in either case from being used by or on behalf of the accused in order to enable them to contradict the informants or the police. The sections were in fact entirely in favour of the police and its informants and against the accused. The old law took cognizance of the fact that in a considerable number of cases the evidence afforded by the history of a prosecution as gleaned from the information given to the police from time to time was very useful in coming to a correct conclusion, and that it was by a reference to this information that many innocent persons had been enabled to regain their freedom, and the novel change sought to be introduced naturally attracted public attention. The new sections were accordingly considered and reconsidered, were to a certain extent modified, and ultimately assumed their present form. They are still materially different from the existing law on the subject. To understand the matter fully it should be remembered that usually some person goes to the police and tenders information, or the police ask for information of some person. Upon information thus obtained the police initiates proceedings and evidence accumulates, and it frequently happens that the case at a later stage either assumes an exaggerated form or changes colour or is otherwise materially affected. The accused or those who appear for him naturally want to see on what basis the case was first initiated, and whether it has since changed, and if so how, so as to be in a position to contradict the police and its informants and thus show conclusively why the Court should not attach undue weight either to the first information or to the subsequent additions or changes or otherwise, as the case may be. It was objected, however, that the information formed a part of the prosecutor's brief, that usually information was not correctly written down, as the police were so over-worked as not to be able to do so. It was even contended that, if the information was required to be used, it should be 'proved' by the accused before it could be used. The above objections and contention have only to be stated to carry their own refutation, and it is to be hoped that the present law will be allowed to remain in the interests of justice and of fair play, inasmuch as it is both unjust and unfair that persons should be allowed to come forward to attack the innocence and the character of fellow human beings, and yet be shielded from being shown up in their true colour or from being exposed for telling untrue or incorrect tales and fabricating false evidence.

"Section 275.—The Council is aware that, under the present law, on the Original Criminal side of the High Courts, all offences are tried by a jury; that before the Court of Session in the mufussal in some districts, certain offences are tried by a jury. The difference in constitution between the High Court jury and the Sessions Court jury is that in the mufassal the majority of the jury should, at the option of the accused, practically consist of his own countrymen. A question regarding this difference was raised in Select Committee, and the answer given was that it was a very large question which had been recently gone into, and it was not intended to re-open it for some time. Primâ facie, there seems to be no reason why the system should not be assimilated.

"Section 439, clause (5).—This clause is unnecessarily harsh and will, it is hoped, be allowed to be omitted.

"Section 526, clause (8).—It is submitted that the trial should not proceed beyond the stage at which the accused is called on for his defence. To do otherwise would be to defeat the very object of the section, for it would be giving the right with the one hand and taking it away with the other. What is the use of allowing a person to apply for a transfer if the Court against which the application is to be made is to be allowed to go on with the trial to the end?

"In conclusion, I beg to say that, having regard to the bulk of the Bill and its importance, it is satisfactory to note that the sections really objected to are few, and that, but for the two amendments and a very few of the consolidation sections, there would have been no very hostile criticism. This fact shows how careful and assiduous my Hon'ble friend the Legal Member has been over the Bill; and having regard to the fact that my Hon'ble friend has been lately exposed to such a large and voluminous amount of unfavourable criticism, I think it is my duty to express my admiration for the mastery of law, great assiduity and concentration of attention which the Hon'ble Member has brought to bear upon his work."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN said :—"I am sure that the Council have listened with interest to the general observations addressed to it on the subject of the Criminal Procedure Code, but, so far as the speeches have concerned specific sections of the Code, I think that the Council will agree with my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep that the discussion upon those particular sections had better be taken when we reach the sections concerned."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—" Various points have been raised in the course of the discussion on the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration. For the most part I think these points would have been more conveniently discussed when we came to consider the particular clauses. In fact, the discussion has turned rather on particular provisions than on general principles. But one or two questions of general principles have been raised, and perhaps at this stage I may say a few words in reply. My friend Mr. James has certainly raised some general questions about the form of this Code, and I think that taking his speech as a whole we may say that he has damned it with faint praise. Well, to a great extent I agree with him, but he must be aware that there are limitations under which we undertook to do this Code. As I said before, it is a consolidation Bill. What we are doing is on the whole useful work. We are reducing sixteen Acts into one, and the Committee, for whose labours I am exceedingly obliged, have done all they can in revising these sixteen Acts now consolidated into one to remove doubtful points—points of doubt and difficulty—which have arisen on the construction of those Acts. I quite agree—and I am sure that all the members of the Select Committee will agree with me—that though we worked hard and assiduously, we do not regard our labours as final. In a Code of this sort there will always be defects, in a Code of this complexity fresh points will always arise, and no doubt as they arise they will have to be met by fresh legislation. In a matter of this kind you cannot have finality, and a man who would talk about finality in legislation of this kind would be about as wise as a man who would talk about finality in boots and shoes. Legislation in course of time wears out. Legislation in matters of procedure has to be adapted from time to time to the varying wants of the people to whom it is to be applied, and of course there are always circumstances which cannot be foreseen and which when they arise result in conflicting decisions of the High Courts which the Legislature has eventually to remove. I quite agree with my friend Mr. James that the old Code of 1861, which I am sorry to say we are both of us old enough to remember, was a shorter, and I venture to think a better, Code than the present; but it would create the greatest possible confusion if we attempted to get rid of the Code which has now been in force for fifteen years and to substitute a new and even a better Code. That is a task which the Government of India are certainly not prepared to undertake. Looking at this Code as an English lawyer, I must say I am struck by its complexity, its cumbrousness, its over-minuteness, its attempt, which must be futile, to regulate every case that can possibly arise; but I am assured by those who know India better than I do that people in India like to have every movement and action of their lives regulated by law, and that this Code, though it would be utterly and absolutely unsuited to England, where matters are left to the discretion and practice of the Courts, is nevertheless required and necessary in India. At any rate in the present Bill we propose simply to consolidate and as far as we can to clear up difficulties in the existing law and to go very little further. Well, now I come to some general remarks made by my friend Mr. Sayani. He has given us a very careful and a very able criticism on certain details of the Bill, and when we come to those details we shall be able no doubt to consider them; but there were one or two general observations of his to which I must say I take exception. He says that in this legislation against sedition we are preventing people from expressing their real sentiments. Well, I am sorry to hear that, because all we are dealing with and all we are endeavouring to prevent are offences against the law of the land, and I hope he does not mean that people cannot express their real sentiments without offending against the law. To quote again his words that "good people cannot express their honest opinions" without contravening and disobeying the general law of the land. What is it that the Penal Code makes punishable? It makes sedition punishable, and it makes the offence of stirring up class hatred punishable. I really hope that when people express feelings which are seditious, or that when people are trying to stir up hatred of class against class, they are not expressing the real sentiments of the Indian people, and I do not think they are. Fair criticism we do not touch, honest criticism we do not touch; we are glad to have it, and it seems to me that there is ample scope for writing, and that a good man can honestly express his thoughts, without raising class hatred and without stirring up hatred against the Government established by law in British India. I have before me, I am sorry to say, some very recent extracts from the Native Press which certainly, reading between the lines, appear to me to be attacking the measures of the Government for dealing with the plague in Bombay and which endeavour to stir up the people against the plague precautions—precautions in which the officers of Government are risking their lives to save the people. And what is the result? We have seen it in to-day's papers which give us the details of the sangunary riots at Bombay Are the Government right or are the Government wrong to make an effort to check writings and speeches which so quickly bear such evil fruit?"

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"I only wish to say a word on a point of order. If I had understood the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep to make a distinct appeal to me, of course I would have given a decision at the moment; but as the question has been mooted I think it right to say that I do not think that any discussion which has taken place on this occasion has been out of order. It has always been the practice, and I think a convenient practice, of this Council that on a motion for taking into consideration the Report of a Select Committee full opportunity should be given for the discussion of the general principles of the measure. That is in accordance with Parliamentary practice, either on a motion for going into Committee on a Bill, which is practically what the Council are going to do now, or when after Committee the Bill is reported to the House; and I think that in many ways the particular motion which we are now considering is a perfectly proper and convenient stage at which to take a general discussion on the principles of the measure. Of course I can quite see that it is inconvenient that Hon'ble Members should take the opportunity of a general debate to enter into the discussions of the particular clauses which are going to be moved hereafter, but that is a point for their own consideration having regard to the convenience of their colleagues in the Council, and I did not see anything which occurred to-day on which I thought it proper to interfere."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL moved that in clause 10, sub-clause (2), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "for a period not exceeding six months" the words "for such period as the Local Government may consider necessary" be substituted. He said:—"My Lord, in moving the first amendment that stands in my name, I would wish to say that the Bill as now presented to the Council is the result of very careful and prolonged consideration by the Select Committee, and while I approve generally of its provisions I think that amendment on two points is called for.

"In section 10 (2) the period for which a Local Government may appoint Additional District Magistrates has been limited to six months, on expiry of which the appointment will cease, although in some places extensions will be absolutely necessary.

"Fresh appointments can no doubt be made under the provisions of the section, but this will give rise to unnecessary correspondence and at times probably cause inconvenience. The Government of the Punjab have in their opinion on the Bill pointed out that the proposed sub-section will not meet the difficulty felt in the Province to which I belong, and there seems to be no reason why any period should be fixed.

"The matter is one entirely for the Local Governments, and, if appointments were left to their discretion, all cases, whatever the necessary time may be, i.e., more or less than six months, would be met. If the Local Governments are granted power to make such appointments for six months, they can unobjectionably be given the power to make appointments for more than that period when this is found to be absolutely necessary.

"With these remarks I commend the motion to the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—" I am sorry to say I cannot ask the Council to accept my friend's amendment, and I will shortly tell him the reasons. The section gives a new power. It enables a Magistrate of the first class to be appointed as Additional District Magistrate for a period not exceeding six months. My friend wishes to cut out the six months, but clearly it is not advisable that in ordinary cases there should be two kings of Brentford. We do not want two District Magistrates except under special emergencies. Of course, say in the case of famine, plague or any sudden calamity, when the District Magistrate's whole time is taken up in dealing with that calamity, it is desirable that somebody else should be able to carry on his ordinary routine work, but we think that the period of six months is a full period to be allowed for this particular appointment, and of course in any case of urgency a fresh appointment could be made, but we think that ordinarily the appointment ought not to be made for more than six months and that the Local Government ought to appoint a Magistrate expressly if they wish to have an Additional Magistrate after the six months have expired."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES said .—" I have no intention of voting for my Hon'ble friend's amendment, as it is not accepted by the Government of India, but I may say that it would be certainly an advantage in some parts of India to have the power. For instance, when the present district of the Upper Sind frontier is joined to the District of Shikarpur, in accordance with a scheme that has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State, it will probably be very desirable to give the powers of a District Magistrate to the first Assistant Collector at Jacobabad, so as to alter our relations with the Baluch tribes as little as possible. Similar arrangements have been made in the Bombay Presidency before. The Hon'ble Sir Arthur Trevor will recollect that in the Panch Mahals the first Assistant Collector was invested with the full powers of a District Magistrate. As my Hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers says that the Government is not prepared to accept the amendment I do not wish to press it, but I simply make the remark that it might be a convenience in the Punjab and in other places as well."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said :—" My Lord, since this amendment seems to have been suggested by the letter from the Bengal Government which was issued under my authority, I think it as well to say that I am satisfied with the provision in the Bill. As this is an exceptional power, I think it well that it should be given in such a way that the matter should not escape attention. The Bill as originally framed allowed a term of three months only, but this has been increased by the Select Committee to six months."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said :—"I agree with the remarks made by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens."

The motion was put and negatived.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR moved that to clause 18 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following sub-clause be added, namely :—

"(2) The powers of a Presidency Magistrate under this Code shall be exercised by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, or by a salaried Presidency Magistrate, or by any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government to sit singly, or by any Bench of Presidency Magistrates."

He said :—"I desire to submit, for the consideration of the Council, certain amendments designed to make clear and improve the position of Presidency Magistrates as left by the Select Committee. I am strongly opposed to any unnecessary interference with the existing jurisdiction of the Presidency Magistrates. I do not propose to take up the time of the Council by a detailed account of the origin and the history of these Courts. They are in fact a survival of English law. Under Act XIII of 1856, the powers of the old Police Magistrates (now the Stipendiary Magistrates) were defined. They might try summarily all cases which they were competent to dispose of finally. They could in offences against property sentence up to six months without appeal when the value of the property did not exceed Rs. 50. In offences against the person they could deal with all which were not felonies, sentencing without appeal up to four months. In all other cases they committed to the Supreme Court. No procedure was laid down for their guidance. By the Presidency Magistrates Act of 1877, a procedure was laid down and their powers were raised to those held by first-class Magistrates in the mufassal, but no appeal was given from sentences of imprisonment up to six months or fine up to Rs. 200. These provisions were reproduced in the Code as it now stands. No complaint has, so far as I am aware, ever been made regarding this final jurisdiction of the Presidency Magistrates. The High Court has in its revisionary jurisdiction ample power of setting right any mistakes made, but in fact the interference of the High Court is seldom invoked.

"In one respect, however, there has been a departure in Calcutta from the intention of the Legislature when passing the Presidency Magistrates Act. It seems clear that the intention was that the Magistrates should be Stipendiaries and trained officers. The wording of the Act of 1877 permitted the appointments of non-Stipendiary Magistrates, and large advantage has been taken of that by the Local Government to appoint Honorary Magistrates who may be gentlemen without any legal training, and who may exercise, sitting singly or in Benches, the full powers of the Stipendiary Magistrates.

"Now I think it certainly desirable that such powers should only be exercised by persons duly qualified. I think they may be safely exercised by any Stipendiary Magistrate and by those among the Honorary Magistrates whom the Government may deem qualified by experience or training to exercise a co-ordinate jurisdiction. I am also willing to allow them to be exercised by Benches of Honorary Magistrates, because we can by rule regulate the composition of these Benches, and in the plurality of Judges there will probably be wisdom. But beyond this I would not go. The Government is much indebted to the gentlemen who give up their time to the work of the magistracy, and of the services of many of these we shall be glad to avail ourselves as heretofore, but there is no doubt that some gentlemen are 'honorary' not merely in the sense that they are unpaid, but as having been appointed solely honoris causa, and they must till they gain experience sit with other Magistrates. I do not think it necessary to complicate work in Calcutta and increase the appellate work of either the Chief Presidency Magistrate or the High Court by giving socond or third-class powers to individual Honorary Magistrates. I move therefore the amendments standing in my name. That to section 18 gives effect to the foregoing proposals. That to section 21 empowers the Local Government to settle the subordination of the Presidency Magistrate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate—a matter which is not sufficiently met by the power to make rules. In section 411 I propose to restore to the Presidency Magistrates their existing powers."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"I think the Government may accept the amendment proposed by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. The gist of the matter is this. The Madras Government on two occasions proposed to us that Presidency Magistrates should be made subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate in the same manner as Magistrates in the mufassal are subordinate to. the District Magistrate, and that on the whole seems to be a right principle. My Hon'ble friend Mr. Sayani informs me that in Bombay the Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and that he exercises powers over them somewhat like those which a Chief Justice exercises over the Judges of the High Court. The question is really a Bengal question. It is only in Bengal that you have Honorary Presidency Magistrates. No doubt the Code contemplated Stipendiary Presidency Magistrates, but the system of appointing Honorary Magistrates has grown up in Calcutta, and in Calcutta alone, and it is therefore a Bengal question. No doubt their position hitherto has been somewhat indefinite, and instead of enacting simply that the Presidency Magistrates should be subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate it is better to put the matter into the hands of the Local Government, who in dealing with the question will have regard to existing practice and to existing susceptibilities also."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said:—"I do not offer any objection at all to the principle laid down by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in regard to the amendment of clause 18, but it seems to me, and I would offer this for consideration by him, whether the terms of the amendment are correct. He proposes that the powers of a Presidency Magistrate shall be exercised by any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government to sit singly or by a Bench of Presidency Magistrates. Now, from the terms of the law I am inclined to think that every Presidency Magistrate is empowered to sit singly, and therefore if there is to be any crippling of jurisdiction I submit for consideration whether it ought not to be that a Magistrate should be declared to be competent to sit only on the Bench rather than he should be empowered to sit singly. I would draw attention to section 20 of the Bill and I would also offer for consideration this : that there is no power given to the Local Government to confer this authority on any Bench or any Presidency Magistrate. Something should be added to the law enabling the Local Government to give such power. It says here 'any other Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government,' but the Local Government should be empowered to confer this authority."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said:—"As regards the wording of the amendment I placed myself in the hands of the Legislative Department, and I feel pretty certain that they have covered the point to which the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep refers. The provisions of the section appear to me perfectly clear."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said:—"My Lord, I only wish to say that I took occasion, while the Select Committee were sitting, to look informally (by the courtesy of the Chief Magistrate) into the working of the system in Calcutta. And as a result of that informal examination I concur generally in the proposals of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"I would only say this in answer to my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor sent in this clause. We looked at it and thought it sufficient and left it unaltered, and I do not myself see that any one can misunderstand it. It would seem to me to be a very strange and curious interpretation that would lead to misunderstanding these plain words. It is quite true that the clause does not say that the Local Government may empower the Presidency Magistrates to sit singly, but it says a 'Presidency Magistrate empowered by the Local Government to sit singly.' That amendment is proposed by the Lieutenant-Governor and will precede section 20. I do not know I am sure whether the English rule of construction applies to the Indian statutes, but it is a very clear rule of construction in England that wherever a statute gives a power or states a rule every incidental power for carrying it out is implied and understood. I do not know whether that is a principle which is accepted in India or not."

The motion was put and agreed to.

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR also moved that to clause 21 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following sub-clause be added namely :—

"(2) The Local Government may, for the purposes of this Code, declare what Presidency Magistrates are subordinate to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, and may define the extent of their subordination."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS moved that in clause 35, sub-clause (3), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "confirmation or", in line 1, be omitted. He said :—"These words were left in by mistake in section 35. They are consequential on the amendment which the Committee made in section 31."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that the following be added to clause 55, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely :—

"(d) any person who is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community."

He said :—"I should like to be permitted to make this amendment on behalf of the Government I represent. It is not for that reason only, but because in Bombay we have had so much disorder and conflict with the law that I feel bound to bring forward this amendment.

"The expression was in the law once. It was taken out in 1882, proposed in the Bill as introduced to be replaced, but was struck out by the Select Committee. I would put it back again.

"What I say is this : if the Bombay Government say that they want an officer in charge of a police-station to be empowered to arrest a person who is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community, give them that power."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"This no doubt is an amendment for consideration by the Council, but my friend Mr. James is absolutely wrong in his facts. These words have not been taken out by the Select Committee. I quite agree that similar words were taken out in section 110, but they were not taken out of section 55 and they never were in section 55. They may have been in the previous Codes, but I have no doubt Sir Henry Prinsep will be able to tell us that. It is a matter no doubt for the Council to decide, but looking at it personally I think this is a dangerous power to entrust the police with to enable a policeman to arrest without warrant a person who he considers to be desperate and dangerous. That is a very extensive power, because a person whom a policeman thinks to be desperate and dangerous a Magistrate might not think desperate and dangerous. It is a very different thing entrusting the power to a Magistrate and to a policeman. Personally I am against the amendment, but I quite agree it is a question for the Council to decide."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—"I ought to have said the words were in the older section 110 and not in section 55."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said :—"I beg to confirm what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member in charge of this Bill. The words which were considered by us in the Select Committee seemed to be a very dangerous power to confer on a policeman, for it would enable him practically to put under arrest any person who made himself in any way objectionable by declaring him to be a dangerous person. We considered in the Select Committee whether these words should be retained in the section which enables a Magistrate to make an inquiry for the purpose of taking security for good behaviour. Similar words appeared in the Code of 1872, but they were taken out of the Code of 1882 because they were considered to be too vague by the Select Committee in the preparation of this Bill. My Hon'ble friend on the right (Mr. James) is perfectly correct in saying that these words re-appeared, but in the Select Committee the question was again considered, and it will be observed from the Report of the Select Committee that though the words here were struck out there was a fresh sub-clause introduced which would practically restore their effect."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI said:—"I also beg to say that I am against the proposed amendment."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN said:—"As regards the section now under discussion I am at one with the Legal Member. When the Council comes to consider the motion to introduce similar words which governs the action of Magistrates I shall have something more to say."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said:—"My position is precisely the same as that of my Hon'ble friend Sir John Woodburn. I think such powers can hardly be intrusted to the police, but I shall be glad to see them restored to the Magistrate."

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES:—"I beg to withdraw the amendment."

The amendment was accordingly withdrawn.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said:—"My Lord, may I ask leave to move an amendment which is not on the list of business and fits in between motions 12 and 13 on the list. I regret very much that three of my amendments came in late, but in the press of work I was not able to get them in by the prescribed hour, but I hope the Council will allow me to put the amendment now."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT said:—"I would only mention that any Member may object to the moving of this amendment as no previous notice has been given of it; but as I understand no Member objects, I shall allow the amendment to be put."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS then moved that for sub-clause (2) of clause 107 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following be substituted, namely:—

"(2) Procedings shall not be taken under this section unless the person informed against is within the local limits of such Magistrate's jurisdiction."

He said:—"I may shortly explain what are the reasons for this amendment. Under the old section 107 the words were somewhat vague and there was considerable doubt whether a Magistrate, when he had information that any person was likely to commit a breach of the peace or disturb the public tranquillity or do a wrongful act that might occasion a breach of the peace within his jurisdiction, would have power to summon that person from another jurisdiction into his jurisdiction in order to show cause why he should not be bound down to keep the peace. The matter came before various Courts. It came before the Court of Allahabad and it came before the Court in Calcutta. Two leading cases on it are to be found, one in Law Reports 6 Allahabad and the other in Law Reports 12 Calcutta Series.

The courts were of opinion that the words were ambiguous, but that they ought to construe them with reference to the fact that the jurisdiction was local and also with reference to convenience, and they pointed out the very great inconvenience that would arise from construing them as enabling a Magistrate to summon a man from the utmost ends of the earth. This is a very large country, not a small country like England, and the power that would have been given under the other interpretation which was negatived by all the Courts and which is now given by the amendment which has been introduced in the Select Committee is the power to summon anybody all over India for the purpose of giving security. For instance, my friend the Hon'ble Joy Gobind Law has got large properties up in the east of Bengal; a riot occurs there: he may be summoned there and, as we know by the decided cases, he may be made to go there, and when he gets there he will find probably that there is nothing against him. If a Magistrate thinks that a zamindar is at the bottom of the disturbance though there be no evidence against him, he may put him to the disagreeable task of wandering about from place to place, and when he gets there he will then not bind him down at all. I have not seen a case in which it was found that a zamindar when bound down under such circumstances was not let off in revision. In the meantime he has travelled about all over the place. To take an extreme case, the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces and Eastern Bengal, in fact wherever he has any property at all and wherever a row takes place on that property and the policeman thinks it would be a good thing to bind down the zamindar and says there is reason to believe he is at the bottom of it. This is no fanciful grievance. It is what took place very often. Take the case of Dino Bundo Mullick reported in 12 Calcutta Series. The man was an old man living here in Calcutta. He happened to have acquired a piece of property up at a place called Bongong. He had never been there; he had never seen the place; there was a row between some villagers with regard to the crops and boundaries and various other things; so the policeman in the ordinary course thought it would be a good thing to bind down the zamindar. In that case I think it was the Deputy Magistrate who issued the summons. The man sent up a medical certificate, but the Deputy Magistrate was not satisfied with the medical certificate and he sent down a warrant to apprehend him here in Calcutta, and bring him to Bongong. It was objected to first of all that there was nothing in the information to show that this man had really done anything or was going to do anything. It was objected that the Magistrate ought to have dispensed with his personal attendance under section 116—but that was not the object, the object was pressure, and he exercised pressure on this man and tried to put him to the inconvenience of this long journey. This was the doing of a Deputy Magistrate and this is provided for in sub-section (2) where it says that power to summon people from all over the place is confined to District Magistrates and Chief Presidency Magistrates. But the other case in Allahabad was the District Magistrate, and whom did he summon? The Dewan Joy Prokash of the Dumraon Raj, a most respectable and peaceable old gentleman. He had nothing whatever to do with the matter except this. The Dumraon Raj had acquired a piece of property in the Hazipore district and in due course of time the servants were going to sow crops. Somebody else objected to their sowing the crops and accordingly a policeman said there was to be a row and the zamindar was at the bottom of it, and as they could not very well take the Raja of Dumraon himself up there they considered they would bind down the Dewan, and accordingly they summoned him to appear and bound him down in the sum of Rs. 35,000. It was urged that they had no jurisdiction to do so. It was pointed out that there was no evidence whatever to show that he was going to do anything wrong, nor was there any evidence to show that the servants of the Raja were going to do anything wrong, but only that somebody else was going to object and that there was going to be a row. There are a great many other cases, but it was decided that they had no jurisdiction to do this, otherwise so far as we could see the thing would be going on as before, but when the Courts both in Allahabad and Calcutta finally decided the question by a Full Bench they decided on the ground of the true construction of the statute and on the ground of convenience that there was no such power existing then. Now it is proposed to give this power and I understand that the justification for it is that in certain cases there are persons who are living near the borders of one district and are creating a riot in the other. With regard to that the proper course has been pointed out by my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep in another case in 11 Calcutta Series. The thing is simple: all you have to do is to send information to the other district, and if it is an adjoining district the difficulty will not be very great as to witnesses, and it is as I understand with regard to those cases where the supposed offender is living near the borders of the district and stirring up strife over the border—it is for them—that you want large powers. It is said that it was found impossible to provide for these people who live near the borders without giving this very wide power, but I venture to think power could be given to summon a man say twenty miles over the border. If a man lives within ten or twenty miles I think the power should be given; but what is objected to is and what I have seen myself is making people travel a very long journey with no object. It may be thought I am suggesting something which does not happen, but I know that in a number of cases there has been a very strong tendency on the part of Magistrates to use this section in order to put pressure, though there were nothing worthy of the name of evidence before him. What is certain is that he is the zamindar, and the policeman thinks and the Magistrate very often also thinks that being a zamindar his servants would not do an act if he did not encourage them to do something of that kind. I think an additional burden is cast upon proprietors if they are liable to be trotted all over India whenever there is a row in a zamindari. I do not object to their being bound down in the district where they reside if any case is made against them, but I do object to their being trotted about all over India to answer an information which in nine cases out of ten has no substance in it on a process which never ought to have been issued.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said:—"This amendment is no doubt a matter which is deserving of the careful and candid consideration of the Council. It is a matter on which personally I can form very little opinion; it is one of those matters which you have to deal with in India; but what I would like to say is this that the matter was very carefully and exhaustively discussed in Select Committee by gentlemen who had ample knowledge of India, and the Select Committee came to the opinion that it was necessary to provide that people who lived outside the district and who were creating a disturbance in the district should be capable of being summoned at once to answer for their conduct. It was mentioned in the Committee that very often these rows were got up by people who carefully kept themselves outside the district. Well the Committee did consider the very suggestion which my Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has made. They considered whether it would be possible to determine any limit of area within which this process should be issued outside the district, and they came to the conclusion that it was not possible to fix any limit. They thought that the best way of dealing with the difficulty was to meet it in another way and to provide that only the District Magistrate should have the power to issue process to people outside his district. They thought that by putting in this proviso to sub-section (2) they would call attention to the fact that these powers should be exercised with care and caution and of course they are subject to revision.

"It is quite possible that one or two hard cases may have arisen in the past; it is quite possible, though I hope it is not likely, that hard cases may arise in the future, but then there are two ways of dealing with this without cutting down the legal power. In the first place, the High Court can revise the order, and in doing this they can lay down general principles of discretion on which Magistrates are to act, but which we can scarcely embody in the Code itself; and, in the second place, the Local Government can also by circulars lay down rules for the guidance of Magistrates in exercising a jurisdiction of this kind. I cannot help thinking that the fact that the Code by its provisions says that this jurisdiction is only to be exercised by special Magistrates under special precautions will prevent the power being abused. However, it is a matter for the Council; it is a matter purely for Members of ripe Indian experience and not for me."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said:—"I can confirm what has fallen from the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill as to what took place in the Select Committee. Personally I was in favour of the amendment of the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans, but on reconsideration I have felt difficulties which might possibly arise and I consented to the modification of the clause as made by the Select Committee which seemed to me to be perfectly safeguarded against any possible mischief. I would wish in connection with this subject to draw the attention of the Council to an analogous provision in respect to the trial of offences. The law provides that when a person is accused of the commission of any offence by reason of anything which has been done or of any consequences which have ensued the offence may be inquired into or tried by a Court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction anything has been done or such consequence has ensued, and if Chapter XV of the Code of Criminal Procedure relating to cognate matters be considered, it will be found that somewhat the same principle has been observed in respect of offences committed by other persons and in relation to which some particular person not within the jurisdiction is concerned. Therefore it seems to me that, if a person who is not resident within the jurisdiction abets or is found by the Magistrate to have abetted the apprehended breach of the peace out of the jurisdiction, he will be properly amenable to the jurisdiction. I am perfectly well aware that bogus cases may be got up for the purpose of annoying zamindars, but it is possible to get up bogus cases of every description, and there is no more reason to suppose that bogus cases of this character will arise than cases of other descriptions."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said :—" My Lord, this sub-clause was framed to meet the case in which a person in one district is endeavouring to disturb the peace in another. If the amendment be carried the guilty principal has merely to remain in one district while he foments disturbances in another. The only course would be to move that Magistrate who is not interested in the preservation of the peace (since the dispute is not in his district) to bind down this principal. Such a course would involve much delay, not only in initiating the proceedings, but in conducting them. Evidence of the expected breach of the peace would have to be taken to the second district, probably much to the detriment of the necessary proceedings in the first. The proviso contains an important safeguard, since no junior or subordinate officer would be in a position to take action unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace is apprehended are within the limits of his local jurisdiction

" It is only the senior executive officer of the district who could exercise the powers in question; and it is only in exceptional cases that they would be required. In the instances described by the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans there was nothing against the gentlemen and there were not grounds for proceedings being taken against them in any district whatever.

" But if we take the case of a principal in an adjoining district, who is really instigating riots, I think it must be admitted that he ought to be bound down. The case of a man being dragged from one end of India to another is, I venture to think, one eminently unlikely to occur in real practice."

The Hon'ble BABU JOY GOBIND LAW said :—" I am afraid this would be rather a dangerous power to give the police. I can quite believe my friend the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans stating that Magistrates may sometimes think it would be a good thing to call a zamindar to account, whether he was concerned in the matter or not, or whether there was reliable evidence or not, and that by merely summoning him the disturbance would be put an end to by him somehow, either by concessions or by something else or by spending money. Therefore I am quite of the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans' opinion in thinking that it would be rather dangerous for a zamindar to be in such a position. As regards bogus cases, it is true they are likely to turn up anywhere, but in this particular case it would entail an amount of hardship which would not occur in other cases, where one has to defend himself at his place of abode."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN said :—" With reference to what has fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans I am bound to say that no such cases as he has mentioned have occurred to my knowledge in Upper India, and, unless His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor wishes to press the amendment, I think for the reasons which have been given by the Legal Member and the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens that I should support the Select Committee."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR said :—"So far from desiring to press the amendment I would call attention to the fact that the Government of Bengal submitted to the Select Committee reports which showed that both Judges and Magistrates in large numbers approved of the extension of the authority of the Magistrate to persons outside his jurisdiction who might be concerned in acts likely to cause a breach of the peace within his jurisdiction. The existing judicial rulings suggest in fact an inconsistency in the Code. It would seem obvious and reasonable that when power is given to Magistrates to proceed against residents of their districts for conduct affecting the peace in other districts, they should also be empowered to proceed against residents of other districts for conduct affecting the peace in their own districts. The latter power is indeed more necessary than the former, for the Magistrates are more concerned in, and more responsible for, their own districts, and should have full power to act against disturbers of the peace wherever found. Such persons are really abettors of offences who, under the law, may be prosecuted within the district where the offence was committed though not resident there.

"I think myself that the criticisms of this section illustrate one of the points to which attention has been already drawn, namely, the attempt made in the Code to provide for every contingency that may arise. We are legislating for Magistrates of ordinary common-sense, and not for men like the exceptionally stupid Deputy Magistrate who dragged that unfortunate man down from Calcutta to Bongong. We must assume that Magistrates will do their duty in a reasonable way, and although it is quite true that this section may be employed in the case of a zamindar yet that is only one case out of many. In a disturbance of the peace we know practically that we have to deal with people occasionally who keep themselves behind the scenes, and if a Magistrate gets information that is good enough to satisfy him that there is such a person behind the scenes, then I say he should be able to get at him whoever he is."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS said :—" The Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers replies that there is the power of revision. The answer is the same as in the case of sentence of whipping. The whipping comes first and the revision afterwards. In this case the man has gone his journey, and been trotted about there, and in all probability there is no conviction at all because there is no case. The power of revision does not in the smallest degree meet the evil that I am complaining of. My Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep has said that it is nothing worse than happens to them in an ordinary criminal case when a false charge is brought against them. Yes, but it is a false charge of some definite act generally upon oath. Somebody has got to make the charge and they can prosecute that man for perjury or sue him for malicious prosecution, and that man has got to think twice before he makes the charge, but here it is merely that the Magistrate is informed and what is the nature of the information. I have seen it any number of times ; a policeman says there is a chur there, and there are two powerful zamindars, and very likely there will be a disturbance when the crops come to be reaped, and I think they ought to be bound down to keep the peace as I think they are at the bottom of it. That is exactly what happened in the case I have mentioned in the North-West. If there have been no such cases in Upper India it is probably because the Allahabad Court has ruled that there is no jurisdiction to make such orders. The matter is before the Council now and it is for the Council to consider. It may be that this debate and the reference of what has been laid down in the various Courts as regards convenience may do something to prevent the same abuse growing up again. Otherwise as far as one can see it is only too likely to do so."

The Council divided :—

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

So the motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in clause 108 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee between the word "information" and the word "that", in line 8, the words "on oath or solemn affirmation" be inserted. He said:—"The effect of this amendment, if accepted by the Council, will be that the information will be such as will, if necessary, give to the accused the power of knowing who his informant is and the power of cross-examining the informant, and there will be some material before the Magistrate on which proceedings may fairly be taken. If these words are not inserted, then the Magistrate can act on any information, whether written or oral or in any other shape or form. I have already given my reasons for proposing this amendment, and I hope it will prove acceptable to the Council. I wish, however, to say one thing—that the order in which I sent in my amendments was that the amendment proposing that clause 108 of the Bill be omitted was placed first. Of course there must be good reasons why this present amendment No. 13 has been put in first in the agenda paper."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"May I interrupt the Hon'ble Member to explain that it was done under my orders. According to the Parliamentary rule the proper course is to amend a clause and then if it is desired to omit it to make the motion for omission."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI:—"I only referred to this fact for this reason that if that amendment had been put first and carried, the amendments purporting simply to modify the section would have been rendered nugatory and we should not have had to take up the time of the Council in dealing with them."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT:—"Quite so: but according to Parliamentary rule if the amendment had not been carried and the clause had been carried, my Hon'ble friend would not have been able to move the amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"This is an amendment which I must oppose, and not as Chairman of the Select Committee but speaking as a member of the Government. The Hon'ble Member desires to introduce certain words of which he has given notice, but the section as it stands is uniform with sections 107, 109 and 110. We intend to keep the procedure uniform. There is no reason to put in those words when they are not in sections 107, 109 and 110, and the Government desire to stand by this clause as they have drafted it in this respect."

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU: "I very strongly support the amendment. Of course the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill spoke as a member of the Government, but I speak on behalf of everybody else. Perhaps I am not altogether right in saying so. Let me correct myself and say that I speak on behalf of the Government as well as everybody else.

The Government itself would like in the interests of its subjects to protect every subject to this extent, that he should not be annoyed or vexed without a sufficient foundation, and it strikes me that the suggestions made by my Hon'ble friend would alone afford a proper foundation for the protection of the person."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH:—"I cordially support the amendment, but on the principle that something is better than nothing, as I should prefer to get as much as I can in that direction—I mean in the direction of bettering the position of the people for whom I advocate, and of those who might come under the operation of the proposed law."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR:—"I only wish to remark with reference to this amendment that it is based mainly on the fact that the gentlemen who moved and supported it have got what I may call newspapers on the brain. They view everything from the point of view of the native editor and its possible effect upon him. This section is not specially directed against newspaper editors, but against the class of wandering preachers of sedition in Upper India and elsewhere, who have to be dealt with promptly and summarily, and with whom the Magistrate has to deal as he would with any other description of budmash. There are amendments on the paper which I think will sufficiently safeguard the position of newspaper editors, and I shall be quite content if the section is amended as proposed. As regards this particular amendment I see no reason why it should be placed on quite different lines from those on which the corresponding sections are placed."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI :—"I am sorry, my Lord, that the reason given by my Hon'ble friend the Legal Member for retaining section 108 in its present form and not allowing the amendment which I propose to insert is that there are other sections in the Code, section 107 and others, which also do not provide that the information should be on oath or solemn affirmation. It may or may not be that the other clauses are perfect. But whenever an amendment or a proposal has to be considered I humbly venture to think that the only considerations to be taken into account are whether such amendment or proposal is good or bad, and whether there are good reasons for it or not. I submit that I have already stated reasons which are good, and that the reason that the other sections do not contain these words and that therefore this section should not contain them is, I submit, not a good reason. Then, as to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor's remarks that probably I have on my brain the newspapers, I may say this that I have nothing to do with the newspapers; I am not the proprietor, editor, publisher or printer of any paper; I am simply what all of us are, namely, a reader. Then, as to the remark that probably the Hon'ble Sir Griffith Evans' mendment will put it all right, I submit that that amendment is not at present before the Council, that the reasons I have given for the amendment I now propose are good reasons, and that the amendment should be accepted."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT SURAJ KAUL moved that in clause 108 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the words "such Magistrate", in line 24, the words "after he has fully satisfied himself as to the truth of such information" be inserted. He said:—"My Lord, sections 124A and 153A having been inserted in the Indian Penal Code, the Select Committee found it necessary to frame section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code as it stands in the Bill as amended, but the insertion of the words I have proposed would, in my opinion, have removed all apprehension as to unnecessary trouble and difficulty being caused to persons who are the objects of enmity or ill-will and against whom false information may be laid.

"No doubt section 112 proceeds on the assumption that due enquiry will have been made by a Magistrate before any action is taken; but having regard to the fact that section 108 is new and to the discussions that have recently taken place on the sedition sections of the Indian Penal Code, it would be an advantage to make the duty of the Magistrate quite clear and to let it be distinctly understood that he is required to satisfy himself as to the truth of information received, before the person accused is required to show cause why he should not be required to execute a bond.

"There are in India certain persons who, owing to differences in caste and creed and consequent enmity or ill-will, would not hesitate to endeavour to bring disgrace on or cause harm to others and thus seek to injure innocent persons. The words I have suggested would be a valuable safeguard, and I hope that the amendment I have proposed will be acceptable to the Council."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I must oppose this amendment. I quite sympathise with the Hon'ble Member's intentions in moving it, but if we inserted these words in this section I think we should have to insert similar words in nearly every section of the Code. No Magistrate ought to act, or would act, without due consideration and without what he considered to be proper and solid information. That must be left to the discretion of the Magistrate."

The Hon'ble MR. CHITNAVIS said :—" My Lord, I beg to support the amendment. As a native of India, having personal knowledge of the many animosities and jealousies that exist among the several castes and classes that inhabit this vast Empire, I think the reasons given by my Hon'ble friend Pandit Suraj Kaul in support of his amendment are convincing."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH :—" I am in support of the amendment. The insertion of similar words in other parts of the Criminal Procedure Bill will not, I submit, destroy the symmetry of the Code. If the insertion of those words, can take the sting out of the section, which is open to serious objection, I think, the words that have been suggested to be used in the clause, ought to be inserted there."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI moved that in clause 108 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, between the word "may" and the word "in", in line 24, the words "with the sanction of the Local Government" be inserted; that the words "with or", in line 27, be omitted; that for the words "one year", in line 29, the words "three months" be substituted. He said :— " I have already stated my reasons for these amendments and will now leave them to the Council to deal with them as they please."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I am afraid I must oppose these amendments on behalf of the Government. As regards the first amendment my Hon'ble friend proposes that proceedings under this section should only be instituted with the sanction of the Local Government. Well, we are prepared to meet him half way there. My Hon'ble friend Sir Griffith Evans has formulated an amendment which after careful consideration we shall be prepared to accept, but that amendment provides that in the case of registered publications where you have a registered proprietor, the person who has a permanent address, that then the sanction of the Local Government or the Government of India shall be required before proceedings are instituted. That certainly is quite as far as we can go. As my Hon'ble friend the Lieutenant-Governor has pointed out, this clause is not aimed specifically at writers or editors; it is aimed at seditious people. You have people preaching sedition who are here to-day and gone to-morrow. The Magistrate must be empowered in these cases to act promptly. Even in the case of newspaper sedition it may occasionally be inconvenient that very prompt action should not be taken. But on the whole we think that where we have a responsible person with a registered address that there we can put up with some delay and that the matter may be left until the sanction of Government can be obtained. As regards my friend's second amendment he proposes to reduce the period for which security is taken from one year to three months. That I think would render the section almost nugatory. I do not see the object of it. He is afraid of people being needlessly harassed; they will be equally harassed by a proceeding to bind them down for three months as they would be harassed by a proceeding to bind them over for one year. I think on the other hand when proceedings are taken, and taken justifiably, it is well that they should be bound over for a substantial period. As a matter of fact, I think this section will require to be very little used. The knowledge that this section is embodied in the Code, the knowledge that this power exists, will, I think, in most cases suffice to bring people to their bearings."

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU :—"I support the amendment and I consider the reason given for opposing it as not sufficient. It is said that the section aims at those roving men who have no place of abode and who are here, there and everywhere, doing mischief by exciting the mob by inflammatory utterances. But the words of the section go far beyond. They cover even men who can be as readily spotted or got at as the printer and proprietor of a newspaper. The reason assigned is, therefore, utterly insufficient. To be consistent with it or rather to provide for the precise case which alone will justify the section, the words in the section must be considerably modified, so as to confine it to the roving mischief-makers referred to."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH :—"I beg to support the amendment."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that clause 108 of the Bill be omitted. He said :—"The large number of amendments, I believe about 67, which are on to-day's list of business, in connection with the Criminal Procedure Bill, of which some have already been disposed of, satisfactorily, clearly indicates that the Bill is still susceptible of emendation and improvement in many respects.

"The bitter experience I have had unfortunately of the fate that attended the several amendments which were moved on the memorable 18th February last, and negatived successively, with the exception of a single one, dissuades me, I confess, from pressing the amendment that stands against my name. I feel, however, I am bound to move the amendment, and in doing so I should like to offer a few observations besides those which I have made in my note of dissent appended to the Report of the Select Committee. With due deference to the observations that have fallen from the Hon'ble the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, and the Hon'ble the Legal Member, that the clause is not meant to operate against newspaper writers, I submit, there is nothing in its language to warrant absolutely the accuracy of that observation.

"As section 124A has been amended and a new offence created and embodied in section 153A in the Indian Penal Code, it is not only not necessary but extremely undesirable to insert clause 108 as proposed and settled by the Select Committee.

"It has been observed that the amended provisions of the substantive law, as laid down in the Indian Penal Code, are of a punitive character; while those proposed to be embodied in clause 108 of the Criminal Procedure Bill are simply preventive in their nature. I regret I find myself unable to share that view. To my mind, the clause, if allowed to stand, will provide a new punishment in a different shape for substantially the same offences which are penalised in a graver form by sections 124A and 153A, and by the clauses relating to defamation and criminal intimidation—a punishment which will, in its practical operation, impose a far severer restraint upon the freedom of speech and of the Press, than even the amended and other provisions of the Penal Code do. Clause 108 penalises virtually in a preventive form the acts made punishable by the sections to which it refers, taking away the salutary safeguards with which prosecutions under those sections are hedged in.

"In my opinion, it would be equally unnecessary and extremely rigorous to insert clause 108 in the Criminal Procedure Bill, when the provisions of the Indian Penal Code have been made rather effective by amending section 124A and enacting section 153A.

"It is obvious that under the clause in question (108), as soon as a person is found to be disseminating or attempting to disseminate in any wise, or attempting the dissemination of any seditious matter, etc., he becomes virtually, at that moment, liable to the punishment prescribed by section 124A or section 153A, for exciting feelings of contempt, hatred or enmity, as the case may be. The proper course to adopt, in such a case, would be to proceed against the supposed offender, and, if he is convicted, the Court convicting him may, if it thinks fit, call upon him, to execute a bond for his good behaviour, after the term of his sentence is over, for such period as it may seem fit to it.

"The Select Committee has considered it desirable not to give District Magistrates power to initiate prosecutions for offences under section 124A or section 153A, unless the sanction of the Local Government has been previously obtained. Such a conviction precedent does not, however, attach to the initiation of proceedings under the clause in question, and the result is that it places speakers and journalists completely under the control of Executive Officers, who would presumably be most intolerant of adverse criticism. It is, therefore, not safe to entrust such officers with so wide powers, when we remember, that such powers are never entrusted to Magistrates, even in England.

' The Hon'ble the Legal Member has on another occasion observed that it was considered undesirable to revive the Vernacular Press Act, but the insertion of the proposed clause will virtually mean the revival of that retrogressive and obnoxious legislation with an extended scope, as it will bring under its operation, not only journalists, but also public speakers. It has also been remarked that critics of the better type will not find themselves hampered in criticizing through the Press, public or administrative measures, if they do so, moderately and temperately. But remembering how wide a definition has been given to sedition, and bearing also in mind what is unfortunately a fact, that animadversion upon measures of Government, even in a subdued tone, does in many instances prove disagreeable to those whose acts are criticized, it cannot be said that there is no reason to apprehend that the vesting of such powers, as are proposed to be conferred by clause 108, on Magistrates, who, being ordinarily Executive Officers, would naturally attach too much importance to their ideas of preserving order, will place an undesirably severe restraint upon the liberty of speech and of the Press.

" This, in my opinion, would be deplorable, for it is necessary for the good administration of the country that the Government should be kept informed of what the people think honestly of its laws and measures, though their views may sometimes be found expressed not in discreet or guarded language.

" As to sub-section (c), the recommendation by the Calcutta Bar that the course proposed by them, should be adopted, and the sub-section itself abandoned, is an acceptable one.

" For these reasons, amongst others, I would suggest that clause 108, as settled by the Select Committee, should be omitted altogether."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I must oppose this amendment on behalf of the Government. On previous occasions I have explained the scope of this clause and our intentions with respect to it. Now I find this clause, curiously enough, is attacked from opposite quarters. My friend Mr. Chitnavis in his opening speech first of all commended our procedure for binding over first offenders instead of sentencing them, and now when we propose to apply a similar procedure to people who commit press offences he raises objections to it. He says in the case of an ordinary first offender, 'well, it is a good thing that a trivial offence should be dealt with not by punishment, but by simply binding the man over.' Why then does he object to a similar procedure being applied to press offences. I think this is very necessary, and for this reason ;—that there is a very great deal of mischievous writing in this country which is written irresponsibly. Addressed to and circulated among ignorant, credulous and foolish people, it may do an infinity of harm. It may produce effects far beyond what is intended by the writer, but the writer himself is simply a foolish, silly person who writes irresponsibly ; who, if I may use a phrase used on the last occasion, is a person who smokes in a powder magazine. Well, in those cases, although the writing may be exceedingly mischievous in its effects, we desire not to punish the writer but to warn the writer, and we have devised a procedure which will call his attention to the fact that he must not smoke in a powder magazine. There are one or two other remarks that have been made which I should very much like to notice. There is the assumption running through all the criticisms on this clause that it is to be used against people who criticise Government or who, as my friend Pandit Bishambar Nath says, write or speak things which are disagreeable to Government. I wonder where he gets that from. It is not in the clause; the criminal law forbids the offence of exciting disaffection against the Government; it forbids the offence of raising up class hatred under certain specific conditions; it forbids the offence of criminal intimidation; and it forbids the offence of defamation. This section can only be used, not against people who say disagreeable things and who criticise the Government, whether fairly or unfairly, but only against people who have committed offences against the law of the land. It is in this respect that this section differs wholly and absolutely from the old Press law. For instance, under the Act of 1878 the Press was subject to license. I have no doubt that the Government of the day used the power moderately and wisely, but they had power to control and license the Press, and if they had chosen to make a foolish use of the Act, they could have prohibited writing which had absolutely nothing to do with sedition. I suppose if you have a law under which the Press is licensed and the action of Government cannot be supervised, it would be possible to withdraw the license because the editor had, say, red hair or for any other reason you like. We have deliberately eschewed a Press law. We have said we do not want to license the Press. We have said we desire to have a free Press, free to publish everything that is not contrary to the law. It is only if and when the Press chooses with its eyes open or anybody else chooses with his eyes open to offend against the ordinary law of the land that he can be proceeded against under this section or any other section of the Code."

The Hon'ble MR. SAVANI :—" I also am in favour of the amendment, as I gave notice of a similar amendment. I am very glad to hear from the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers that it is not the intention of the Government to make use of this section against any but those who actually and undoubtedly offend against the law."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN said :—"My friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis, in the most interesting and skilful speech with which he opened the discussion on this Bill to-day, spoke of disaffection being nowhere now visible in an appreciable form. This is an important variation from the expressions which were used at the last meeting of Council, when the existence of disloyalty in India was altogether denied. My Lord, I sympathise with the feeling which dictated those expressions. We are all of us unwilling to admit that such a thing as disloyalty can exist in India. But the facts are against us. The Courts of justice in India in a series of recent cases have found that disloyalty does exist, and that it has to be punished. We cannot shut our eyes to what has been so plainly presented to us or pretend that there is peace when there is not peace I should be sorry to believe that sedition was widespread or frequent, and I am satisfied myself that it is neither. The assurances which have been given us by Members of this Council who have the best means of judging, I frankly accept as evidence that the sedition of which we have had proof is confined to a limited circle. And I am further quite ready to believe that what the Courts have found to be sedition sometimes began without actual disloyalty, but grew out of unrestrained indulgence in intemperate language. It is for this, among other reasons, that I support a measure the aim of which, as Mr. Chalmers truly said, is prevention rather than punishment. In the interests of good government it is always better that crime should be prevented than that it should be allowed to come to a head, however exemplary and effective the subsequent punishment may be. The lamentable riots, which were yesterday reported from Bombay, furnish fresh proof of the suddenness and fierceness with which passions may be roused in this country in an ignorant mob and of the imperative necessity of arming the executive with all the powers of prevention which possible forewarning may render it expedient to use.

"I am myself perfectly willing that even this preventive jurisdiction shall be exercised only under the express authority and sanction of Government. This will give assurance that it will be exercised with moderation and prudence; but that provision should exist for the use of preventive measures, when occasion requires, is the opinion of every responsible Government in India and of every High Court without exception. The only dissentients in the High Courts were Justices Ghose and Banerjee, Judges of a soberness and soundness of judgment which must always carry weight, and even they accepted the measure now before Council with the proviso which will be agreed to to-day. I can add nothing to this unanimous opinion of all that is responsible for the peace and order of India.

"I said just now that the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis had described disloyalty in India as hardly appreciable. In quite recent issues of respectable Native papers it has been loudly asserted that disloyalty does not exist. On this matter I should like to say one word as to the effect produced in England by this language. The interest in India has never been so keen and so universal as it is in England now. Sympathy has been roused by the unprecedented calamities which simultaneously befel this unfortunate country last year. But an active organization had, I understand, been made to circulate in England the argument that the utterances of Mr. Tilak were not sedition. Now the ordinary Briton is a simple man who pins his faith on facts when he can get them. He asked himself, What is this? The Queen's Privy Council presided over by Her Majesty's Lord Chancellor has held that Mr. Tilak was guilty of sedition. Is it the case that the Indians who profess to be men of leading and the representatives of enlightenment in their country think and hold that disloyalty is their privilege? Is it for this that the British Government has patiently persisted in its policy of education, and has from step to step advanced them in the administration of the country?

"I do not like to speak of the dark resentment which the attitude I speak of roused in the minds of people in England. It is a result which every friend of India and of the Indians must deplore, the more so that this has happened at the very moment when the English race had been drawn to the Indian with cords of the strongest sympathy and regard. England had expended herself in such an effort of sorrowful and open-handed charity as she had never made for her own suffering poor. And at this very moment came from enlightened Indians the insistence of their deliberate association with disloyalty and sedition. I cannot sufficiently regret and deplore it. The endeavours of those who seek to establish and spread a hearty concord and co-operation have been sorely thwarted.

"The feeling will pass away with the generous forgetfulness which I think I may say is the characteristic of the English race. But I am sorry that a line should have been taken which gave birth to, and keeps alive, the distrust that has been so grievously provoked."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH moved that the following be added at the end of clause 108 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely:—

"No proceedings under this section shall be instituted without obtaining the previous sanction of the Local Government as provided by section 196 of this Code."

He said:—"For the reasons submitted in my note of dissent, I beg to propose that no proceedings under clause 108 should be instituted without obtaining the previous sanction of the Local Government as provided by section 196 of the Criminal Procedure Bill.

"The gravity of the penalty imposed upon a person required to be bound down demands that the preventive action provided for by the clause in question, should be made subject to the sanction of the Local Government. Such a person must undergo a severe punishment in the event of his inability to furnish the requisite security, and when he is once bound down, he suffers in his trade and business and particularly in his dealings with Executive Officers, who would stigmatise him as a felon."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I must oppose this amendment, but I must say at the same time we can go a long way to meet the Hon'ble Pandit's suggestions. The next amendment is an amendment which we shall be prepared to accept. That will go a long way towards meeting what my hon'ble friend has just proposed. The reason we cannot accept his amendment can be very shortly stated. As I have already said, we have not only to deal with newspapers or writers of books or people of that kind, but we have to deal, especially in Northern India, with people who preach sedition, and who are perhaps exciting people by their preaching on plague operations and other matters causing unusual unrest to prevail. It is clear that the Magistrate in such a case must act promptly, but prompt as his action ought to be, let me point out this : all that the section empowers him to do is to call on the person against whom he proceeds to show cause why he should not be bound over to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. The section does not enable the Magistrate to do anything in the absence of and without hearing the person who is called upon to show cause. It merely provides that he may call upon the person to show cause, and after hearing what he has to say may, if necessary, bind him over ; but no man will be harassed without having a full opportunity of being heard and stating his case and of having it considered by a very responsible officer. We have confined these powers to District Magistrates, Chief Presidency Magistrates and to specially empowered Magistrates of the first class."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—" I have considerable sympathy with the motion the Hon'ble Pandit Bishambar Nath has brought forward, but I think that, as far as the law is concerned, it will be quite sufficient if the Council accept the amendment which will be moved presently by my friend Sir Griffith Evans. In the case of Bengal, however, I should be quite prepared, myself acting as the head of the Local Government, to issue executive instructions that Magistrates taking proceedings under this section should report their proceedings to the Government, and the Government would naturally exercise their power of revision and stop proceedings in cases where these seemed to have been needlessly instituted. There can be no doubt, however, that in the greater part of Upper India and in other parts of the country it is desirable that the Magistrate should have an unfettered hand."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS moved that the following be added to clause 108 of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely :—

> " No proceedings shall be taken under this section against the editor, proprietor, printer or publisher of any publication registered under, or printed or published in conformity with, the rules laid down in the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, except by the order or under the authority of the Governor General in Council or the Local Government or some officer empowered by the Governor General in Council in this behalf."

He said :—" The last words of the amendment are taken from section 196. The effect, roughly speaking, is to require the same sanction of Government when proceedings are instituted under section 108 against the Press as is required in all cases of a prosecution under section 124A. The result will be that Magistrates will be able to take proceedings without Government sanction in all other cases, but will require Government sanction before taking proceedings in respect of a newspaper article. It may be asked why this distinction should be made between oral and written sedition. One reason is that oral incitements to a mob of ignorant people are apt to lead to immediate disturbances and may require immediate action without waiting for sanction. Another is that many seditious preachers are migratory and must be caught at once if they are to be stopped, whereas newspaper editors and publishers have a fixed address and a fixed occupation and can be found at any time. But the main reason is a different one. A portion of the Vernacular Press has been allowed to drift into a very lamentable condition for many years, and the curb which it is proposed to put upon them by this section will have to be applied with great discretion and judgment. I mean no disrespect to the Magistrates in India when I say that I do not think this power can be safely entrusted to them. Able and conscientious as they are, the comparatively isolated lives that they lead in the several districts are not favourable to the wide outlook and sense of proportion which are necessary to deal effectively with this evil. Many of them are also too young. It is, I think, essential that this power should be exercised by persons of the ripest judgment, living in a serener atmosphere, away from local feeling and excitement. In fact, I do not think that any one but the Government ought to use this power with any prospect of the good results which are intended.

"As however the statement has been re-iterated to-day that there is no sedition or no 'appreciable sedition' in India, I desire to make it clear that it is from no sympathy with the view that I move this amendment. I will not waste time in the barren discussion of whether sedition is the right word to describe what does exist. But I have since the last meeting of the Council waded through a large mass of authorised translations of extracts from the Vernacular Press for the year 1897, and this is what I find. I find statements that the Government are not willing to spare one cowrie from their coffers to save the lives of the famine-stricken people; that they have always plenty of money, but they will not spare one cowrie which is really shameful; that the people were dying of famine, and the Indian Government were continuing their wicked policy of draining the resources of India and deliberately concealing from the English people and the Queen the fact that the people of India were dying. On the top of this one finds a further statement that they will not apply, to relieve the people, even the money which the liberal English people had subscribed. I find it is said that the people who came out here to rule India were not of the respectable classes, but were a low order of persons who had no regard for the interests of the people they came to govern, and that the English fattened like swine upon the produce of the country and insulted the inhabitants. One finds it stated that the Viceroy had come out here for no other purpose than to wander in the cool heights of Simla, with a pomp and state which he could never have enjoyed in his own country. It would have made one smile if it were not for the sadness of the thing, to find so strange a portrait. One finds that the English people are callous to the sufferings of others, that they are unmoved by the misery and death of the natives by famine, but that, when it came to the plague, they feared that they themselves should die, and that thereupon they made rules by which whole villages should be burnt because they were afraid to die themselves. This is the kind of thing which everybody can read for himself and call by any name he pleases except honest criticism. The task of Government is very difficult with regard to the plague. It is how to save the people and the country from the fearful scourge, while interfering as little as possible with their religious and social prejudices, but this task becomes well nigh impossible if the people are taught that the Government and the officials do not care whether the people die or not, but are only anxious to save their own lives. I will give the Council the exact words of one of these loyal people :—

> 'A lasting blot of infamy will fasten itself on the white race for the crores of Indians who have died of famine.'

But according to some of my hon'ble friend, this cannot be seditious, for we have this remark :—

> 'Half-starved, bound hand and foot, is it likely we should rebel against the powerful British Government?'

Next we have :—

> 'The old vigour of England and the respect for justice is gone. There is no longer safety, and people tremble for their lives, honour and property.'

"This is the kind of thing they have been teaching the people while the famine officials have been spending their lives and health in endeavouring to cope with it, while the plague officials have been braving the plague and making unparalleled exertions in order to save the lives of the people. The evil is great and is so deep-rooted that it will require wisdom as well as firmness to deal with it. Any indiscreet action would recoil on the Government. When it is found that the manufacture and sale of this kind of poison is prohibited and no longer yields a safe livelihood, I hope the tone of malignant perversity may be abandoned and something more like honest cricitism may take its place. But it will take time. But as regards oral incitements or anonymous leaflets which may create intense excitement, prompt measures were absolutely indispensable. With regard to having sworn information, I would refer the Council to section 190. Under that section, the Magistrate may take cognizance of an offence on receiving a complaint or a police report or on his own knowledge or suspicion. Now, there was no reason whatever with regard to these offences why any further safeguard should be necessary. It has been said that in certain cases, even as regards these newspapers that they might be issuing an inflammatory article at a moment when plague operations were going on or when a cow-killing riot was imminent, they might create a breach of the peace and it might be desirable to deal with them promptly, but notwithstanding that considering that they are people with a registered address who can always be found and considering that the Magistrate might give them intimation that if they did repeat the offence this section or some other effective section would be put in force against them, thought that on the whole it would be a wiser and more statesmanlike course to enact that in no case should proceedings be taken against the Press except under the orders of Government. As regards the information against the Press, it must consist mainly, if not entirely, of an article from the paper. There will be no conflicting oral evidence, and when they apply to the High Court for revision, they will be very nearly as well off as if there were an appeal. Revision, and not appeal, has always been the remedy under the other security sections. With the safeguard given by the amendment, I hope that much of the alarm caused by this section will abate, and that it may to some extent realise the hopes and expectations of its framers as a preventive section in dealing with a great and growing evil."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"On behalf of the Government I think I may accept this amendment. In our original scheme we proposed that this procedure of binding people over not to commit further offences should be left to the discretion of ordinary Courts to be worked in the ordinary way. There is a great deal to be said for our original idea, but if the public think that they would have increased protection by the Government taking upon themselves the responsibility of deciding whether the proceedings should be instituted or not in the case of written publications, I am willing to accept that responsibility and to accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. SAYANI:—"I am in favour of the amendment because it goes to a certain extent to realise the same object as I intended to realise by my amendment, but I am sorry to say that I do not agree with the reasons which have been given for it by the hon'ble the mover of the amendment. It is said that in the particular case of these articles Government should take the responsibility of considering the matter and give the sanction, as the evil has become so great that wiser heads are required to give the sanction. I should have thought that if the evil produced by the writings is greater, as stated by the hon'ble the mover of the amendment, than the evils produced by oral speeches, then those who commit offences by their writings ought to be more summarily dealt with than those who commit offences as oral speakers. Then again it would strike anybody that when oral speeches are made, the effect is momentary; it passes off like gas; but in the case of written matter the effect is greater and more permanent. However, as I said, I am prepared to support the amendment, not for the reasons which have been given, but because the amendment to a certain extent goes to realise the object I had in view."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS:—"I wish to reply very shortly to what the Hon'ble Mr. Sayani has said. He has entirely misunderstood what I said as to oral and written sedition. I did not mean to say for one moment that the evil was of the same character. The evil that is caused by the Press is an evil mainly of the future. It is not that there is any particular danger at the present moment, but as I said before, it is this: that if the minds of the people are poisoned with this continual writing, when the time of trouble comes, then we shall find that the cumulative effect for years has been to cause the white race to be regarded as some sort of foreign devils, as in China, and the tendency would be to get rid of them root and branch. When the time of trouble came instead of being, as it was in the Mutiny, a trouble between Government and its sepoys, the mob would turn on the hated race and the hated Government; but this is a matter for the future, and we can take time over it. But with regard to oral incitements—take the case of the outbreaks in Upper India and in Bombay. You may have an immediate riot, an immediate outbreak: you may have a cow-killing riot or you may have a riot like there was at Bombay yesterday in which they turned on the Europeans in this very momentary excitement which Mr. Sayani speaks of as being gas, but which resembles the gas of fire damp in a coal mine. It may be true that the evil of such outbreaks is not so great in the end as the gradual poisoning of the mind of a nation, but the evil that is done by a portion of the Press is an evil which we can afford to deal with more at our leisure."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 109 (a) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the word "cognizable," in lines 6 and 7, be omitted. He said:—"My Lord, for thirty-six years it has been the law of the land that if any person is found concealing himself, and there is reason to believe he is doing so in order to commit any offence, the Magistrate can order him to find security for good behaviour. The Bill as introduced in Simla introduced the word 'cognizable,' thus striking out one half of the offence. No reason was given for this in the Objects and Reasons, nor has the Select Committee stated why it is necessary to change the law. Now the Bombay Government, which has had a good deal of trouble for months and years past, request that the law may be left as it is. They state: 'There seems no adequate reason for the restriction, which, it is feared, might prove inconvenient in cases of disturbance of the public tranquillity.' If the word 'cognizable' is left in, it means that a person coming into a Magistrate's district with the intention of committing any offence against the State, waging war for instance, rebellion or forgery, he cannot be arrested. I should therefore like to see the law left as it is."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS:—"This is purely a matter for the Council to decide. It is quite true that the word 'cognizable' was inserted in the revision of the Bill in Simla because my hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep and myself, when looking through the schedule of cognizable and non-cognizable offences, thought that these proceedings were appropriate only to cognizable offences. The question was re-considered in Select Committee, and the Select Committee came to the same conclusion. However, it is a matter for the Council, and I daresay Sir Henry Prinsep will be able to give good reasons for the course which we took."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP:—"The introduction of the word 'cognizable' before 'offence' instead of allowing the law to express itself in regard to any offence was, I believe, done at my suggestion. The first object that I had in view was to make it correspond with section 55. The Hon'ble Member who has proposed this amendment expressed great anxiety to make section 55 correspond in respect to words that he proposed to introduce into section 110. It seems to me that the same principle applies in making it correspond with section 109 if the words to which it applies are the same in both sections. My reasons for the terms of this section as expressed in the Bill and as now objected to are the following. In the first place, the law in the Codes of 1861 and 1872 was not as is expressed in the law of 1882, and I can find no reasons why the law in 1882 was expressed in the way that it was, so as to give power to a Magistrate to demand security for good behaviour in the case of a person taking precautions to conceal his presence with a view to committing any offence. It seems to me the law is quite sufficiently expressed if it relates only to cognizable offences, and I am inclined to think that in expressing it in the Code of 1882 there is an oversight in so far as it did not in this respect make that section correspond with section 55. Now my hon'ble friend has been so good as to refer to the recommendations of the Government of Bombay in which His Excellency in Council was disposed to omit the proposed insertion of the word 'cognizable.' If you refer to all the offences set out in the schedule relating to public tranquillity, you will find they are all cognizable offences, and therefore I cannot understood the exact reason which the Government of Bombay assigns. I would refer to Schedule II of the Code commencing at section 143, and the Council will see in the second column there, that in respect to every one of those offences the police may arrest without warrant. So far therefore it seems to me that the Government of Bombay has no reasonable ground for its objection. The hon'ble mover of this amendment refers to the offence of forgery. No doubt, that is a non-cognizable offence, but I cannot conceive any Magistrate should have power to take security for good behaviour from a person who has taken precautions to conceal his presence within the limits of the Magistrate with the view to commit forgery. I have been careful to examine the schedule of the Code of Criminal Procedure so as to ascertain the class of cases which are cognizable and which are not cognizable, and Members of the Council will find, if they wish to criticise or verify my statement, that all offences relating to property, such as house-breaking or theft, are cognizable offences. So far, therefore, it appears to me there is no reason why the Bill should not remain in its present form."

The Hon'ble SIR ARTHUR TREVOR :—" I support the amendment for the reason that it is hardly possible for a Magistrate to know beforehand the precise offence which a man lurking within his jurisdiction is contemplating, and that, if he has no power to act unless he has reason to believe that the offence contemplated is cognizable, he will not be able to act at all."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—" I agree with the Hon'ble Sir Arthur Trevor in supporting the amendment. It seems to me that there would be great difficulty if you allowed a person who was brought up before a Magistrate under this section to plead that the offence he was intending to commit was not a cognizable offence, but was really sedition or waging war against the Queen. As the section stands, he would be actually entitled, on such a plea, to be discharged."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—" I have gone through the schedule, and I have not been able to trace any offence on which these proceedings ought to be taken that is not a cognizable offence with the exception of offences against the State. It certainly appears an oversight that State offences should be allowed to be plotted with impunity, and on that ground, and on the ground that there is really no necessity to make any alteration in the law, I should be inclined to leave the law as it stands now, and as it stood in the Code of 1882."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 110 (d) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, after the words "or cheating" the words "or counterfeiting coin or stamps" be inserted. He said :—" This is another recommendation of the Bombay Government. A Magistrate of certain high rank and jurisdiction may now call upon a person living within his jurisdiction, and who by repute or by habit is known to be a robber or to commit various offences, to give security for his good behaviour. The Bombay Government suggest that to the offences for which the Magistrate should take such action should be added the words 'counterfeiting coin or stamps or forgery.' I have omitted the word 'forgery,' but it appears to me that the offence of counterfeiting coin or stamps should certainly be added. For this reason, I will give the Council an example. In the town of Poona there has been for years a gang of forgers, many of whom have been sent to the Andamans in my time, and I am also aware that in other places which I will not mention here gangs of coiners exist. It is perfectly obvious that if one of the Dowray gang, as the Poona gang is called, or one of the goldsmiths from these other places, were to come into a District Magistrate's jurisdiction, if the police were worth their salt, they would tell him that so and so had come and the Magistrate would have that man up at once. If he could show that he had arrived for some really harmless purpose, a marriage, say, or a festival, the Magistrate would probably hold his hand. But if he had taken quarters and settled down, it would be absolutely necessary to take some security from him that he was not going to form a gang in his place of new residence and commit the crime of forging coin or stamps. These offences are very dangerous ones in the interests of the State and especially of the poorer classes, and, as the Bombay Government recommend the addition, I hope that the Council will see no harm in its being adopted."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I see no objection whatever. If the man is an habitual coiner, I do not see why he should receive any better treatment than a habitual receiver of stolen goods. I have no doubt my hon'ble friend Sir James Westland will have something to say on the subject of the amendment and the counterfeiting of coin and stamps."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP :—"In moving this amendment my hon'ble friend has not correctly stated what was stated by the Government of Bombay on this subject. Their letter runs thus :—

'I am to suggest for the consideration of the Government of India whether counterfeiters of coin and forgers of currency notes should not be included in section 110 (a).'

"No reason was given with this suggestion, and therefore the Select Committee thought the proposed addition to section 110 was unnecessary."

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—"In answer to the appeal of my hon'ble friend Mr. Chalmers, I desire to say that I support this amendment. I should be very glad to see the offence of counterfeiting coin and stamps inserted with the other habitual offences under this section. There is one peculiarity about coin counterfeiters in India which does not attach to other offences, and that is, that when a man becomes a coiner, he practically becomes so for his life. The same is the case in England. A man who is a coiner and is known to have been such has to be watched during his life. It is that class of man against whom this section is directed, and therefore this particular class of offence is one that ought to be included."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—"I quite agree, and I would suggest adding the words 'currency notes' unless this is included in the word 'coining.'"

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—"The case is exactly the same with regard to counterfeiting currency notes. This offence is also committed by regular gangs and habitually by the same people in various places."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT-GOVENOR :—"Perhaps Mr. James would accept the proposal to include the words 'currency notes.'"

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES :—"I shall be glad to accept Your Honour's suggestion."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—"I am not sure whether the additional words will refer to any section of the Penal Code or not. I quite agree in the principle, but I should like to consider the point with reference to the language of the Penal Code. I think no difficulty would arise. The Magistrate has only to satisfy himself under this section that a man commits the act in question. He has not to deal with it under any particular section. All he has to do is to satisfy himself that a man is by habit and repute a coiner and counterfeiter of forged stamps or notes. I do not think any difficulty will arise by accepting the words suggested by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that the following be added to clause 110 (d) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, namely :—

" (f) any person who is so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community."

He said :—" I have already said something on the amendment I proposed to clause 55 of the Bill. This Council has decided that the words are too vague to allow an officer in charge of a police-station to judge whether a man is desperate and dangerous or not, and arrest him suo motu. I venture, however, for the reasons I gave before, to suggest that the words which were in the former law 'desperate and dangerous' be re-inserted. I have heard it argued that the words are vague. At any rate, they existed in the law up till 1882, and the Government itself suggested their re-insertion in the law. The Select Committee have struck them out. I submit that the old law was better, and that a person answering to the description ought to have his security taken. Some may say that their experience has not brought them into contact with such a person, others that the classes already included in the clause, robbers, house-breakers, thieves and the like, embrace every known class of desperate and dangerous person. No doubt, there may be tracts where this kind of person is unknown, but I have in my mind one, at any rate, a villainous so-called Sirdar, a subject of the Khan of Khelat, who is an habitual firebrand in his own country and comes across the border to bully Sindhis in the hills, far away from any police or Government aid. Then I can think of a dismissed Arab Jemadar from the Hyderabad State, finding his way into Khandesh, and terrifying and extracting contributions from the ryots. In the happy tracts where such villains are unknown, the law will be a dead letter. Where they are found, the law is necessary for the protection of the public."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I think this is purely a matter for the Council to decide. As the Bill was originally drafted in Simla, the words which my hon'ble friend Mr. James wishes to insert were inserted, but in Select Committee we had a long discussion on the subject, and the question was raised that these words were too vague, that they did not denote any offence known to the law; that you could not point to a man having committed any offence, and it was a matter not of fact, but of opinion, whether a man was so desperate and dangerous as to render his being at large without security hazardous to the community. It was clearly a matter of opinion. The view taken by the Select Committee was that the power was a desirable one, but was too vaguely worded. They therefore inserted the words of sub-clause (f). They inserted in place of the old words the words 'habitually commits or attempts to commit, or abets the commission of, offences involving a breach of the peace.' That narrows down the description of a person to be proceeded against to a person who is actually a criminal. But, as pointed out, the words which my friend Mr. James wishes to re-insert were law for a very long time, and I am not aware that there was any very substantial ground for cutting them out of the Code of 1882. It is purely a question for the Council."

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN :—" I support this amendment. As my friend the Hon'ble Mr. James has pointed out, the words which he wishes to introduce were in the Code of 1872 and were omitted from the Code of 1882 for no very particular reason. The matter came under discussion later, when the whole subject of legislation in regard to habitual offenders came before the Government of India. On that legislation every Local Government in India was consulted, and the conclusion which Lord Lansdowne's Government came to in 1892 on the advice of the Provincial Governments was that the words in the Code of 1872 ought to be restored. Accordingly, when legislation in regard to habitual offenders was incorporated in the revision of the Criminal Procedure Code, part of the decision was that these words should be restored in the Criminal Procedure Code. On that decision every Local Government and High Court has again been consulted, and without exception they have supported the inclusion of these words, and I think that in view of the reasons which have been given by responsible Local Governments it would be expedient to accept my Hon'ble friend Mr. James' amendment and restore these words."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR :—" I am entirely of that opinion so far as Bengal is concerned. It would enable the Magistrates of this Province to deal with cattle-poisoners, incendiaries who cause enormous loss and suffering to the people in Eastern Bengal, where arson is commonly resorted to for purposes of revenge and hired assassins and bullies who are a terror to the villagers in some districts, probably in Backergunge. These people are quite well known and should be under control."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that in clause 144, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, between the words " danger to human life, health or safety " and " or a riot or an affray " the words " or a disturbance of the public tranquillity " be inserted. He said :—" This is another recommendation of the Government of Bombay. They desire to insert in clause 144, sub-clause (1), which enacts that a Magistrate may by a written order direct a person to take such order with property under his management as may prevent obstruction, annoyance or injury or danger to human life, or health or safety, the words ' or a disturbance of the public tranquillity.' It can hardly be disputed that in a country like India the Magistrate ought to have power to prevent a disturbance of the public tranquillity. For instance, we may take a town in the Dekkhan, where there has been considerable friction between the two principal classes of the community, the Hindus and the Muhammadans. One class determines to do something abhorrent to the religious prejudices of another; it may be to introduce for the first time the playing of music before a mosque while the Muhammadans are at prayers: it may be that the Muhammadans wish to take through the street where Brahmins and Bunniahs live a goat for the purpose of sacrifice.

"Now the Magistrate may say: 'The information at my disposal and the arrangements I have made are so good that I cannot honestly say that I fear a riot, but what I do fear is a great public ferment which may lead to bitterness of feeling and assaults, and I can safely say that the public tranquillity is disturbed.' That, my Lord, is the sum and substance of the amendment, and I venture to think that this Council may accept it."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I see no objection to the insertion of the words. They are words that fit in with the others."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said:—" Section 107 of the Code has been expressly amended, both in the original Bill and in the Bill as altered in Select Committee, so as to include the case of ' disturbances of the public tranquillity ' not amounting to actual breaches of the peace. I would insert the proposed words in this section also. If it is necessary, as a preventive measure, to bind over persons likely to disturb the public tranquillity, it is equally necessary that the Magistrate should have power to issue these temporary prohibitive orders in like cases."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble RAI BAHADUR ANANDA CHARLU moved that in clause 145, sub-clause (1), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, between the word " person " and the words " or by pleader ", in line 13, the words " or by an agent " be inserted.

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I think my Hon'ble friend, if he looks at the definition of 'pleader', will find that it covers all that he requires. A pleader is defined to be a pleader authorized under any law for the time being in force to practise in any Court, and includes (1) an advocate, a vakil and an attorney of a High Court so authorised, and (2) any mukhtar or other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act in such proceeding. I think, if a man wishes to employ a person who is not an accredited lawyer, he ought only to employ a person whom the Court admits to be a proper person to represent him, and that the Court ought to have at any rate a control over the matter. It is a simple point upon which others may be able to give a better opinion than I can."

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU :—" Until we come to the end of the definition of pleader up to the word 'mukhtar,' there are certain persons who in some sense or another practise as pleaders. Then we have here 'or other person appointed with the permission of the Court to act'. Practically the section confines itself to pleaders. The case may not be one where one must necessarily appoint a pleader, for if later on it becomes necessary for the pleader to be engaged it will of course be done; but why compel him in the first instance to appoint a pleader? As to taking the permission of the Court with reference to any other person than a pleader, it would prove a hardship. When is he to take the permission? Is it beforehand and how? If on the day fixed for the appearance, either the party must also come or run the risk of his proposed agent being rejected."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—" I do not think he is compelled to appoint a pleader. He has three alternatives: he can appear himself; he can appoint a pleader; or he can appoint anybody else whom the Court will allow him to appoint."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" The words used are similar to the words in the County Court Act at home. In County Court proceedings even a man's wife sometimes appears for him. It is exactly a similar case here."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—" Does the Hon'ble Member press his amendment?"

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU :—" No, my Lord."

The motion was accordingly withdrawn.

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS moved that to clause 145, sub-clause (3) of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, the words "upon such person or persons as the Magistrate may direct and at least one copy shall be published by being affixed to some conspicuous place at or near the subject of dispute," be added. He said :—" My Lord, there is a diversity of opinions as to whether a Magistrate acting under Section 145 has power to consider the claims of a party who had not been included in his preliminary order. I confess that I myself am disposed to agree with those who think that the Magistrate has this power. At any rate it appears perfectly clear that he ought to have it. The case is not that one of a mere civil dispute between certain parties, but of the prevention of a breach of the peace in respect of certain land, and obviously all conflicting claims likely to lead to disturbances should be considered whether they were brought to the Magistrate's notice in the first instance, or became apparent in the course of the proceedings.

"The object of my amendment is to provide for the publication of a copy of the Magistrate's order in a conspicuous place, and to permit the service of a copy on such person or persons as he may think fit. I hope that this will make it quite clear that the Magistrate may add parties not originally known by him to be concerned."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I imagine nobody will object to this amendment. It is simply a provision for giving more notice to the parties interested. The contentious amendment comes afterwards."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS also moved that in sub-clause (4) of the same clause of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, for the words "date of the order before mentioned", in the second last line, the words "the time when the dispute arose" be substituted and that the proviso thereto be omitted. He said:—"My Lord, the amendment which I have to move relates to a matter of importance, and I fear that I shall trespass on the patience of the Council, though I shall endeavour to keep within the limits of what is necessary.

"Since there are probably Hon'ble Members who have not had practical experience of the working of section 145, I think it will be better for me to explain briefly the point at issue before I proceed to discuss it.

"Under the law now in force, as it has been interpreted by the High Court, whenever a District or Sub-Divisional Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class is satisfied from a police report or other information that a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace exists concerning any tangible immoveable property or the boundaries thereof, he makes an order in writing shewing the grounds on which he is satisfied, and requiring the parties to the dispute to attend his Court within a specified time, and to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute. The Magistrate then without reference to title peruses the statements, hears the parties, receives the evidence which they produce, takes such further evidence as he thinks necessary, and, if possible, decides whether any and which of the parties is then in possession of the subject of dispute. 'Then' has been interpreted to mean 'at the date on which the Magistrate passed his preliminary order.'

"This interpretation has been embodied in the Bill now before the Council. For 'is then in such possession' has been substituted 'was at the date of the order before mentioned in such possession.'

"My Lord, this chapter of the Procedure Code is of great importance in Bengal, especially in the Eastern tracts which form the delta of the great rivers Ganges and Brahmaputra. It is difficult for any one, who has not had practical experience, to realize the rapidity and extent of the changes caused by diluvion and alluvion every year. Such changes take place by the square mile, and it may well be imagined that questions arise of much intricacy and difficulty as to whether new lands are an accretion to this estate or to that, or form part of an island, or are a reformation on the site of a submerged estate. Such questions have an immediate and powerful interest for the turbulent and pugnacious inhabitants of the neighbourhood, who rush to seize possession, and do not refrain from using the most violent means.

"It is said that 'possession is nine points of the law;' in no country is this maxim better understood and more generally adopted as a motto than in Bengal. The man in possession is the defendant in a civil suit, and the defence is notoriously much stronger than the attack.

"Just as in the old days of seafights between sailing ships the combatants used to manœuvre for the 'weather-gage,' so now two claimants of rights in lands manœuvre for possession, each endeavouring to contrive that the enemy shall fight at a disadvantage.

"Now it is obvious that, between the time when the Police begin to make enquiries into a dispute regarding land, and the date of the Magistrate's order, there is an appreciable interval of time, during which it is possible to have a struggle for actual possession; and it has been proved by experience that this period is utilized for the purpose. The law, then, as it stands, and the draft now before us (without the proviso) invite breaches of the peace, and offer the maintenance of possession as the prize of the successful use of force.

"Considering that this is a most serious practical defect, the Bengal Government, in Mr. Bolton's report (which was written under my instructions and on my responsibility), urged that the date adopted in the clause should be reconsidered, and recommended that the date should be that on which the dispute began on the land or water, in respect of which there is contention. I pressed this view on the Select Committee with the result that the evil which I have described was recognized by the majority, and the proviso in the Bill, as presented to the Council with the Report, was added. This lays down that, if it appears to the Magistrate that any party has, within two months next before the date of such order, been forcibly and wrongfully dispossessed, he may treat the party so dispossessed as if he had been in possession at such date. Unless lawlessness is to be encouraged and possession is to be awarded to the strongest and the least scrupulous, I think that this proviso is a most important improvement, if we are to retain the words 'was at the date of the order before mentioned.' There are, however, two objections which are of some weight, though I cannot agree with the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep in regarding them as paramount. The first is that the parties ought to know from the first the exact case which they have to meet. As Sir Henry Prinsep says in a brief note which he has been so kind as to send me: 'As it is now proposed, the Magistrate's order would be as a snap shot on evidence which the other party could have no opportunity to meet.' To this objection there appear to me to be two answers. First, the proviso would be well known to be a part of the law, and there would be little difficulty in a party's coming prepared with evidence that he had held peaceful possession for two months before the Magistrate's preliminary order. Next, the Magistrate will be empowered by the law to take such further evidence (if any) as he thinks necessary. To this Sir Henry Prinsep rejoins that the summary nature of the procedure will be destroyed. The enquiry will certainly be protracted to some extent, but it will be so protracted only if the case is complicated by forcible dispossession having occurred within the previous two months.

"I myself am inclined to object to this limit of two months as arbitrary and likely to be too short in some cases, and perhaps too long in others.

"On the whole, therefore, I would go back to the old law as it stood before the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861 was enacted, as it was intended by the Committee on the Code that it should stand after the enactment was passed, and as the High Court in earlier days interpreted it. I propose that the time when the dispute arose should be taken as the time which the Magistrate must look to as that determining the question of possession. This is the object of my amendment.

"Since I wish to go back to the law as it stood before the Criminal Procedure Code, I will ask the Council to bear with me while I briefly go through the history of this question.

"The oldest law to which we need refer is Act IV of 1840. It was (as described in the preamble) 'an Act for preventing affrays concerning the possession of land, and for providing relief in cases of forcible dispossession within the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal.' And in the 11th section it was laid down that the Act should not extend to any place beyond the limit of the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, or to the Settlements of Prince of Wale's Island, Singapur or Malacca, or to any place situated within the local limits of the jurisdiction of Her Majesty's Supreme Court at Calcutta.

"With the other provisions we have no present concern; but there are two sections to which I invite the attention of the Council, namely, section 2 and section 4. The former enacted that whenever any Magistrate or other officer exercising the powers of a Magistrate might be 'certified' that a dispute likely to induce a breach of the peace existed concerning any land or produce of land and so forth in his jurisdiction, he should record a proceeding stating the grounds of his being so certified, and should call on all parties concerned in such dispute to attend his Court within a reasonable time and to give in a written statement as respects the actual fact of possession. The Magistrate then was to 'proceed to enquire what party was in possession of the subject of dispute when the dispute arose' (I am quoting the words of the section), 'and after satisfying himself upon that point,' to record a proceeding, declaring the party whom he might decide 'to have been in such possession, to be entitled to retain possession, until ousted by due course of law; and forbidding all disturbance of possession until such time;' and 'if necessary' the Magistrate was required to put such party into possession and maintain him in possession, until the rights of the parties disputing should be determined by a competent Court.

"Section 4 enacted that, if any party should complain to a Magistrate, or other officer exercising the power of a Magistrate, that he had been without authority of law forcibly dispossessed of any land, premises, water, fisheries, crops or other produce of land, the Magistrate or other officer should require the party or parties complained against, and any other parties concerned, to appear and make defence; and if after the examination of the necessary witnesses and documents the complaint appeared to him to be substantiated, he should record a proceeding, ordering the party complaining to be put again into possession of the subject of dispute, and maintained in possession until the right or possession should be determined by a competent Court.

"The general distinction between the two sections is this. Section 2 authorized (and indeed directed) the Magistrate to interfere of his own motion in order to preserve the peace, to declare who was in possession when the dispute arose and who was entitled to retain possession, if necessary to put him into possession, and in any case to forbid all disturbance of such possession except by due course of law. Section 4 on the other hand required the Magistrate to adjudicate on private complaints of unlawful dispossession, and gave him authority to replace the ousted party in possession.

"It has been pressed upon me that only section 4 enabled the Magistrate to restore an ousted party to possession, and that section 2 merely gave him power to restore a party who had been ousted during the pendency of the proceedings. I can find nothing in the words to support this opinion. The section seems clear; the Magistrate inquired who was in possession 'when' the dispute arose, he declared the party whom he might decide 'to have been in possession'—I am using the words of the Act—'to be entitled to retain possession, until ousted by due course of law,' and forbade all disturbance of possession until such time; and 'if necessary' the Magistrate or other officer as aforesaid was required to put such party into possession, and maintain him in it. In cases under section 4 the complaint was of dispossession, and the only remedy possible was to restore possession. In cases under section 2 the person entitled to retain possession might or might not have been dispossessed since the dispute arose. If he had been dispossessed, he was to be put in possession; if he had not been dispossessed, obviously all that was requisite was to forbid disturbance. Possession at the date when the dispute arose was the one point to be looked at.

"After this law had worked for about 21 years the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861 was enacted. I have examined the discussions in the Council and have found that the only point on which there was argument was the proposal not to re-enact the substance of section 4. The mover (Mr. Harington) thought that that section gave the Criminal Courts a jurisdiction more properly exercised by the Civil Courts. Mr. Seton Karr, the Member for Bengal, objected to the omission of section 4, which he considered as valuable as any other part of 'the excellent law of 1840.' He remarked that 'a great deal of praise and a great deal of abuse had been lavished on this useful enactment.' 'He would deprecate any encroachment on Act IV of 1840. It had been successfully worked by a large number of officers. It would occupy a long time to enumerate the disputes it had terminated, and the broken heads it had saved. It was of great simplicity and strength; of admirable versatility; and of peculiar adaptation to the diversified claims which were likely to be preferred to landed interests and rights in this country, which claims it was necessary that those who were responsible for the peace and security of the country should have the means promptly and efficiently to decide.'

"Mr. Harington (on the other hand) 'had had a very long and large experience of the working of Act IV of 1840, and he must say he knew no law which had been more perverted from its proper purpose, or in which the intentions of the Legislature had been more grossly departed from' .... 'The Magistrates often become in such cases Civil Courts of first instance, quite contrary to the intentions of the law, and much injustice was done in consequence. He had little doubt that if the cases referred to by the Hon'ble Member for Bengal as having been decided under section 4 of Act IV, 1840, were examined, it would be found that very many of them did not properly fall under that section.' Mr. Seton Karr admitted that mistakes occurred, but attributed half of them to 'young and inexperienced officers shifting the burden of proof on to the wrong party.' I may here mention on the authority of Beaufort's Digest—a work which was no doubt once very familiar to my friend Sir Henry Prinsep, and to which even I (a comparative junior) had in my early days frequent occasion to refer—that cases under Act IV were triable by Assistants and Deputy Magistrates with 'special powers,' who were equivalent to the second class Magistrates of the present day; and it is not wonderful that officers of this rank sometimes failed to distinguish between such cases as legitimately fell under section 4, and such as were within the province of the Civil Courts. Now cases under section 145 of the Procedure Code are heard by the Magistrate of a district or subdivision or by a Magistrate with first class powers.

"The result of the discussion was that section 4 was not re-enacted; Mr. Harington said that 'the remaining sections of the proposed new chapter had been taken almost word for word from the existing law, and they did not appear to call for any particular remark from him.' The Chairman (I think Sir Barnes Peacock) remarked as follows:—'It was not proposed now by the clause before the Committee to give the Magistrate any greater power than he now possessed, or to take away from him any powers now vested in him. This clause only proposed to give the Magistrate a portion of the power conferred by Act IV of 1840, and when that Act might be repealed, provision could be made in the repealing Bill expressly keeping alive section 4 of the said Act, if it should be found necessary to do so.'

"I think, my Lord, that I have now shown that section 4 is the part of Act IV of 1840 which was objected to, and abandoned, as trenching too much on the Civil Courts, and that it was intended to re-enact section 2 in the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861 with nothing more than verbal amendments.

"One very important change, however, was imperceptibly introduced. Decisions passed under Act IV of 1840 could be appealed to the Sessions Judge, but that officer's orders could not be reviewed either by himself or by the Nijamat Adalat, which held as to the mufassal the place which is now held by the High Court. In regard to such cases (says Beaufort), 'that Court possesses no jurisdiction.' He goes on to say:—'Such being the case, the Court cannot assume o itself jurisdiction on the ground that the orders passed by a Sessions Judge are unwarranted or irregular. Sections 2 and 4, Act IV of 1840, declare in distinct and positive terms that the possession confirmed or given under the orders of the Magistrate is to be maintained until the right of the parties disputing be determined by a competent Court, subject only to one appeal to the Sessions Judge under section 8 of the Act; no review or further proceeding of any kind whatever is mentioned or contemplated by the Act.'

"When the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861 was passed, this rule was quite changed, and from that time till now the executive authorities have been equally perplexed and hampered by the action of the High Court. A law which has from time to time been re-enacted to assist those who are responsible for maintaining the peace has been persistently deprived of its effect by the Judges, who have had no direct interest in maintaining the peace, and whose only function has been to hold the Magistrates' hands. To the District Magistrate (and, I venture to think, to the people) it is of vital importance that the District shall be quiet; if the peace be broken, it is not the High Court that is held responsible.

"Not much inconvenience, however, resulted from the earlier rulings—probably because the Judges had Act IV of 1840 fresh in their memory, and had not forgotten the experience which they had gathered in subordinate offices in the mufassal. I do not wish to weary the Council with many quotations from these rulings, but desire to invite attention to one of them, namely, that given in 1879 by Judges Ainslie and Maclean (both of whom had had large District experience) in the case of Mohesh Chunder Khan, petitioner, reported in the Indian Law Reports, 4 Calcutta, page 417. 'The Deputy Magistrate' (they say) 'seems to think that if two parties come forward, one being lawfully in possession and the other struggling for possession, and the latter succeeds in ousting the former, he is to recognize the stronger and successful party as the one to be maintained in possession under section 530 although such possession has never been acquiesced in, and the struggle for it is in fact that which caused him to interfere. This is an error. The Magistrate must look to possession which may be termed peaceful. He must go back to the time when the present dispute originated, and not to the dispute itself.'

"Very different from this is the ruling which is now in force, that of Justices Tottenham and Ghose in the case of Ambler v. Pushong given on the 24th February. 1885. But, before I quote it, I ought to say that a change had crept into the Code of 1882, which seems to justify those Judges in some measure. Section 145, after directing that the Magistrate shall make an order in writing requiring the parties to appear and put in claims in writing as respects the actual fact of possession, proceeds to say that he shall, after hearing the parties and so forth, 'if possible, decide whether any, and which, of the parties is 'then' in such possession.' What is the meaning of this new word 'then'? I have referred to the papers in the Legislative Department and have found that it did not appear in the Bill as introduced in 1882, but was inserted by the Select Committee. Apparently the first idea of the Select Committee was to insert the words 'who at the date of the said order,' but these were crossed out and 'is then' substituted. It seems that this was regarded as a mere verbal amendment, since it is not noticed in the Committee's report. I cannot find that the question as between 'the date when such dispute arose' and the date of the Magistrate's first order, which 'then' is interpreted to mean, has ever been discussed, though there is a case in which a party appears to have claimed the benefit of his own turbulent conduct even up to the date of the Magistrate's decision. As against him, the date of the Magistrate's first order, and not that of the final decision, was held to be the proper date to be taken. I cannot help thinking that it was to provide for a case of this description, and not with the deliberate intention of changing the old law, that the word 'then' was introduced.

"The Judge in Ambler v. Pushong said as follows:—'For the petitioner it has been contended that "then" has its literal meaning, and means the time during which the enquiry is being made, or at any rate it cannot be construed as having reference to a period previous to the time when the case was instituted by the Magistrate; and this view, I think, is the correct one... ...He has simply to determine which party is de facto in possession at the time when he is enquiring into the matter. And I think that the law contemplates that the time of the institution of proceedings and the time of deciding the case is practically identical. It does not contemplate any change of possession pending the proceedings. The proceedings are intended to be prompt and to be concluded without any delay. In the present case the Magistrate distinctly finds that at the time when he instituted his proceedings, that is on the 18th October last, the first party were in possession having two or three days before ousted the second party who had been in possession for some three or four weeks. That being so, the Magistrate's simple duty was to maintain the first party in possession although he might be of opinion that they were in wrongful possession. He had no power in law in these proceedings to oust the party whom he considered in wrongful possession and maintain in possession the party whom he considered rightfully entitled to possession.'

"Such, my Lord, is the law as it is now interpreted; and such the law will remain if my amendment be rejected, and the proviso struck out as the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep desires! I ask the Council to consider whether it is desirable that a party should be maintained by the State in possession of land which he had seized only two days before the Magistrate's proceeding, when he must have been well aware that the Magistrate was about to act—seizing it from another party who had been in possession for three weeks. The ruling may shew what the law is, but it shews with equal clearness what it ought not to be.

"I will now proceed to offer for the consideration of the Council a few opinions given by executive officers for whose help the law was intended, and who are responsible for preserving the public peace.

"A few years ago, when I first took charge of the Land Revenue Department of the Board of Revenue, I had to consider a proposal made by an officer in Eastern Bengal to ask Government to legislate with the view of transferring to Collectors part of the functions exercised by Magistrates under the Criminal Procedure Code. The opinions of local Officers were asked for and received; and, though I ultimately decided not to ask for the suggested legislation, information of importance and value was collected.

"Mr. Forbes, then Commissioner of Dacca, wrote as follows:—

'That this difficulty is a very real and serious one is quite true, but it can, I think, be shown that it is a difficulty for which the law itself, as it now stands in Chapter XI, Code of Criminal Procedure, coupled with the strained rulings of the High Court is responsible, and there can be no doubt that it can be entirely removed by a judicious amendment of the provisions of that Chapter. The great stumbling blocks in the way of a Magistrate when dealing with a case under Section 145 are the various interpretations which have been given by the High Court to the words "possession" and "the party then in possession." "Possession" has practically come to mean any possession, long or short, peaceable or forcible; and the party "then in possession" has been alternately held to be the party in possession when the dispute originated, at the time when the police were first called in, and finally at the moment the Magistrate took up the case. Then, again, the High Court has at one time held that the Magistrate's enquiry should be a summary one, and at another that he was not justified in refusing to hear lengthy arguments of pleaders, or to grant processes for over 200 witnesses in a single case. The result is that the Magistrate is now called upon to decide between a set of scramblers for possession as to which one had succeeded at a certain moment of time in beating off the others; and the proceedings have come to be spun out to an inordinate length in ascertaining and determining what is soon afterwards pushed aside by the Civil Court as an altogether immaterial point. Under such circumstances it is not a matter for surprise that Magistrates are in despair, and lawlessness is rampant.'

"Mr. Forbes then goes on to point out the necessity for making it clear that the possession to be confirmed must be peaceable undisturbed possession—not necessarily undisputed, but one which is not forcibly disputed.

'It is one thing' (he observes) 'for a Magistrate to have to decide in a rough and tumble contest who is uppermost at a certain moment of time, but quite another for him to ascertain whether there has or has not been a continued peaceful possession by either party. The duty of deciding one of these Box and Cox cases at present bears a close affinity to the three card trick, in which the Magistrate usually guesses one way and the High Court another.'

"Another officer wrote:—

'An eminent counsel told me that Mr. Tottenham's ruling' (that in Ambler v. Pushong) 'had done more than anything else to encourage violence, lawlessness and homicidal riots.'

"Again:—

'Before Mr. Tottenham's ruling Magistrates never used to give effect to acts of fraud force and violence. They construed the words "actual possession" in a sensible and reasonable manner, that is to say, in the way the Legislature intended them to be construed.'

"Once more:—

'Mr. Tottenham's ruling, besides directly encouraging acts of violence and homicidal riots, has utterly demoralized the police in these disputes, and constitutes a strong incentive to bribery and corruption.'

"I may remark that I do not entirely agree with this officer, for I think that the ruling though pushed to the utmost limits, is still justified in the main by the existing law; but I indicate the consequences of that law.

"I now desire to refer to some of the opinions given by Bengal officers on the Bill as first drafted. Mr. Ahmed, the Inspector of Registration, writes:—

'Section 145 (4) and (5) say that the Magistrate should decide which party was in possession on the date of his first order. I think this is not right. It is generally the stronger party who takes forcible possession, and it is generally the weaker party who comes to the Magistrate for redress. The final order should be to declare that party to have possession and keep possession who was in possession when the dispute began. My experience is that this is generally more equitable.'

"Mr. Beatson-Bell, who has had much experience of one of the districts most concerned, says:—

'It is very desirable that the Magistrate should make over the property to the last person, if any, who was in peaceful possession. The Bill as it stands puts a premium upon forcible or clandestine seizure of property.'

"Mr. Faulder (an experienced and careful Magistrate) says:—

'It is necessary to fix the moment, possession at which is to be confirmed, but I think the moment proposed is too late. A Magistrate should not be allowed to upset possession given by a Civil Court, or to confirm possession obtained by force during the pendency of the proceedings, but under the proposed clause, he could only confirm usurped possession, however illegal and barefaced. The Calcutta High Court have ruled that the Magistrate should determine which party was last in undisputed possession immediately before the dispute arose, which led to the matter being brought into Court under Section 145. This seems to be the most reasonable moment to fix.'

"Mr. Agasti (the Native Magistrate of another Eastern Deltaic District) says:—

'I am afraid the solution of the difficulty about the time of possession is not so easy as is supposed. If possession at the date of the order mentioned in paragraph 1 of clause 145 is to guide the Magistrate, the result, in the overwhelming majority of cases in the Districts of Eastern Bengal, at any rate, where these disputes are the commonest, will be that the Magistrate will have to attach under section 146. Immediately previous to or at the date of, the order both parties will have exercised some act or other of possession, though such possession for one party cannot be peaceful If possession at the date of the police report, or receipt of other information was to be the guide the matter would improve a little, but even then all difficulties will not be removed; for parties generally begin fighting some time before the police become cognizant of the fact—through village chaukidars in the great majority of cases—or other information that can be acted upon reaches the Magistrate. Probably the difficulty may be removed by defining possession to mean only undisturbed and peaceful possession.'

"Another Native District Magistrate, the whole of whose observations well deserve consideration, though they are too long for quotation, says:—

'It is proposed to limit the Magistrate's enquiry to the fact of actual possession at the date of the Magistrate's order. This, I am afraid, will lead to dangerous consequences. In all land disputes, the party declared to be in actual possession by a Magistrate secures a great advantage over his adversary; and if the amendment become law, there will be keen competition to gain and retain possession of the subject-matter of dispute by violent and unscrupulous means, as soon as any enquiry is set on foot by the police or the Magistrate.'

"The Magistrate concludes his remarks as follows:—

'If the suggestion which I make is not adopted, I should urge that the actual possession (peaceful or otherwise) which should be the subject of enquiry, should at least be the actual possession, not at the date of the Magistrate's order, but at the date when the dispute is brought to the notice of the police or the Magistrate, whichever is the first of the two. Otherwise Magistrate and police officers will be placed in a very unpleasant situation. They will be compelled in many cases to take hurried action without full and proper enquiry, and unscrupulous policemen who, pending the issue of any order under section 145, Civil Procedure Code, may be deputed to keep the peace, will find great opportunities of obtaining bribes opened out to them, and they will be tempted to lend their aid to the man who can bribe them most to take possession of the subject of dispute by unfair means.'

"I fear I have exhausted the indulgence of the Council already, and I will refrain from further quotations. The opinions which I have read are those of no theorists or dispensers of technical justice; the authors are experts, are close to the facts, and upon them rests the burden of responsibility, and of practical difficulties.

"I think, My Lord, that I have now proved that the words which I desire to replace in the law have fallen out of it through no deliberate purpose; that the existing law which it is desired by some to accentuate, and to continue, is dangerous to the public peace, and that the Magistrates who have to depend upon this law find that they hold in their hands a useless semblance of a weapon.

"The British Indian Association, the Bar, and the Chamber of Commerce all agree in condemning it. In fact, all those who are practically interested are on this side. I ask the Council to give their opinions the most serious consideration. I beg to move the amendment which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS said :—"This amendment which has been moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens no doubt raises a very important and a very debateable question. It is a question which we considered at very great length in the Select Committee, and what we did there was that we inserted a proviso which was a compromise between the opposing views. However, neither side is satisfied with the compromise. All I can say is this, that I hope the Council will carefully attend to the arguments brought forward on the other side by my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep, and after considering the arguments pro and con will come to a careful conclusion. I have only one word more to add, and that is about the history of the present matter. As the clause was settled in Simla, it was settled with Sir Henry Prinsep that the Magistrate in making his order should have inquired into the possession at the date when his order was applied for, and the reason for this was that it is important to have some fixed date at which the Magistrate is to act. The Magistrate under this clause is not to decide questions of title but is to confirm existing actual possession. But, then, when we came to consider the matter in Select Committee, this objection was pointed out to us. The Magistrate will probably not be put in motion and will not hear the case until the ordinary possession has been disturbed. When a man has been evicted that is the time when he runs off to the Magistrate for protection, and if the section remained as it was originally drafted, the Magistrate would be obliged to confirm him in possession. In Committee we saw the difficulties of both views and we came to the conclusion that primâ facie the duty of the Magistrate was not to go into questions of title but to confirm the party in possession. If, however, it turned out that any party had been wrongfully and forcibly dispossessed, it was thought that the Magistrate ought to take cognizance of such a case, and give back the actual possession to the party who had been so ousted ; but it was thought undesirable that the Magistrate should go into a long roving inquiry, and we therefore fixed the period at which he might re-place the party forcibly dispossessed in possession at two months. But neither party is satisfied with this rule, and I hope, therefore, the Council will clearly hear the arguments on both sides and then come to a decision."

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT intimated, with reference to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep's desire to address the Council at this stage, that he thought this would be convenient and would be glad to give effect to the Hon'ble Member's wish by suspending the Rules.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said :—"I am glad to have Your Lordship's permission to commence the debate on this amendment by stating the grounds on which it should, in my opinion, be rejected.

"The Hon'ble Member has presented a thrilling picture of the state of the lawlessness in some districts in Bengal alleged to have been caused by the present law, which it is proposed in the Bill to express in clearer terms. I venture to state that this picture is very exaggerated, and to add that if such confusion does anywhere exist it is due to imperfect acquaintance of District-officers with the existing law. It affords ample redress for all the grievances complained of, as well as for the prevention of all attempts to prevent the useful operation of section 145, and District-officers would have been better employed if they had encouraged the application of the present law rather than in advocating an alteration of it in a manner which has already been condemned as mischievous in its operation before the Code of 1861. It is also inconceivable that, if there had been such urgent need as now represented for altering it, the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir Charles Elliott, in expressing his opinion on the matters requiring amendment in the new Code of Criminal Procedure, should never have referred to it, and that it should have been left for the Government of Bengal, temporarily administered by the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment in 1897, to have laid such stress on this subject. I am, moreover, not prepared to accept Mr. Stevens' reading of Act IV of 1840. I have been long enough in the service of Government to have had practical experience and knowledge of that Act ; I have decided hundreds of cases under it, and therefore I am in a better position than one reading it for the first time to express an opinion on its meaning or the manner in which it was in actual operation in our Courts.

"This amendment will make a very material alteration in the present law which has remained unaltered since the enactment of the Code of 1861, and I appeal to Your Lordship and this Council whether such an amendment should be entertained at this late stage of the Bill, when this Council cannot have the advantage of the opinions of all the Local Governments concerned as well as of the Judges of the High Court on it. My Hon'ble friend who has moved this amendment has referred to some decisions of the Calcutta High Court in which the learned Judges have held that the possession to be found by a Magistrate is the possession at the time of the commencement of the dispute and not that at the time that the Magistrate has interposed to prevent a breach of the peace; but I can confidently appeal to a long series of cases reported in Law Reports since the passing of the Code of 1861, as showing that the law has not been so laid down by the High Courts of Madras, Bombay and Allahabad, while these solitary cases of the Calcutta High Court are met by an overwhelming majority of cases in the same Court in which the contrary view has been expressed and acted upon. I can also challenge an examination of the proceedings of the Legislative Council which will show that this view was accepted on debate when the Code of 1861 was being passed, and that never at any time when the Codes of 1872 and of 1882 were under preparation in the Legislative Department or under discussion in this Council was an alteration ever contemplated. I can also point to the reports submitted to Government of India, on its invitation for suggestions to amend the Code of 1882, that not one suggestion in the direction of the proposed amendment was made except by a few local officers in Bengal, and that in submitting these reports the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal in a long letter to the Government of India never referred to the subject but placed such suggestions within the remark that 'many other suggestions have been made which were not considered important enough to include in this abstract.'

"So far, therefore, I hope that I have satisfied the Council it was everywhere practically accepted that it was the duty of the Magistrate in proceedings under section 145 to find only the actual possession at the time of his taking action to prevent a breach of the peace; that from the proceedings of the Legislative Council it is shown that that was the object of the law; and that there has been no idea on the part of the Legislature, from 1860 until now, ever to vary the law as expressed in the Code of 1861.

"It was in view of the few decisions of the Calcutta High Court to the contrary which imparted an uncertainty in the law that in discussions with the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill I induced him to express the matter emphatically so that there should no longer be any doubt on the subject. The amendment thus made, which I maintain under the circumstances was only verbal, consisted in the last words of sub-section (4), to the effect that the Magistrate was, if possible, to decide whether any and which of the parties was at the date of the order abovementioned in such possession of the said subject; the words 'was at the date of the order abovementioned' being substituted for the words is then. This verbal alteration I would here again state has been passed without comment by all those reporting on the Bill except by the Government of Bengal, then administered by the Hon'ble mover of the amendment now before this Council, and the Chief Commissioner of Assam; so that it may be said that it has otherwise received unanimous approval. I happened to know that it was approved of by the Judges of the High Court of Calcutta, and as I am much interested in settling this part of the law I was much disappointed at finding from their report that the Hon'ble Judges of that Court had made no mention of it, but on inquiry I have learnt that it was discussed at a full meeting of the Judges, who thought that it was unnecessary to refer expressly to this matter because the law thus set out was what it was and what it should be.

"On these grounds alone I submit to the Council that the amendment now under discussion should be negatived, or that at least, if the Council has any doubt on the subject, the matter which involves a considerable alteration in a most important part of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be referred for the opinions of other Local Governments and all the High Courts of this country rather than be now accepted at the instance of the Government of Bengal. I attach the highest importance to this matter, not only because the amendment has not received proper criticism, but because, first, it will introduce an entirely new law into other Provinces, and a law which has hitherto never existed in those Provinces ; next, because the amendment introduces a summary jurisdiction which will interfere most materially with the present jurisdictions of the Civil and Criminal Courts ; next because such interference is, as I shall presently proceed to show, altogether unnecessary for the purpose of doing complete justice ; and, lastly, because it is certain to operate very prejudicially to the future determination of rights of property. I have also another, and to my mind, a fatal objection to the amendment in the vague terms in which it has been expressed.

"I must now ask the attention of the Council to the state of the law before the Code of 1861 in order that it may be better able to comprehend the object and scope of the amendment.

"There was then in force Act IV of 1840, only two sections of which need be described for the purposes of the present argument. Section 2 of that Act practically corresponded with section 145 of the Code of 1882. It did not, nor was it ever held to, enable a Magistrate in proceedings taken under it to restore a possession which had been illegally and forcibly disturbed unless this had been caused after he had taken action under that law. The latter part of section 2 was designed to enable this, and its operation was so limited. Section 4 of that Act provided for the restoration of a possession disturbed by illegal and forcible means. It empowered a Magistrate on complaint made to restore a person who had been illegally and forcibly dispossessed of land, etc., within one month before the date of complaint. Act IV of 1840, however, was in force only in the Bengal Presidency, including Bengal Proper and the North-Western Provinces. There was not, and there never has been, any corresponding law in force elsewhere. In the Presidencies of Madras and Bombay the Magistrates were, I believe, able to bind over disputing persons to keep the peace, but they had no power to declare or maintain possession of land, etc. The law in those Provinces gave power to officers in exercise of civil jurisdiction, generally of the lowest grade, to give relief in cases of forcible and illegal dispossession. As far as I can ascertain there was no such law in Bengal except that expressed in Act IV of 1840, section 4.

"When the preparation of a Code of Criminal Procedure came under consideration before the Legislative Council on the report and draft Bill prepared by the Indian Law Commissioners specially appointed for such purpose, it was decided (1) to repeal Act IV of 1840, (2) to give a general right to bring possessory actions for summary decision by the Civil Courts, and (3) to re-enact section 2 of the Act of 1840 so as to apply it to those parts of British India to which the Code of Criminal Procedure might be extended, and this was practically to the whole of British India. It will be seen that some opposition to this was raised by Mr. Seton Karr, who then represented Bengal in the Legislative Council, but after an explanation given by Mr. Harington, who was in charge of the Criminal Procedure Bill, it it was not pressed.

"Mr. Harington's remarks on this subject are deserving of attention because what was said in 1861 is as applicable to its fullest extent in 1898, and Mr. Harington's reputation as one thoroughly conversant with Indian law and of the highest experience and knowledge of all matters connected with the administration could not be equalled. He afterwards became one of the Members of the Viceroy's Council, and he is always referred to by Sir Henry Maine, one of his colleagues, in terms of the highest respect and veneration, and I venture to say that it would not be possible to obtain a higher certificate. Mr. Harington thus expressed himself :—

'He had had a very long and large experience of the working of Act IV of 1840, and he must say he knew no law which had been more perverted from its proper purpose. or in the administration of which the intention of the Legislature had been more grossly departed from. Instead of being restricted in its application, as the law intended, cases without number have been instituted under it, in which the Magistrate had no jurisdiction, and which should have gone to the Civil Courts. The Magistrates often became in such cases Civil Courts of first instance, quite contrary to the intentions of the law, and much injustice was done in consequence.'

"The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Sir Barnes Peacock, who was Chairman, followed :—

'Act IV of 1840 extended to two subjects, namely, first, retaining a man in possession and preventing a breach of the peace; and, secondly, under section 4 putting again in possession a man who had been turned out of possession. He thought that the duty of the Magistrate was to prevent a breach of the peace; and, if the Magistrate apprehended that a breach of the peace was likely to ensue, he might, in order to prevent such breach, declare who was in actual possession, and, having done so, retain that party in possession until a competent Court decided on the question of the right to possession. That he (the Chairman) thought was all that a Magistrate ought to do. If a person should be wrongfully turned out of possession by another party, then, under section 15 of Act XIV of 1859, he might go immediately to a Civil Court, and the Civil Court, without trying the question of right, would restore him to possession until the other party chose to assert his right by instituting a suit to establish his title to the property in dispute and to recover possession thereof. You did not want two different proceedings. If the case was to go to a Court of law, you did not want the Magistrate to put the ousted party into possession.'

"That is exactly the position which I desire to maintain. The Council will bear in mind that this is an explanation of the Code of 1861. I have already stated that a careful examination of all the proceedings of the Legislative Council has shown that at no time during the preparation of more recent Bills on the subject or discussions on those Bills before they became the Codes of 1872 and 1882 was there any suggestion or inclination that I can find that there should be any alteration of the law in respect of the matter under discussion, though unfortunately the restlessness of draughtsmen, eager for improvement in expression, has caused a few verbal alterations; but if these verbal alterations are carefully examined, they do not mean any substantial alteration, and the proceedings to which I have referred bear this out. But, as I have also stated, there have been a few casual deviations in some reported decisions of the Calcutta High Court. These have never been followed even by other Judges of the same Court, and the overwhelming weight of authority of that Court is against them. If these cases are examined, it will be found that the learned Judges who delivered judgment in those exceptional cases amply illustrated the well-known and trite saying that hard cases make bad law. The parties for whom the Judges sympathised had other and sufficient remedies, and to these they should have been referred.

"And now I would ask, why is the law enacted in 1861 and twice re-enacted in 1872 and 1882 now to be altered? No cause is shown which did not exist in 1861, and then as I have shown the change in Bengal, and in Bengal alone be it remembered, was justified. Surely the Council will hesitate before restoring to Bengal a law deliberately altered in 1861, and in making a new law for other parts of British India one that those responsible for the government of those large provinces have never asked for. Their opinions have never been invited, and who can say that they will not be adverse to such a revolution of the existing practice? Even in Bengal I am in a position to say that the Judges of the High Court of Calcutta are unanimously in favour of the present law as more clearly and emphatically expressed in the Bill.

"But a great deal has been said against the impropriety and injustice of maintaining a possession wrongfully and forcibly obtained. I hope that it will be understood that I have no sympathy with such a wrong-doer or that I am as anxious as any of the District-officers of Bengal to put down lawlessness or chicanery which they report has been encouraged successfully to defeat the present law. But I maintain that the present law is strong enough to afford full redress for any injuries so caused, to punish lawlessness, and to defeat underhand malpractices, and I maintain that it is only by a competent Court and in a regular trial held expressly with that object that any person can properly be found to have acquired possession of land through illegal and forcible means. Proceedings under section 145 are not directed to that object, and they should not be diverted from the useful object for which that law was enacted.

"The trial will then be on an issue expressly directed to that point. The object of section 145 is to prevent a breach of the peace, and it is only when that is imminent that a Magistrate can interpose. His duty is then to remove the cause of dispute by affirming and maintaining actual possession found by him at the time of his interposition. And when he has done this his functions under section 145 are at an end. The parties to the dispute are at the outset called upon 'to put in written statements of their respective claims as respects the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute', and 'the Magistrate shall then without reference to the merits of the claims of any such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute' 'if possible decide whether any and which of the parties is then in such possession of the said subject'. I have quoted the words of the present law. It is actual possession that the Magistrate is to find and maintain, and the law declares that this shall be without reference to the merits of any claims of any of the parties to a right to possess. These are matters distinctly reserved for consideration elsewhere. Mr. Stevens has referred 'to the merits of any claims of any of the parties to a right to possess' which are thus expressly reserved as a claim to title to the property. The words are not so limited. One such claim may indeed depend on the right and title to the property, but the right be restored on proof of an illegal and forcible possession without reference to title is equally within the terms, and in both respects ample remedies are provided for relief. There is the right of suit in a Civil Court which may be by a summary action known as a possessory action without reference to title to the property, as well as a suit to obtain possession on proof of title. Recourse can also be had by a complaint to the Magistrate if there has been forcible dispossession attended by criminal force, and on proof of such an offence by conviction of the offender a Magistrate is expressly empowered by section 522 of the Code to order the complainant to be restored to possession. In either of such cases the Civil or Criminal Court will proceed to try a distinct issue raised by the plaintiff or complainant in which the time and nature of the act of wrongful and forcible dispossession will be stated, and it will be for the party invoking the assistance of the Civil or Criminal Court to prove the issue raised by him. Surely this is ample. It is a well-known rule that a Court should be set in motion only by the party affected by the illegal conduct of another, and why, may I ask, should there be a departure from this salutary principle ?

"The Government of Bengal under the temporary rule of the mover of the amendment has stated that—'It is represented that this' (that is, an order by the Magistrate declaring and maintaining actual possession at the time of his taking proceedings under section 145) 'will encourage the forcible taking of possession by one or other of the parties to a dispute before the case is reported by the police to the Magistrate, or even subsequently up to the date on which the Magistrate records his first order. The police might even connive with one party and delay reporting the dispute until that party has succeeded in forcibly ousting the rival claimant.'

"With all deference to an argument proceeding from so high an authority, I venture to say that it is absolutely unsound. What if either of the contingencies contemplated happens ? One would think that the law gives no redress ; and that the party so ejected would necessarily be prejudiced and would suffer from proceedings taken under section 145. The law is as open to him as to any one against whom an offence has been committed. He has a remedy either by complaint to a Magistrate of the offence committed ; and if on the trial he establishes his case and the accused is convicted, the law, section 522, expressly empowers the Magistrate to restore the possession which has been illegally and forcibly disturbed. Or he can bring a possessory action in the Civil Court in which he can obtain summarily an order for restoration of possession without reference to any title to the particular property, and this order is not open to appeal or even to a review of judgment. In neither case will his position or his rights be in any way affected by proceedings under section 145, for an order passed against him under that law would as expressed by it be 'without reference to the merits of his claim to a right to possess' the land. I venture also to say that a case in the Criminal Court or a possessory suit in the Civil Court would be decided as promptly as proceedings under section 145. And, as regards temptations to the police to misconduct themselves so as to favour one of the parties, I should say that these temptations would be far greater if, in a case properly tried under section 145 to ascertain actual possession at the time of the Magistrate's order, it be possible for one of the parties to obtain evidence through the connivance of the police of his possession at any earlier period when the dispute is said to have arisen, and after he has realised from the evidence of his adversary already recorded that he must be defeated on the issue of actual present possession.

"Let me state a case to make my meaning clear. A and B are the disputing parties called upon by the Magistrate under section 145 to put in written statements of their respective claims in respect to the fact of actual possession of the subject of dispute. Written statements are put in, and the trial, if the proceedings may be so termed, commences. Each party has to prove the affirmative, that is to say, the fact of his actual possession. A commences and primâ facie his evidence is conclusive. B realises this and asks for and obtains an adjournment on some specious grounds. He then starts a new case, such as the amendment would permit, that his possession was illegally and forcibly disturbed on an earlier date. The Magistrate changes the issue under trial. Can anything be more unfair? What a field for false evidence, what an opportunity for obtaining the sympathies of the police by illegal gratifications! And what necessity is there for allowing this? Why should not B have started this case long ago either by complaint in the Magistrate's Court of the offence now brought to notice or by a possessory action in the Civil Court? Either Court would have given him the relief which the amendment, if it is accepted, would enable the Magistrate to give him in proceedings deliberately directed to the trial of another issue—present actual possession. An order properly given under section 145 on the present law and on the Bill as it now stands would not debar him from seeking redress from either of these Courts if he sets it in motion properly, and in either case the order passed would supersede the effect of an order under section 145 which is only an ad interim order. In such a case too his adversary would have full notice of the case that he has to meet.

"It may perhaps be said that a more speedy relief will be given under a law expressed as in the terms of the amendment. I venture to dispute this. If the case under its new form as contemplated by the amendment be tried, the proceedings will be as in a trial for an offence, that is, illegal dispossession accompanied by criminal force, and they will not be shorter than in a regular trial. They will also lose the merit of a criminal trial, for they will not have commenced on a complaint stating certain acts constituting the alleged offence, verified on oath by the examination of the complainant, but they will proceed on loose statements made by comparatively irresponsible witnesses; and, lastly, if the alleged offence be established, it will not be possible for the Magistrate in such proceedings to convict and punish the aggressor for breaking the law. If, on the other hand, the party is left to his remedy by a possessory suit in the Civil Court, the trial, being under summary jurisdiction, will be prompt and will be brought to an early termination, for there will be only one simple issue of fact for determination. I am aware that executive officers who know little of the practice of Civil Courts and are too apt to be influenced to their prejudice by evil report may be inclined to dispute my statement that the trial of possessory actions is tried and completed without delay. But here again I will refer to what Mr. Harington said in 1861, quoting with his approval and entire concurrence a report of the Commissioner of Benares to the following effect:—

'This class of cases was transferred to the Magistrates on account of the delay in the Civil Courts. Now that civil suits are decided almost as fast as Act IV of 1840 cases, there seems no reason for burdening the Magistrates any longer with any of these cases except those involving actual violence and breach of the peace punishable as assault.'

"From a long experience of the Courts of Bengal commencing from 1862 almost without interruption to the present time, I can confirm this statement in regard to the trial of possessory actions under summary jurisdiction as true up to the present time. Those cases in which simple issues of fact are alone raised are nearly always tried at the first hearing, if the parties are ready. They are necessarily summary suits. The law gives no right of appeal, and even an application for review of judgment is barred. There is, therefore, no impediment to their early decision, and, as a matter of fact, my experience goes to show that there is very rarely, if ever, any delay in their trial. I am unable to claim such promptness in proceeding under section 145 before Magistrates, for I can point to many instances of delays of months in bringing them to a termination.

"What reason, therefore, may I ask, is shown by those who are in favour of the amendment for interfering with the jurisdiction of the Civil and Criminal Courts for the decision of such matters in a regular manner—a jurisdiction which has been deliberately conferred and uniformly exercised beyond memory of the vast majority of officers of our Local Governments?"

The Hon'ble SIR JOHN WOODBURN:—"May I interrupt my Hon'ble friend for a moment to ask what this summary jurisdiction in Bengal is under?"

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP:—"It is under the Specific Relief Act of 1869. It was originally under the Act of 1859 which remained in force until the Specific Relief Act, and the Act of 1859, came into force simultaneously with the Criminal Procedure of 1861.

"I have only one other point to which I would desire to refer, and this relates to the terms of the amendment. It is proposed to enact that the Magistrate should decide whether any and which of the parties was, at the time when the dispute arose, in such (that is, actual) possession of the said subject. No limitation is prescribed. The Magistrate is to be given a free hand to go back as far as he thinks proper to ascertain the time at which the dispute arose. I can point to cases in which police-reports on which proceedings have eventually been taken under section 145 have shown the existence of a dispute, such as would come within the terms of the section, for many months, if not years, before the Magistrate has instituted proceedings under section 145. The limitation in regard to a possessory action in the Civil Court is six months from the date of an illegal and forcible dispossession. Act IV of 1840, section 4, which it is now proposed practically to re-enact, enabled the Magistrate to restore the possession disturbed by illegal and forcible means on a complaint made to him, and not otherwise, within one month from the date of such dispossession. I submit that it would be unreasonable, I may say impossible, to give a Magistrate power to act as now proposed without any limit of time, and on these grounds, if for no other, I maintain that the amendment cannot be accepted.

"My Lord, I feel that I owe an apology to this Council for having so long detained it in explaining at considerable length my reasons for opposing this amendment. I have been employed by Your Lordship's Government to take an active part in assisting to prepare this Bill. It is a subject in which I feel the greatest interest, and it has been my desire to spare no effort to assist in adding to the Statute-book of India a law which may be accepted by those who have to administer it as a substantial improvement on the existing law. If I were asked what part of the Code of Criminal Procedure was in my opinion most important to the administration of this country, both in regard to the benefits to be conferred and also in regard to the danger and mischief likely to ensue if power conferred on Magistrates were carelessly or arbitrarily exercised, I should have no hesitation in pointing to section 145. It is beneficial because, by conferring summary jurisdiction on Magistrates, it strengthens the administration by enabling a Magistrate to prevent a breach of the peace and a serious agrarian riot. But, as pointed out by Mr. Harington and Sir Barnes Peacock in 1861, unless this power be carefully exercised and, I may add, restricted to its legitimate objects, nothing can be more mischievous or dangerous to private rights of property. It was on these grounds that the power which it is now proposed to confer on Magistrates throughout British India was withdrawn from Magistrates in Bengal, by whom alone it had been exercised. The conferring, moreover, of powers so as to alter the original object of inquiry, that is, actual possession at the time of the Magistrate's order interposing to prevent a breach of the peace, and to enable a Magistrate to determine possession of an anterior date, without any limit of time and not on the complaint of any person who may have suffered, is, to my mind, offering a premium to suborning false evidence to be adduced after the proceedings have commenced and, indeed, after the evidence of the opposite side may have been taken. It will also tend to offer additional temptations to a corrupt police to assist in establishing a new case set up as an after thought even as a forlorn hope.

"I have done my duty to lay before this Council the serious objections which I have to the proposed alteration of our existing law and, if I should unfortunately fail to convince the Members of this Council of the soundness of my objections, I shall at least have the satisfaction of feeling that I am in no way responsible for the mischief and injustice which from an unusually long experience I can confidently state will follow."

The Hon'ble MR. NICHOLSON said :—"After the exposition of the case given to us by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep in opposing the amendment, I would not add my mite to the discussion, but that I desire to state my view briefly as an executive officer of a province other than Bengal. I disagree with the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens' amendment—so far as regards the substitution of the words 'the time when the dispute arose'—partly because the change does not appear to me to be necessary, partly because it would, in my opinion, have a positively bad effect.

"The whole raison d'être of this chapter, which gives Magistrates a quasi-civil jurisdiction, is the prevention of breaches of the peace ; prior to the Code of 1861 there was, I believe, no law except that of 1840 in Bengal, which gave Magistrates this exceptional power, while, since 1861, the civil law with, inter alia, its provision for summary restoration of possession in cases of forcible disturbance, has taken away from Magistrates any necessity for dealing with possession cases except in their preventive capacity. Hence the criminal law, ever since 1861, has given power to the Magistrate solely to ascertain possession 'then,' at the time of enquiry, which for all practical purposes was interpreted as the time when the Magistrate began his enquiry, that is, when he passed the preliminary order under section 145. All that the Select Committee have done, outside of the new proviso, is to make it clear that this preliminary order shall be the starting point of the Magistrate's enquiry. Hence in face of the long existence and, in general, the fair working of the present law, it lies on the mover of the amendment to show strong cause for an amendment which is to affect the whole of India and not merely to apply to Bengal, and which will, in fact, as the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep has told us, actually introduce into provinces outside of Bengal, a law which has never yet existed in them, viz., that power of going into and deciding questions of possession anterior to the date of enquiry, which existed only in Bengal by virtue of the Act of 1840. Such cause has, I submit, not been shown.

"It is urged for the amendment that if the clause as it has come from the Select Committee be passed, there will be endeavours in each case to dispossess the occupier by force as soon as an enquiry is set on foot by the police: hence actual incentives to breaches of the peace, and the chance that trespassers by force will reap the advantage of their own wrong. My Lord, I consider that the danger is in general non-existent, at all events in the province with which I am acquainted. Practically, as I have said, there has been no alteration in the law, and hence there is no reason that what has not happened in the past should happen in the future; in Madras, at least, I have known of no cases where the beginning of an enquiry has been followed, as an effect, by attempts at violent dispossession. In fact, there is good reason why such attempts should not be made ; when the attention of the authorities has been expressly turned to a dispute, there is surely less rather than greater probability of recourse to violence: open violence is comparatively easy of proof, and a claimant would put himself hopelessly in the wrong by attempts, pendente lite, at forcible dispossession. Again—and I make this a chief point—should any such attempt be made, the enquiry into possession would be replaced, and properly replaced, whether by the action of the party or of the authorities, by a regular criminal case, with the chances that the offender would be punished and that the Magistrate would, in case of proved disturbance of possession, restore it under the provisions of section 522 and thus do away with the necessity for an enquiry under Chapter XII. Moreover, in by far the greater number of cases it is not physical possession, such as the living in a house, that is in dispute, but such possession as is involved in the cultivation of land, very often through rival tenants, payments of rent, etc., and in such cases dispossession by force does not take place, but only indecisive breaches of the peace. If, as a matter of fact, any chance of such forcible dispossession should arise, a provision such as that contained in the Hon'ble Mr. James's amendment would furnish a remedy. Hence I do not consider the change under discussion to be necessary.

"On the other hand, I see grave objection to it. Instead of possession at a particular and recent period, it is possession at an indefinite period, viz., the beginning of the dispute, that would have to be decided. Such beginning may have been, and often is, many years before, and the parties to a dispute may be merely the successors in interest of the original disputants: how are we to go back to some remote possession? Moreover, it is precisely here that the chief objection lies, viz., that the Magistrate will no longer be concerned in deciding who is in de facto possession, but who was, once upon a time, the possessor, and consequently, who should be now the proper possessor: in other words, it will not be who is, but who ought to be, in possession: the enquiry will not be into questions of possession, but into questions of title. That is not the object of the power given to Magistrates under Chapter XII, and I need hardly say how eagerly parties will, if the scope of the enquiry includes questions of title, rush to the Magistrates' Courts for a summary decision by which they hope both to force their opponents into a Civil Court as plaintiffs, and to place them at a disadvantage in such Courts, and how largely the time of the Magistrates will be taken up in quasi-civil work.

"I therefore deprecate the acceptance of this amendment."

The Hon'ble MR. LATOUCHE said :—"My Lord, I am opposed to this amendment because it substitutes for a fixed date a date which is uncertain and indefinite, namely, the date when the dispute arose. The Magistrate intervenes in a dispute when it is at the stage when it is likely to cause a breach of the peace, but the dispute may be a chronic one or may have arisen long previously, or the time when it arose may be quite uncertain.

"The Magistrate calls on the parties to produce evidence of atual possession and, in the words of section 145 (4), without reference to the merits of the claims of any of such parties to a right to possess the subject of dispute decides, if possible, the fact of possession. Section 4 of Act IV of 1840 empowered a Magistrate, on complaint of forcible dispossession within one month, to restore possession, but this portion of Act IV of 1840 was deliberately omitted when the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861 was framed, and between 1861 and 1872 a person dispossessed could recover possession only in the Civil Court. He can now recover possession in the Civil Court under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, which runs—

'If any person is dispossessed without his consent of immoveable property otherwise than in due course of law, he may by suit instituted within six months from the date of the dispossession recover possession thereof notwithstanding any other title that may be set up in such suit.'

"But in the Code of 1872 a section was inserted in this chapter which provided that whenever a person was convicted of an offence attended by criminal force, if it appears to the Court that by such force any person has been dispossessed of any immoveable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be restored to the possession of the same.

"This section was re-enacted in the Code of 1882, but was removed from Chapter XII, and it appears in the present Bill as section 522.

"The present law empowers a Magistrate's Court to restore possession if force was used in dispossessing any person from immoveable property, but if the dispossession was merely wrongful or against the consent of the occupier, the aggrieved person must recover possession in the Civil Court either summarily or by regular suit.

"The present amendment goes considerably beyond the proviso inserted by the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—"This has always been one of the most difficult, quite the most difficult section in the Code. First of all we had in 1882 the matter complicated by the introduction of the word 'then'. Nobody knew what that meant. If you took it in a grammatical sense it meant at the date of the decision, but that was impossible as the evidence related to a period anterior to the decision. Then the courts were driven to say it meant the time of the first order. Then there came a number of cases in which the result was so exceedingly unsatisfactory to the Court that they tried to get out of it. There was one case in which after it had been decided that the word 'then' meant at the date of the order or the beginning of the enquiry this state of things happened. The Teotah Raja had got a char and the char raiyats got discontented and they set up another malik or proprietor—a neighbouring man who really had no rights. They turned to him and paid rent to him for six months. The Teotah Raja then with his men went on the char and the Magistrate found that as it was a case of constructive possession by receipt of rent that therefore the new man Sumboo Chunder to whom the raiyats had been paying rent for six months was in possession. This came up to the High Court in revision. The High Court did not like the result, and Mr. Justice Pigot came to the conclusion that though there was such a thing as constructive possession by receipt of rent, yet that the right to receive the rent was the real possession; therefore the Teotah Raja was in possession. Then came the Katras-Jherria case. This was the case of a coal mine. The lessor wanted to oust the lessee and got all the workmen to turn round and join him and he appointed a Manager to take possession. He paid all the workmen to take his side and began working the colliery. All the lessee was able to do was to maintain possession of the bungalow. The Magistrate thought himself bound to hold that the lessor was in possession as he had got the workmen to join him a few days before the issue of the order. It came up to the High Court and they got out of it by finding that nobody was in possession, because the one was in the bungalow and the other man was in the pit. The fact of the matter is that it is a most difficult thing to decide, because first of all you have great difficulty as to what is possession. In Madras they have laid down that this section refers only to possession of something which is capable of actual possession, such as a house or land that you are actually cultivating yourself. In Bengal at one time this view obtained favour. In the Act of 1882, they put in the words 'possession of tangible immoveable property', meaning thereby, as is frequently thought property capable of actual physical possession and not a constructive right to receive rent which in the English law is looked upon as a reversion and incorporeal. However, the High Court thought that the results would be so lamentable and there would probably be such a frightful amount of rioting, that they did a certain amount of violence to the words and they acted on the old interpretation that receipt of rent was possession of land. The objection to the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens' amendment, which I heartily sympathise with from a moral point of view, is this: the first issue would be, when did this dispute arise, and on that it would be very difficult to come to any conclusion at all. When you had ascertained when the dispute arose you would have solved the difficulty, but it may be that it was years before. When you come to a question about a char and try to find out who was in possession a year before, it is more difficult still, and I can assure Your Excellency that the mass of evidence and papers that they produce on both sides to show that they have been in possession for years is something perfectly appalling, and it is very difficult to decide any thing at all. I therefore find a very great difficulty, although I should be very glad to do so, in accepting Mr. Stevens' proposal because of the difficulty of ascertaining when the dispute arose.

"As regards Eastern Bengal with its great rivers, I think the remedy mentioned by His Honour is the only effectual means of stopping char riots, that is sending a Deputy Collector round every year when the floods subside to attach all new chars and parcel them out according to the survey maps and in the meantime collect the rents."

The Hon'ble MR. CHARLU:—"I think I must also oppose this amendment. After the very elaborate explanation given by Sir Henry Prinsep and the other Members who spoke before me I think it is unnecessary to take up the time of the Council except to point out this. The Magistrate's competency to interfere is not upon the ground that he is considered sufficiently qualified to unravel the difficulty as to what constitutes possession or is able to decide when the dispute practically commenced and what is in reality the beginning of the dispute. These are questions which are capable of being competently and successfully disposed of by Civil Courts, specially qualified for such work. Bearing in mind that the right or rather the authority vested in the Magistrate is in the interests of peace and for the purpose of punishing a person who commits criminal force upon another, it seems to me that the Magistrate's action is confined to these two cases, viz., (1) where criminal force has been used and land thereby taken possession of, (2) where breach of peace is threatened. In these cases, the Magistrate gives the remedy under section 522 or 145. Then under the Specific Relief Act, a remedy exists where there is no force or threat of breach of peace. That being so and there being the fullest and clearest remedy to a person dispossessed without the use of force and finding that the jurisdiction of the Magistrate can be given only in the interests of peace or for the purpose of punishing the man for committing an offence, it strikes me that the amendment is not correct."

The Hon'ble PANDIT BISHAMBAR NATH:—"The subject is, no doubt, a thorny and most difficult one, as it has been pronounced to be such by so eminent a lawyer as Sir Griffith Evans. To my mind, the question at issue is after all a simple one, though it has assumed enormous proportions and, in fact, resolved into a metaphysical disquisition. I need not, however, at this late stage of proceedings dwell long upon the intricacies of the question and must submit that with reference to the weighty considerations set forth in the erudite statement of the law, as enunciated by the Hon'ble Sir H. Prinsep, I am inclined to say that I am unable to agree to the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens, as to 'the time when the dispute arose.'"

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND:—"I think that whatever decision we may come to in the question which is now under discussion we at least have had the advantage of having the two sides of it completely laid before us by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens on the one side and the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep on the other. I confess that the arguments of these two Hon'ble Members have left me in considerable doubt as to the decision which I ought to take, but I cannot help feeling that a term such as 'possession at the time of the dispute' is one that may carry us too far back. At the same time it has been shewn that the law as it at present stands is a law which works very great injustice, and it also tends very greatly to the commission of a breach of the peace, because it places the person who happens to have taken possession, whether rightfully or wrongfully, in a very advantageous position. I do not think it is possible to leave the law in the form in which it is at present. Sir Henry Prinsep has told us that even Judges of the High Court have come to different conclusions as to what the meaning of the law is, and that itself seems to me is a sufficient reason for making the law clearer. I think that too much has been made of the question of 'possession at the time of the dispute,' namely, in thinking that it was necessary to carry back the investigation to the time of some original claims out of which the dispute the causing a breach of the peace has arisen. Sir Henry Prinsep has told us that with reference to this particular point Mr. Harrington, a name renowned in Bengal, asserted that a wrong interpretation had been given to Act II of 1840, and that the words which are there found, namely, that the Magistrate is to decide who was in possession at the time of the dispute, had been wrested into an authority to make investigations which really belonged to the Civil Court and not to the Criminal Court; but at the same time when he came to the end of his speech, and deprecated the adoption of the phrase which occurs in Act II of 1846, he told us that that phrase had the particular meaning which Mr. Harrington deprecated and really gave authority to a Magistrate to carry back his investigations to an interminable time. If I may say so, I think that the proper interpretation to be given to the phrase 'at the time the dispute arose' is to refer it to the time when such dispute as lead to a breach of the peace occurred, and that the Select Committee have really, in introducing the proviso that a Magistrate may carry back his investigation to two months time, adopted what Mr. Harrington has explained and what Sir Henry Prinsep has also commended as a true meaning of Act II of 1840; that is, that the Magistrate can look before the actual possession at the time he issues the order, and that the Courts will not be obliged to issue what I cannot help calling a positively absurd decision, viz., that a person who has taken possession violently two days before the Magistrate's order must be kept in possession by the Magistrate. I am disposed, therefore, for myself to accept the compromise which was come to in the Select Committee, namely, that the Magistrate can look back for two months before the date of his own order and find what kind of possession then existed. It is a reasonable assumption that the state of possession which was in existence two months before the date of his order was a possession before the dispute arose which has caused the Magistrate's intervention, the dispute, namely, that is likely to cause a breach of the peace. I would therefore accept the section as issued from the Select Committee because I think that it expresses the actual meaning of so much of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Stevens' amendment as I can agree with. I say this subject to what His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor may say. Of course I feel at some disadvantage in addressing myself to a subject of this kind without hearing what the head of the Province of Bengal has to say, but, subject to what he may have to say, I think that the proviso gives the power which the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens sets before us as desirable that the Magistrate should have. I think also I may go forward to another amendment which is to be proposed by the Hon'ble Mr. James, giving power of attachment in cases where possession is not determinable. That amendment will improve the section and direct the Magistrate to what his duty is, namely, to look less at the rights of the parties than at the object of establishing a state of things which will at least prevent a breach of the peace taking place."

His Honour THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR:—"I do not propose to detain the Council at any great length at this late stage. I would only say that nobody knows better than my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep that disputes of this description are extremely common in the Eastern Districts of Bengal and that fact he recognised fully at the close of his speech. The general result in my mind from the debate is to lead me to the conclusion that I agree with my Hon'ble friend Sir James Westland that the compromise made by the Select Committee should be maintained, although the criticisms of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Stevens' proposal are not altogether fair, because he never proposed to go back years and years to the beginning of old-hereditary disputes, but to go back to the time when the dispute leading to and resulting in the current breach of the peace arose. I think that no really practical man, no good Magistrate, would have any real difficulty in ascertaining and deciding when the beginning of the dispute arose. I think, however, that, as doubts do exist on the question, we should perhaps on the whole get as much as we expect from the executive point of view, if we accept the proviso which has been adopted by the Select Committee, and I am also strongly disposed to accept Mr. James' further amendment allowing the Magistrate to attach in cases of emergency. I have no doubt whatever that the law as it has stood hitherto has been a cause of constant trouble. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep represented to us the High Court as a happy united band all standing together and not having a single objection to raise with reference to the law as it stands. But I have here the opinion of one of the Judges that the present chapter is so defective that it is almost impossible for the most careful Magistrate to work it; that the High Court is constantly interfering on technical grounds, and that the merits of the Magistrate's orders are constantly being gone into on revision. The whole object of the law is thus frustrated.

"I may also say that I have received from many landholders in Eastern Bengal frequent complaints that as the law stands they are in constant dread of what may happen in connection with these char lands. In fact, at one time a memorial was laid before me requesting that I would move the Government to make it compulsory in all cases for Magistrates to attach these lands. With reference to the suggestions made that possessory actions in the Civil Court are open to them, you must look at the thing from the point of view of native character. They would prefer, except in the very last resort, not to go into the Civil Courts, and no native landowner would, if he could help it, admit himself to be out of possession. After listening to the whole debate and weighing all that has been said, I have come to the conclusion that on the whole it is best to accept the compromise and not to press the amendment which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Stevens has put forward."

The Hon'ble MR. STEVENS said:—My Lord, I regret to see that so many Hon'ble Members of the Council are opposed to my amendment. I will not, under the circumstances, occupy much more of their time; but there are certain points which I feel it my duty to clear up.

"I will begin by bringing to the notice of the Council a case in which the law, as it at present stands, completely fails, and it has actually been necessary for the High Court in its interpretation to go back to the old law. In the case of Jagat Kishore Acharjya Chowdry v. Khajah Ashanullah Khan Bahadur, decided by Justices Mitter and Trevelyan on the 13th February, 1889, and reported in the Indian Law Reports, Calcutta Series, Volume XVI, page 281, the dispute had reference to the right of felling trees. The Magistrate, following as well as he could the precedent in the case of Ambler v. Pushong, which had been decided some four years before, found in favour of the second party, having come to the conclusion that he was proved to have been in possession at the time when the proceedings were instituted. The learned Judges did not agree with him, but remanded the case with the following observations:

'Having regard to the nature of the property in dispute, and the mode in which possession may be exercised over the property, we think that, in order to find which party was in possession when the proceedings were instituted, it is necessary to enquire which party was in the undisturbed possession of the land in dispute by felling timber and removing the same without objection on the occasion immediately preceding the one in which the dispute arose.'

"The decision appears to govern all cases in which the possession is intermittent, for example, cases relating to char lands submerged for a portion of the year. It thus seems that in a very important class of cases the law cannot be carried out literally, and that it is necessary to make believe that it is identical with the old law which it is the purpose of my amendment to replace.

"These cases cannot, I may say, be met even by the proviso in the Bill before us.

"My Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep has stated that Act XXV of 1861 repealed all but one section, namely, section 2 of Act IV of 1840. But the correct statement of the case, so far as concerns the present matter, is that one section (section 4) was repealed.

"The Council have heard from Sir Henry Prinsep much about the discussions in the Council regarding the Bill which became law as Act XXV of 1861. I anticipated him in a great measure and I pointed out, as I venture again to point out, that the strictures passed in the course of those discussions had reference, not to section 2 (with the analogue of which we have now to do), but to section 4, which was not embodied in Act XXV, but which was repealed and never re-enacted, and which no one wants to re-enact now. I showed that Mr. Harrington, the Member in charge of the Bill, and Sir Barnes Peacock, the Chairman, had no intention, when they proposed the incorporation of section 2 of Act IV of 1840 in Act XXV of 1861, of changing the law. They distinctly said so, and (as I have shown) the earlier rulings of the High Court dealt with Act XXV of 1861 as if its provisions concerning this matter were old law. I showed that, in later times, with no deliberate intention but by accident, the law was changed into what it now is.

"Some Hon'ble Members have thought that there would be difficulty in working the section as brought back, in accordance with my amendment, to the old law. To that my reply is, that the Act of 1840 worked for twenty years, and there is no sign whatever in the discussions of the Council that the difficulty now anticipated ever existed. It has been said that 'at the time when the dispute arose' is a vague expression. It is vague because the meaning of it varies according to the facts of each individual case. Generally speaking, by the term 'dispute' is not meant mere adverse claim, but such a dispute as gives rise to an anticipated breach of the peace.

"The Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep has said that there is an overwhelming weight of authority against the rulings which I have quoted. My Lord, to the best of my belief, I have obtained those rulings from the very valuable work published by the Hon'ble Member. If rulings of no authority have been held up for our guidance, the fault, I venture to say, is not mine.

"My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has spoken to us of his experience in connection with Act IV of 1840. But I think that we must bear in mind that the officer who passed through those experiences was not the Sir Henry Prinsep whom we all know, and on whose matured knowledge we so much depend, but a very young Civilian, possibly (though, I admit, not probably) one of those very same young and inexperienced officials whose work is so lightly spoken of in those discussions which we have read—one of those who brought Act IV of 1840 into disrepute by the manner in which they misplaced the burden of proof and converted the Criminal Courts into Civil Courts.

"It has been urged upon us that this law is not required in Madras. I have to point out, as I have already pointed out, that Act IV of 1840 did not extend to any Presidency except that of Bengal in the wide sense. Consequently the officers of Madras had had no experience of Act IV of 1840, and were not in so good a position to appreciate and interpret Act XXV of 1861 as the officers of Bengal. Suppose this law is not required in Madras; there is no necessity for its being used there. The use of section 145 lies entirely in the discretion of the Magistrate. If he does not want it, he need not use it. This argument therefore is of no weight whatever if the provision is required for Bengal.

"And now I would remind the Council of a point of which no notice whatever has been taken by any speaker who has followed me in the debate. I said, and I again say, that all those who are practically concerned in this matter are against the law as it is now interpreted to be. The British Indian Association, the Bar, the Chamber of Commerce, the Executive Officers who have to keep the peace, are all on one side. Who is there on the other?

"The Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep reminds me that the parties had other means of obtaining the desired result. No doubt they have, and if the parties themselves would do what we consider to be their duty there would be little occasion for this section 145, but the advantage of section 145 is that when the parties persist in raiding and do not mind resorting to violence in support of their claims, the Executive Officer in charge of the district is able to step in and it is for him to try and prevent a breach of the peace. A large part of my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep's speech seemed to me to be turned against section 145 altogether, but in that I think no one else has followed him. It has been remarked that the time at which the dispute arose is too vague and that there is no limitation. I think that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has fairly disposed of the fact. It could clearly not be the time at which the conflicting claims were made, but the time at which the actual dispute was likely to cause a breach of the peace arose. No doubt it is difficult to fix any exact time which would be free from objection and the reason for that is that the circumstances of various cases differ so enormously, but I think we might trust the Magistrates with the discretion to see what course should be taken in the particular case before them. Now as to this point of time,—the time at which the dispute arose—is that which was laid down in section 2 of Act IV of 1840, and for twenty years that was in force and acted upon, and we have not heard what the difficulties were in working under that Act. More than that, as I have already said, the section corresponding with section 2 was passed over without remark. I think, if there had been any practical difficulties in the way of fixing the term of limitation, that something would have been said on that subject. These, my Lord, are the remarks that I have to make. I think that in the great majority of cases the proviso which has been settled in the Select Committee would answer all necessary purposes, but I also think that there are cases which it would not meet, and I have given you a concrete example in which the High Court have absolutely been obliged to abandon it in favour of the words which I have proposed to insert."

The Council divided :—

So the motion was negatived.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP moved that the proviso to clause 145, sub-clause (4), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee be omitted.

His Excellency THE PRESIDENT :—" I wish to state to the Council that the amendment on which we have just voted is this—that certain words should be substituted and that the proviso thereto should be omitted. The Council have now voted that the proviso should not be omitted. I think myself that that would cover the Hon'ble Sir Henry Prinsep's amendment, but of course, as a matter of courtesy to him, I do not desire to shut out anything he wishes to say, if the Council wishes to hear it."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY PRINSEP said :—" The latter portion of Mr Stevens' amendment escaped me, and therefore I did not address myself to the proviso to sub-section (4), the omission of which I had given notice that I intended to move. The proviso is not necessarily a part of the motion which has just been negatived, and it seems to me therefore that it should be considered separately on its merits.

" I have already expressed myself so fully on the terms of section 145 in reference to the amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Member to my left (Mr. Stevens), that it is unnecessary for me to do more than enter my protest against the enactment of the proviso to sub-section (4). The objections that I have already taken apply equally to this proviso. I regret that the opinions of the Judges of the Calcutta High Court have not been obtained on the alteration thus made by the Select Committee and expressed in its report. One of the Judges, Mr. Justice Wilkins, has expressed a strong opinion against the proviso in a memorandum which he has sent to the Hon'ble Member in charge of this Bill, and I understand that the other Judges have abstained from offering their opinions until they shall have been solicited to do so. I have reason, however, to believe that they share in the objections raised by Mr. Justice Wilkins. With these observations I leave my amendment before this Council."

THE Hon'ble SIR GRIFFITH EVANS :—" I do not wish to take up the time of the Council, but I want to make one or two remarks. There is a great deal of misapprehension about these two months, but, as a matter of fact, as we all know, most of these are char cases and the matter in dispute is constructive possession by receipt of rent, and it is no use talking as if you were to find who is in receipt of a particular rent on a particular date. You cannot do that: you must go back a month, and sometimes two, to the last kist of rent. The real fact of the matter is that, constructive possession is a matter of law to be inferred from certain facts of the case, and the case cited from the High Court by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevens is an instance of it. There it was a case of the right of felling timber, and on the last occasion, when they were felling timber, the parties came to loggerheads and there was a row. The High Court said, 'Find for me who peacefully felled the timber last, and then I will tell you that, as a matter of law, his possession continued until the date of the disturbance.' That is what they said. It is not that you had to go and find possession on a prior date, but when you find the facts from which you could infer possession, the law constructively will make that possession continue up to the time when it is disturbed. Therefore it is not a proposal to carry the enquiry two months further back. I have not seen a case where the enquiry had not to go two months back—very often a great deal more—in order to get at the facts necessary to arrive at a correct inference who was in possession at the time of the order. So that, whatever we do, we must go back two months for this purpose. Sometimes you must consider title in order to decide which is in possession, because the law says, if two men are fighting in a field, the man who is the owner of the field is the man in possession, and the other is not in possession in the eye of the law but is a mere casual trespasser. Therefore the rule will not lengthen the enquiry much while it will avoid injustice in many cases.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND :—" I speak on this occasion with the advantage of knowing what the opinion of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor is. I regret to say that my opinion of a Magistrate's duty differs entirely from that of my Hon'ble friend Sir Henry Prinsep. I cannot conceive a Magistrate who knows that a breach of the peace is likely to be committed sitting calmly in his chair until somebody sets him in motion by a formal complaint. It is the business of the Magistrate to intervene to prevent a breach of the peace, and if the Magistrate's intervention is made under such conditions that, if he finds a man in possession whom he knows to have only just obtained possession by violent means, he is bound to keep him there, the law will present a direct incitement to continuous breaches of the peace. I think the compromise which the Select Committee propose is a compromise sound in itself, and is likely to carry out the object of preventing a breach of the peace."

The motion was put and negatived.

The Hon'ble MR. JAMES moved that to clause 145, sub-clause (4), of the Bill as amended by the Select Committee the following proviso be added, namely :—

" Provided that, if the Magistrate considers the case one of emergency, he may at any time attach the subject of such dispute, pending his decision under this section."

He said :—This amendment is suggested by the Bombay Government, but as there seems a general disposition to accept it, I need not take up time by speaking at any length. I do not advocate it as a short way of cutting the Gordian knot, but because in some parts of the country there is not time to go through all the formalities of the Code, if the Queen's peace is to be preserved. By the time the Magistrate comes to know that a fight is likely, matters have often advanced too far to admit of any delay. When the Magistrate attaches both parties subside, a faction-fight is averted, and then the law takes its course. I knew a case not long ago in which a District Magistrate actually did as I propose he should have legal power to do, in order to avert a conflict."

The Hon'ble MR. CHALMERS :—" I have no objection to this amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Council adjourned till Saturday, the 12th March 1898.

CALCUTTA,
The 18th March, 1898.

Secretary to the Government of India,
Legislative Department.

Note.—The Meeting of Council which was fixed for the 4th March was subsequently postponed to the 11th idem.

APPENDIX A.

(Speech given in by the Hon'ble Maharaja Bahadur of Durbhanga).

My Lord, I desire to offer a few general observations on the Bill, before the Council proceeds to a discussion of the amendments, in order that I may make quite clear the position which I deem it my duty to take up with regard to the measure. It will be observed that I have not considered it incumbent upon me to give notice of motion of any amendments on the present occasion, although there are many alterations in, and additions to, the existing law, to which I feel bound to take exception. There were several reasons which led me to this conclusion. In the first place, it appeared to me that in the discussion of a purely legal measure like this it was not for me as a mere layman to take a prominent part. I have not the professional training nor the professional experience which years of practice at the Bar alone can give, and which my learned friends who sit around me at this table possess, I am happy to feel, in so marked a degree. It was not for me to put myself into competition with such veteran professors of the law; and further, so far as my limited knowledge of English political affairs extends, I believe that, when measures such as the one before us come up for consideration in the Houses of Parliament, it is the lawyers, and the lawyers alone, who bear, and in my humble judgment rightly and appropriately bear, the burden and heat of the day. I shall therefore confine myself chiefly to the making of quotations, and hope to be forgiven, in view of the importance of the subject, if some of these quotations should seem to be too long and wearisome. And this brings me to my second reason, which lies before me in the shape of the exceedingly able and exhaustive note on the Bill which the members of the Calcutta Bar have addressed to the Secretary of this Council, and which has been circulated for our perusal and consideration. This is about the latest minute from any public body of which we are in possession, and I think it may be fairly said to sum up the public view on the subject of this Bill. On that ground, therefore, as well as the former, I shall make no excuse for taking it as the basis of the few remarks I propose to offer.

I will not conceal from the Council, my Lord, that I had anticipated several amendments from the Hon'ble the Legal Member on the lines indicated in that note. Speaking as a layman and as one whose avocations do not bring him, and I trust will never bring him, into a Criminal Court, I can only say that I have been greatly struck as much by the forcible character of the arguments adduced in that note as by the eminently reasonable nature of the criticism it contains. But I cannot find, my Lord, that even one single suggestion of the many put forward by the Bar has met with the approval of the Hon'ble the Legal Member. The reason, I fear, is not apparent to me. The Bar speak with the authority and knowledge born of experience and ability. They may not be responsible persons within the somewhat narrow definition given us on a previous occasion by the Hon'ble the Legal Member; but no one, I suppose, in this Council will assert that they are not as anxious for the quiet and peaceful administration of this country as any of us present here.

Let me take some of these suggestions in order. With regard to section 1, they call the attention of the Hon'ble the Legal Member to the proposal to give the Local Government the power to extend any of the provisions of this Code by a mere notification in the official Gazette. It cannot be denied that their comment has considerable force.

> "It is impossible to predicate," they say, "that such large powers may not be on occasions injudiciously employed, and in this connection they would do no more than refer to the action, taken some years ago, by a local administration in abolishing trial by jury of certain offences by a mere notification in the official Gazette."

I ask, my Lord, with the greatest possible deference and respect, whether it can be said that the comment of the Bar is not justified? They have cited chapter and verse in support of their contention. Are there no other means of dealing with this question? Is there no method but this of fixing and ascertaining the law of criminal procedure for the presidency-towns?

Take again the remarks made by the Bar with regard to the new explanation proposed to be added to section 164:—

"In view of the use made against an accused person of any statement in the nature of a confession and the important influence that it exerts on a trial, the Bar consider the proposed explanation to this section to be a dangerous innovation. In their opinion, no Magistrate should be permitted to record a confession except those who have jurisdiction to try the case. It is of the utmost importance that every formality should be observed. The section, as it stands, has been productive of great hardship and injustice. Under the existing law, numerous cases have occurred in which prisoners who have confessed have withdrawn their confessions before the trying Magistrate, and in many instances the trying Magistrate has found that the confession was extorted by the police. The new explanation will make matters even worse. In practice, this amendment will be made use of by the police to take the person who is going to confess to having committed a murder before a third class Magistrate, who has only been appointed to the service for a few weeks, to record his statement or confession. If any change is made in the law, the Bar think it should be in the sense that confessions should only be received in evidence against accused persons when they have been recorded by the trying Magistrate."

My Lord, speaking as a layman and an outsider, I say that here is again a practical and reasonable suggestion. What has the Hon'ble the Legal Member to say on behalf of the proposed change in the law? Does he deny the assertions of the Bar? I cannot believe that it can be intended by the Legislature that third class Magistrates shall be employed for such purposes: and yet I find no amendments on the lines indicated by the Bar proposed either by the Hon'ble the Legal Member or by Sir Griffith Evans, whose experience must tell him that the dangers contemplated by the Bar are very real and very serious, specially in the mufassal, where the corruption of the subordinate police is notorious.

I proceed to section 202, which deals with the grounds on which a Court may postpone the issue of process: and I find the following observations, which certainly seem to me to be sensible enough:—

"Section 202.—The Bar cannot understand why the Select Committee should have substituted the words "is not satisfied as to the truth of a complaint" for the original words "sees no reason to distrust the truth of the complaint," which are not only in the present Code, but are to be found in the Bill as originally laid before Council. They conceive it hardly necessary to point out that a Magistrate's only business at this stage of the case is to satisfy himself that a primâ facie case has been made out for the issue of process. The necessity of giving "a further latitude to the Magistrate's discretion" in this connection does not deem to them to be at all demonstrated. It must not be forgotten that in this country a police investigation nearly always means further harassment to the parties. The Bar think that, so far from the discretion of the Court being extended in these cases, it might with advantage be still further limited."

Is it too late to enquire on what grounds the Select Committee have made this alteration? Their report furnishes no information on this point.

And then with regard to sentences of whipping. The Calcutta Bar think—and, I venture to say, very sensibly think—that sentences of whipping should be appealable, and provision should be made for the suspension of the punishment in the interval. My Lord, I confess I cannot understand how there can be any valid objection to this proposal. If the man's appeal is rejected, he will be whipped; but why whip him first and let him bring up the case to the High Court on revision afterwards? Why make a difference between those who are sentenced to the punishment of whipping and those who are sentenced to other punishments? As a matter of fact, in cases of respectable men, the punishment of whipping is considered more degrading than not only simple but even rigorous imprisonment for long periods. Any concessions on this point will, I feel convinced, be received with feelings of the most sincere gratitude by all the upper and middle classes of the Indian community. And I most earnestly beg Your Lordship to give this matter your special consideration. I venture to express a hope that, even although it is not thought advisable to amend the law now, Your Lordship's Government will still see its way in the near future to grant us this right of appeal in such cases.

Let me pass on to the changes and additions in the schedules. These seem to have escaped the notice of the general public, and I find that none of my learned colleagues have amendments on the paper advocating their omission. My Lord, I venture to say this is a fact much to be regretted. I can only suppose my learned friends were under the impression that the Hon'ble the Legal Member would accept the suggestion of the Bar and move amendments on the lines urged by them. Here is the passage (an important one) from the note of that body:—

"The Bar feel bound to take exception to a number of other changes in the Second Schedule. A Court of Session should alone be competent to try offences such as those under section 377 (unnatural offences), section 382 (theft, preparation having been made for causing death, etc.), section 435 (mischief by fire), section 440 (mischief committed after preparation made for causing death, etc.), section 465 (forgery), section 468 (forgery for the purpose of cheating), section 469 (forgery for the purpose of harming the reputation of any person), section 471 (using as genuine a forged document). These are all very serious offences which, under the present Code, are exclusively triable by a Court of Session and with the aid of a jury or assessors: and the Bar think they should continue to be so triable. The maximum punishment is, in all cases, beyond the competence of Chief Presidency Magistrates or District Magistrates to inflict, and this appears to be a valid objection to the proposal."

In my humble opinion, no sound reason has been given why the right to a trial by jury in respect of these offences should have been summarily restricted in this way; and these changes, my Lord, I may point out, do not occur in the Bill as originally introduced in Council, but have all been inserted in Committee. I venture to urge that matters may in this respect be restored to their former condition. The right of trial by jury is highly prized by the people of those districts which enjoy this most valuable right; and I may be permitted to express a hope that, with the advancement of the country, the Government will see its way, in time, to extend it throughout the whole of India. I have every confidence in the uprightness and integrity of the judiciary, but I am sure every presiding officer in a Court of Justice must feel that he is greatly assisted and aided in coming to a proper decision by those, whether sitting as jurymen or assessors, who are of the same race as the accused, who are acquainted with his habits, his ways, his feelings, and who therefore possess peculiar advantages in the way of offering sensible and valuable advice. Of course, it may be answered that it has been so often found in practice that jury trial in this country has not been a success; that men are acquitted because they are Brahmins, and so forth; and that the limitation is necessary in the interests of all parties. My Lord, I would point out that, in dealing with this as with many of the other changes now proposed to be made in the law, it should never be forgotten that this is a safeguard given to an accused person, and as such it should be jealously retained. You may say it is abused, but that is no ground for its limitation or abrogation. Let the words of Sir Courtenay Ilbert be borne in mind, uttered from his place in Your Lordship's Council on the 25th January, 1884:—

"It must be remembered that every safeguard which is given to an accused person is liable to a similar objection, and we have endeavoured to frame the section (526A in this particular case) in such a way as to minimise the risk of its being abused."

Similarly, the right of trial by jury in this country is already limited and guarded and protected from abuse in a dozen ways. It is still upon its trial: and if any offences ought to continue to be tried by a jury, I venture to say it is those very offences which it is now proposed to withdraw from their exclusive cognizance.

There is another alteration of the most important character to which the Bar have called attention, and which I cannot pass over in silence. Here, again, I observe with regret that no amendment has been moved on this head by the professional members of Your Lordship's Council: and the reason must, I take it, be the same, namely, that the matter is one which, in their opinion, had only to be stated in order to secure the ready acquiescence of the Hon'ble the Legal Member in its withdrawal. It is with reference to Schedule III, and what the Bar say is this :—

" Here, again, the Bar have noticed that the powers of inferior Magistrates have been increased in a manner which calls for unfavourable comment. No Magistrate of the third class should, in the opinion of the Bar, be empowered to require search to be made for letters and papers under section 95 (No. 7), to use civil force to disperse an unlawful assembly under section 127 (No. 11), to require military force to be used to disperse an unlawful assembly under section 128 (No 12), to take cognizance of an offence committed by an European British subject under section 445 (No. 16), to recover a forfeited bond for appearance before a Magistrate's Court under section 514 (No. 18) or to make an order as to the disposal of property under section 517 (No. 19). Magistrates of the third class are mostly very junior and inexperienced members of the Civil Service, or officers belonging to the lowest grades of Deputy Magistrates or Sub-Deputy Magistrates. It is no injustice to all these persons to say that their legal knowledge and training is of the smallest possible description. The comparatively unimportant nature of their functions is indicated by the fact that the maximum sentence of imprisonment they can inflict is one month, and that they cannot impose a fine exceeding fifty rupees. To give these Magistrates such powers as, for example, No. 11 and No. 12, is likely to be productive of the most dangerous consequences, and (in the particular instances) to create unlawful assemblies rather than to disperse them. Nor should they be given powers under section 517. The Bar can point to many complicated questions which have arisen as to the disposal of property under this section, and which have ultimately had to be settled by the High Court."

As regards section 108, I beg to state that I entirely agree with the opinions expressed by my hon'ble colleagues Pandit Bishambar Nath and Mr. Sayani in their able minute of dissent as well as with the note of the Bar. I do not wish to enter into details, nor do I wish to weary the Council with lengthy quotations. All that I wish to say is that, in my humble opinion, the arguments against the introduction of this entirely new section have not been answered. The power requiring security for keeping the peace is one which ought to be given for the prevention of future offences only, and not for the punishment of past offences. Section 107 already gives Magistrates very wide powers in this respect, extending even over those who reside outside their jurisdiction: and it seems very inappropriate that the offence of sedition should come in any way within the purview of any Court other than a Court of Session or a High Court. The Hon'ble the Legal Member appears to me, if he will permit me to say so with all respect, to be under two false impressions, of which the first is that Magistrates are individually absolutely perfect, and the second is that the government of this country cannot be carried on unless and until they are made perfectly absolute.

My Lord, I have given a string of extracts which I fear must have wearied Your Lordship as well as the Council. But I have felt it my duty to recite them for the last time before the Hon'ble the Legal Member. To move amendments on the lines suggested in them would simply have been a waste of the time of this Council, unless the Hon'ble the Legal Member had intimated his approval of them on behalf of Government. But he has given no sign of any such approval, and we have already a sufficiently long list of 75 amendments to occupy us to-day. I have again to ask, my Lord, what answer can be given, what argument can be adduced, to combat these eminently reasonable proposals of the Bar to leave the law as it now stands? In what way has the law worked crookedly or unsatisfactorily in these respects? Even granting that a guilty person may here and there have escaped punishment, does not the noble old legal maxim tell us that it were better so, rather than that one innocent person should suffer wrongfully?

My Lord, I am bound to say, and I say it with the greatest regret, that I do not observe in any of the amendments that have been made in the law, and that I presume will become law to-day in the ordinary course of events, any indication of an intention to lessen the rigour of the criminal law, and to give an accused person further opportunities of successfully rebutting the case made out against him. There is no necessity for such harshness in our penal procedure. India is not a country in which crime is at all rife; if it were, it would be impossible to preserve the public peace with the small staff of Magistrates and Judges that are necessary. In England, where the percentage of crime is noticeably greater in proportion to the population, the penal statutes are conceived in a far more lenient spirit.

Take for instance the privilege now allowed to an accused under section 162 of calling for and inspecting statements made previously by witnesses to police-officers and reduced into writing by them. It is proposed to limit this and leave it to the discretion of the Court to permit an accused to make use of such statements; and some Hon'ble Members of this Council go even further and risk to deprive him altogether of the right. And why? On what ground is an accused person to be deprived or limited in his full exercise of a right which, if he is innocent, is calculated to be of the greatest assistance to him in establishing his innocence? These statements are nothing more than the statements of witnesses who depose as to their knowledge of the occurrence. With their help many an innocent man has broken down a false case brought against him. It will be said that the Court, in whose discretion the matter will in future lie, may be relied upon to do its duty. I do not deny it; but let any one read, as I have done, the mass of opinions recorded on the subject by the body of Magistrates and Judges. Many are altogether against the use of these documents by the accused under any circumstances In what direction are they likely to exercise their discretion? Under these circumstances, it is surely the wisest course to leave things alone. The Calcutta High Court and the Bombay High Court have spoken out in favour of the retention of the existing section, which is all in favour of eliciting the truth, the object, as it is commonly understood, of a criminal trial. The judgment of Mr. Justice Aikman of the Allahabad High Court in the case of Empress v. Mannu, reported in Indian Law Reports, 19 Allahabad Series, at page 416, is one of the most convincing arguments that have hitherto been adduced in favour of leaving matters as they are. Cannot this even now be done?

Again, take section 213. Do the Bar make an immoderate demand or an unreasonable request when they ask that in the event of a Magistrate, after he has heard the witnesses for the defence, finding there are no sufficient grounds to justify a commitment, his order should operate as an acquittal and not only as a discharge? It is surely due in fairness to an accused that, if he is able to produce rebutting evidence of such a character as to satisfy the Court that there are no grounds to justify any further proceedings against him (or, in other words, that he is not guilty), he should be entitled to such an order as will effectually prevent his being harassed by a re-trial on the same charge. And yet in the section as laid before Council we find the word "discharge" and not the word "acquit."

Let me give another illustration of my meaning. In section 231, the recall of witnesses when a charge is altered or added to is left to the discretion of the Court. But it is surely next to impossible for a Court, unacquainted with an accused's line of defence, to know whether a witness is material or not until he has heard his evidence. What is the objection to giving the accused the right of calling these further witnesses? An accused person is entitled under every principle of law to call as many witnesses as he can, in order to rebut the case made against him.

I have but one or two more observations to offer. I cannot conclude without recording my protest against the proposal to make cases under the newly enacted sections 124A, 153A and 505 of the Penal Code triable by certain Magistrates in the future as well as by Sessions Judges. "There is no question," as my hon'ble friend Pandit Bishambar Nath has said in his minute of dissent, "of lending undue eclat or of giving notoriety to proceedings in cases of sedition," by publishing their trial by Chief Presidency and District Magistrates. The objection is based on more substantial grounds. I give them in the words of Mr. Cotton, the Chief Commissioner of Assam:

"It appears to the Chief Commissioner that sufficient weight has not been attached to the objections which occur in this connection; that the District Magistrate is the executive head of his district and the official representative of the Government in undertaking the prosecution of political offences, and that therefore the trial of such offences should neither lie in his Court nor in that of any Magistrate subordinate to him: that a Sessions Judge is assisted in the trial of such cases by assessors, whereas a Magistrate is not: and that every offence which is deemed by law to be of such gravity that it is punishable with the extreme sentence of transportation for life ought, whether it is or not, to be triable only by the highest judicial authority in the land. These objections and the inevitable inference which will be drawn from a proposal to place the trial of political offenders in the hands of the executive authority appear to the Chief Commissioner to outweigh any advantage to be derived from the proposed amendment in the law, and he would recommend therefore that it should not be pressed."

I do not propose, my Lord, to dwell further on this subject. As I understand the position, it is not intended by Your Lordship's Government to withdraw the proposal, and under the circumstances I can do no more than record my respectful protest against it.

I now come to the last of the observations which I desire to make on the subject of this Bill. I refer to the amendment that was moved by me when the Criminal Procedure Code was being amended in this Council in the year 1884. I was one of those very few Indians who did not think it advisable to take away any privileges that were enjoyed by the European community. All that I wished for was that my countrymen should also get certain concessions. As I then pointed out, the Bill gave every European the right of trial by jury in almost every case, but it was far from the purpose of my amendment that natives of India should be given the same wide privilege. My contention was that in all sessions cases, and sessions cases only, the natives of India should be entitled to demand a jury, and I moved an amendment, as I say, in those terms. But I felt bound to withdraw it in deference to the wishes of the Viceroy. His Excellency pointed out that the time was then not ripe for the consideration of such a proposal, and he further remarked :—

"I admit that the fact which the hon'ble gentleman, Mr. Kristo Das Pal, has alluded to, that there appears to be a strong feeling in the country in favour of the extension of the jury system, is a matter which of itself deserves our consideration; but to oblige the Government to vote against the motion at this time would be unduly to prejudice the further examination of the subject. I make no complaint on the score of regularity against my hon'ble friend the Maharaja of Durbhanga for having raised this question, and thereby drawn additional attention to it; but I confess that I should very much regret that, by dividing the Council, he should force the Government to pronounce an opinion upon it prematurely, and at the time when they have not the necessary information before them to enable them to form a deliberate judgment upon it. That the question is deserving of consideration I entirely admit, but that it would not injure the cause which the Maharaja has at heart, if he were to press for a motion on the present occasion, I cannot for a moment allow."

My Lord, fourteen years have elapsed since Lord Ripon gave this assurance to my fellow-countrymen. We have now obtained the privilege of claiming a jury of which the majority must be of our own nationality, if the trial in which we are concerned takes place before a Court of Session. We do not make an unreasonable demand, I submit, in asking that we should not be deprived of this privilege by the mere accident of a change of venue to the High Court. I may here mention that this amendment of mine received the sympathy of such an experienced and learned an official as Sir William Hunter. I observe that my hon'ble friends Pandit Bishambar Nath and Mr. Sayani are moving amendments on the lines I am indicating. May I say, my Lord, with reference to them, that if Your Lordship's Government can see its way to grant us this concession, which, as I have said, is neither unreasonable nor unseasonable nor likely to produce any serious consequences, we shall not only feel that Your Lordship is carrying out the pledge of Lord Ripon, but also that a tangible token is being afforded us of that sympathy which Your Lordship's public utterances have already assured us is the key-note of the policy of the Government?

My Lord, I have no more to add. If I have been led to speak strongly, if I have expressed my mind with freedom, Your Lordship will forgive me. I have spoken in all loyalty and with every desire to represent to Your Lordship's Government the views of those I am here to represent. If I have erred, I have erred in good company, and, inasmuch as Your Lordship was pleased to assure the Council that nothing was further from the wishes of Government than to hinder honest and well-intentioned criticism of public measures, I am confident that nothing I have said will be taken amiss. It would have been impossible for me, in the faithful discharge of my duties as an elected representative of Your Lordship's Council, to have done otherwise than to give utterance to what I deem to be the views of my constituents, as voiced by those most competent to offer an opinion on the subject, and that is what I have endeavoured to do to the best of my small ability.

Summary.

The accounts of the year 1896-97 have, as already announced, been closed with a deficit of Rx. 1,700,000, being Rx. 280,000 better than the estimates made in March 1897.

The rate of exchange realised on the remittances made in 1897-98 taking account of loss on re-remittance of Rx. 1,000,000 is about 15⅜ pence, and the Revised Estimates of 1897-98 are accordingly made up at this rate of exchange. The same rate is, as usual, taken for the Budget Estimates of 1898-99.

The result of the Revised Estimate is that after meeting Rx. 5,390,000 charges for famine relief, Rx. 3,820,000 war charges, total Rx. 9,210,000, the accounts are expected to close with a deficit of Rx. 5,280,000. The improvement as compared with Rx. 6,630,000 estimated in December is Rx. 710,000 by reason of better exchange, Rx. 170,000 under Army, Rx. 200,000 by postponement of Railway expenditure, and small sums under other heads. Land Revenue is better than Budget by Rx. 290,000, Railways better by Rx. 480,000, and Irrigation better by Rx. 470,000. Against this there is a falling-off of Rx. 570,000 under Opium, due to lower prices in China. There are savings on most of the estimates for expenditure, especially on ordinary Army charges, but there has been excess expenditure under Jails, Police and Medical, famine relief has cost Rx. 5,390,000 against a Budget Estimate of Rx. 3,640,000, and the war charges were not provided for in the Budget Estimate at all.

The Budget Estimates for 1898-99 provide for the full amount Rx. 1,500,000 of the famine grant and allow Rx. 1,490,000 for continuance of war expenditure and Rx. 200,000 for new pay conditions of British soldiers. After meeting these charges the estimates shew a surplus of Rx. 890,000.

No changes in taxation are proposed, but a general bounteous harvest enables Government to realise considerable arrears, estimated at about Rx. 800,000, of suspended Land Revenue and warrants expectations of favourable Railway earnings, the country having already shewn signs of rapid recovery. Opium Revenue is taken Rx. 490,000 below last year's estimate.

The expenditure on Railway construction in 1897-98 fell considerably short of the programme set out in the Budget Estimate, partly because of the demands on the Treasury caused by war and famine and partly by reason of strikes in England. The total expenditure of all kinds, both State and Companies' Railways, was Rx. 10,570,000, and Rx. 13,200,000 are estimated for 1898-99; total of two years Rx. 23,770,000.

The Secretary of State intends to raise £6,000,000 Permanent Debt, of which £3,380,000 is required for discharge of debentures. He will also renew £6,000,000 outstanding Temporary Debt, and he will draw for £16,000,000 Council Bills. In India it is intended to raise a rupee loan of Rx. 3,000,000.

The Statement examines the result of the famine. The amount spent on relief in the two financial years has been Rx. 7,470,000, the number of units relieved being 830 millions: a unit is one person relieved for one day. The daily number on relief in May and June was over 3½ millions. Including this Rx. 7,470,000 spent on famine relief, the cost of the famine in actual outlay and loss of revenue is put down at Rx. 14,240,000 besides Rx. 1,850,000 revenue suspended and about Rx. 1,370,000 lent to cultivators. Besides all this, the Charitable Fund has spent Rx. 1,640,000, and reports 1½ millions heads of families relieved by grants of cattle, seed, and implements, a million respectable persons fed, 1½ millions relief workers assisted, and four thousand orphans provided for.

The cost of plague is estimated at Rx. 420,000, and the loss by earthquake at Rx. 530,000, total Rx. 950,000, of which Rx. 390,000 falls on next year's estimates.

The Statement closes with a short review of twenty years' finance which is summarised as follows :—

"So far as Revenue goes, we have, even after charging off Rx. 13,660,000 spent from Revenue account on Railway construction, more than paid our way, including all expenditure on war, special defences, and famine. So far as capital transactions go, we have raised under various conditions and spent upon Railways, Irrigation, Harbour Works and Docks, Municipal projects, and Agricultural Improvements a sum equal (at 16 pence the rupee) to Rx. 198,820,000; and we are after all this expenditure better off by Rx. 500,000 a year than before we undertook it. I am dealing, it must be remembered, with direct financial returns only; the effect of all this expenditure on development of Revenue and its economic and administrative aspects lie outside my present purposes."

These results and the signs of early recovery from the disasters of famine, plague, and war are used to repeat and enforce Sir J. Strachey's deprecation of assistance from the English Exchequer.

The question of currency policy is not discussed.

PART I.

INTRODUCTION.

The year now closing has been marked by a singular succession of calamities. When it opened, the famine due to the drought of 1896 was becoming more and more intense both in Northern and in Southern India, and plague was raging in some parts of the Bombay Presidency. Before the first three months had expired, the eastern side of India was shaken by an earthquake which caused much damage to the buildings and the Railway works in the districts which were affected by it. During the rest of the year we were engaged in meeting a series of fanatical attacks by the tribes on our North-Western Frontier, and repelling them by military operations conducted under conditions of very great physical difficulties and necessarily great expenditure.

2. These circumstances are necessarily reflected in the Financial Statement which I have to lay before the Council, in which I shall have to declare for the closing year a deficit of larger amount than any since 1859-60.

3. But there is also a brighter side in my statement. The harvests of 1897 have been more bountiful than any within recent memory, and the recovery from the effects of famine and scarcity promises to be a very rapid one. The Revenue returns of January were sufficient in themselves to shew that the crisis had passed, and gave hopes of early return of prosperous times. And at the present moment there are signs of peace on our frontiers and of the submission of the still outstanding tribes to the General Commanding our forces. Our financial position for the year that is about to open will therefore, I trust, be a reflection of times of returning peace and prosperity, although as peace is not yet assured to us, I am obliged to include in my estimates of expenditure a considerable provision not only for the return of our troops from the theatre of war, but also for the possible resumption, before their return, of military operations.

Accounts of 1896-97.

4. A couple of months ago I announced that the accounts of 1896-97 had been closed, and that the results, as is usually the case, closely corresponded with, and were slightly better than, the revised estimate presented to Council in March last. The comparative figures are as follows :—

	Revenue. Rx.	Expenditure. Rx.	Deficit. Rx.
Estimated in March 1897	93,803,800	95,790,700	1,986,900
By actual accounts	94,129,741	95,834,763	1,705,022
Improvement	325,941	—44,063	281,878

The improvement in Revenue was mostly due to somewhat short estimates of Land Revenue and of Railway earnings. Under all other heads the estimates were very closely followed except under Civil Works, under which the short expenditure, being nearly all Provincial or Local, merely gives rise to a cross-entry under "Provincial adjustment."

Revised Estimates of 1897-98.

5. For the year 1897-98 we have to announce a deficit of Rx. 5,283,100 being greater by Rx. 2,819,100 than that which was anticipated in the Budget Estimates. This result is entirely due to the expenditure on famine being about 50 per cent in excess of our estimates, and to the outlay involved in the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. Separating out the figures connected with these two subjects, the results of the year compare as follows with the Budget Estimates :—

	Budget. Rx.	Revised. Rx.	Difference. Rx.
Excluding Famine and War—
Revenue . . .	95,676,800	96,479,200	802,400	Better.
Expenditure . . .	94,499,600	92,547,000	1,952,600	Better. (a)
Famine Relief . . .	3,641,200	5,391,800	1,750,600	Worse.
Warlike Operations . .	...	3,823,500	3,823,500	Worse.
Deficit .	2,464,000	5,283,100	2,819,100	Worse.

(a) Mostly by reason of improvement in Exchange.

It is perhaps worthy of note that the deficit of the year is actually less than we have spent on Famine Relief; in other words, if we had had no famine expenditure to meet, our ordinary revenue would have been sufficient to meet our War expenditure and to leave a small surplus over. This is important only as indicating our general financial position apart from the calamities that have fallen upon us during the year.

6. The comparison between Budget and Revised Estimates set out in greater detail in the form I have adopted on previous occasions is as follows :—

(a) Including Interest and Receipts under Civil Works.
(b) This entry in the Indian portion of the accounts is a minus one, as the interest passed to the charge of Railways and Irrigation is greater than the whole amount of interest payable in India.

7. Of the increase in English expenditure, £161,500 occurs under the head of Interest (including discount on Loans raised), and is due to the increased loan operations which were rendered necessary by reason of our inability, to which I shall presently allude, to keep the Secretary of State in funds to the extent we anticipated at the time of the Budget Estimates. Another large item, £51,600, is due to stores sent out for military works in India and is met by the corresponding reduction under the same head in the Indian Accounts. And a further special demand for £23,100 worth of stores was made in connection with the military operations on the North-Western Frontier. No other differences in the English Account are large enough to be mentioned here.

8. It will be seen that by the improvement in the rate of exchange at which the English transactions are brought to account, our Revised Estimates shew, even with the somewhat increased expenditure, a result better than Budget by Rx. 1,488,700. The Budget Estimates were drawn up on the basis of a rate of 14·46 pence; whereas the rate actually realized has been 15·38 pence.

9. In the Account of Revenue in India, the Revised Estimates shew an improvement under Land Revenue of Rx. 286,100 which may be put down as the effect of the excellent harvests; but there is against this a heavy loss on opium due to the falling-off in prices in China. The price realized for Bengal opium has been R1,023 per chest only against R1,075 taken in the Budget Estimates, and in Bombay the falling-off in the trade was such that we had to reduce the pass duty from October 27, 1897, to R500. The other heads of Revenue produced, as a whole, a very little less than we estimated.

10. The improvement under Departmental Receipts is accounted for by the excess received in the shape of Post Office Revenue, Rx. 42,200, and of Telegraph Revenue, Rx. 219,500.

11. Under Railways we have received Rx. 482,900 more than we estimated, the important items being :—

		Rx.
1. East Indian Railway	Better	600,000
2. North-Western Railway	Better	500,000
3. Burma Railways	Better	85,000
4. Indian Midland	Better	80,000
5. Rajputana-Malwa	Worse	290,000
6. Bombay, Baroda and Central India (net earnings)	Worse	180,000
7. Great Indian Peninsula (net earnings)	Worse	330,000
Net of the above	Better	465,000

Of these, the first and largest is due to movements of grain towards the famine districts, and the second chiefly to the movements of troops in connection with the war. Plague and scarcity account for the losses on the three Railways which run towards the Western Presidency.

12. The very high receipts from Irrigation occur mostly in Northern India, and are due to the dryness of the earlier part of the year and the consequent high demand for water. The impressions produced on the people by a year of scarcity, no doubt, tend in themselves to stimulate the use of irrigation-water.

13. Passing to the Expenditure side, we have first a saving under Opium of Rx. 289,200, which for the most part means that the crop for which we had to pay fell short of our expectations; our custom is to assume, in the Budget, an average crop at least.

14. The extra expenditure under Civil Departments amounts to Rx. 275,800, and is caused by plague operations, Rx. 279,900, the head under which it is mostly shewn being Medical. There is an excess also under Jails, amounting to Rx. 84,700, and due partly to high prices and partly to increase of jail population, one of the side-effects of the general scarcity.

15. The saving under Military Works I have already explained as meaning merely a transfer of the expenditure to the English Account.

16. Under Army, apart from the warlike operations, we have a saving of Rx. 538,400. There has been a saving of about Rx. 200,000 on Commissariat and Transport services which would have had to be spent if the troops had not been absent on field service; Rx. 66,500 has been saved in exchange compensation by the rise of rates, and Rx. 77,400 in pay and allowances; the despatch of a British regiment to Natal and a Native regiment to Mombassa brings a saving of Rx. 52,200. Against these savings we have had to meet excess expenditure of Rx. 65,800 arising out of increase of prices, and Rx. 10,900 on account of Jubilee concessions to the troops. The other items of difference do not call for special mention.

17. The excesses of Rx. 1,747,800 under Famine and Rx. 3,869,800 under Warlike operations will be separately dealt with.

Famine Relief.

18. The effects of the famine upon our accounts extend far beyond the mere cost of famine relief. Even the administration of famine relief, taken by itself, necessitates increase of establishments charged under the heads of District Administration (Land Revenue), General Administration, Police, Medical, and others; but besides that, the high prices which accompany a period of famine increase the expenditure on jails, on petty establishments, and, above all, on the army. Our revenue, moreover, is seriously affected, the Land Revenue and Provincial Rates and Forests directly, and such revenues as Salt and Excise, by the general pressure on the people.

19. The total cost, direct and indirect, of the famine is estimated as follows:—

	1896-97. Rx.	1897-98. Rx.
Spent on Famine Relief	2,079,500	5,391,800
Remissions and losses of Land Revenue (independent of suspensions)	871,600	576,400
Loss of Salt and Excise Revenue	417,800	357,600
Loss under other principal heads of Revenue	337,800	391,300
Loss of Railway Revenue	1,504,100	1,477,400
Charges for compensation for dearness of provisions, and other increases due to high prices—
Under Army	506,400	604,100
Under other heads	183,000	321,000
Other charges arising in connection with famine	76,700	123,400
Total	5,976,900	9,243,000
Deduct—Increase of Irrigation Revenue due to drought	424,900	556,700
Net cost, direct and indirect, of famine and scarcity	5,552,000	8,686,300
	14,238,300

These figures omit the suspensions of Land Revenue amounting to Rx. 1,856,500 which, if the seasons are good, will be recovered.

20. As regards the direct expenditure on Famine Relief, the following figures shew the general results in Rx. :—

	1896-97. Accounts.	1897-98. Budget.	1897-98. Revised.	Total of 1 and 3.
India	1,215	1,300	8,200	9,400
Central Provinces .	303,271	680,000	1,340,000	1,643,300
Burma	55,524	66,600	62,700	118,200
Bengal	244,208	1,004,800	889,400	1,133,600
North-Western Provinces	993,330	850,000	1,069,000	2,062,300
Punjab	86,149	167,800	125,600	211,700
Madras	56,285	200,400	928,600	984,900
Bombay	325,659	670,300	965,500	1,291,200
England	8,360	...	1,800	10,200
Exchange	5,524	...	1,000	6,500
TOTAL .	2,079,525	3,641,200	5,391,800	7,471,300

21. The great excess of expenditure, as compared with Budget Estimate, has, it will be seen, occurred in the Central Provinces and in Madras. As regards the first of these, it became evident very early in the year that, though the Chief Commissioner had provided a proportionally larger amount than any other province, the people were in a more poverty-stricken condition than even he had anticipated. In some parts of that province there had been a long succession of bad seasons, and the population had nothing whatever to fall back upon. When the time came at which in other provinces the beginning of recovery was apparent, the people of the Central Provinces were as poor and as hardly pressed as ever, and it will be seen that in 1897-98 more money has been spent on famine relief in that small province than in any of the others.

22. As regards Madras, we are still in communication with that Government on the question of its failure to foresee the extent of the demands it would have to meet. Twelve months ago I stated on the authority of the latest estimates received from the Government of Madras that the province was only slightly affected by famine, that its revenues had suffered very little, and that it would be able to meet, without assistance from Imperial Funds, the whole or nearly the whole of its famine expenditure. It must be remembered that the harvest in that province largely depends upon the rains of December to February, so that, so far as realization of the actual condition of things was concerned, Madras was not until May in the same position in which the other Governments were in January. But the demands of the province in respect of famine expenditure came upon the Government of India in June with a severity which we had not anticipated.

23. The North-Western Provinces spent somewhat more, and Bombay a good deal more, than was anticipated at Budget time; but I explained last year that I could not put forward the estimates of famine expenditure with anything approaching to an assurance that they would prove sufficient.

24. The following figures will be of interest as shewing, both in money spent and in people relieved, the history of famine relief in the several provinces of India. The figures do not include famine operations in Berar, or in the Native States of the Central India Agency :—

	EXPENDITURE IN Rx. Quarter ending
	December 1896.	March 1897.	June 1897.	September 1897.	December 1897.

Central Provinces .	23,100	277,200	515,800	580,800	328,900
Burma . . .	20,500	35,000	24,600	32,400	7,800
Bengal . .	4,700	239,500	530,700	352,000	26,300
North-Western Provinces . .	42,800	919,000	781,200	309,800	7,000
Punjab . .	9,600	76,500	62,800	48,000	12,700
Madras	3,400	52,800	260,300	589,500	80,600

TOTAL .	130,800	1,900,100	2,492,100	2,372,800	639,700

The expenditure in all India in January 1898 was only Rx. 32,000, of which more than half was in the Central Provinces ; famine relief operations had practically come to an end.

25. The following is a statement of the units relieved, stated in thousands, a unit being one person relieved for one day :—

TOTAL .	828,893,000 units, being an average of 1,814,000 per day for 15 months.

The number on relief was highest in May and June 1897, during which period about 3,650,000 persons were relieved each day.

26. Besides the direct outlay upon Famine Relief, the famine operations affect also another portion of our accounts, as the Governments in India have to meet part of the necessities of the population by a liberal extension of the system of agricultural advances. The ordinary operations under this head of our accounts amount to advances a little in excess of Rx. 250,000 and recoveries somewhat short of this amount, the duration of the advances being only one or two years in some cases (such as advances for seed) to five or ten years and sometimes still longer periods in cases of advances for permanent land improvements. In 1896-97, however, the amount advanced came to Rx. 1,104,335 against recoveries amounting to Rx. 287,095, that is, a net amount of Rx. 817,240 ; and the net advances of the current year are about two-thirds of this amount.

27. The figures stated by provinces are as follows, the minus sign indicating cases in which the recoveries exceeded the amounts advanced :—

Net Loans to Cultivators and the like.

TOTAL .	30,017	12,756	817,240	563,600

It is worth while to observe that we recently made special enquiries about the punctuality of repayment in the case of these advances to cultivators, and were assured on all hands by the Local Governments and by the Revenue authorities subordinate to them, that the cultivators habitually observed the obligations which they accepted in respect of the advances, and that the outstandings were sound and good debts.

28. The figures which I have so far set out include only the operations of the Government in the matter of Famine Relief; but it would not be becoming in me if I were to pass from the subject of the contest with famine, without reference to the large measure of assistance which was given, in supplement to the operations of Government, by the munificent subscriptions to the Charitable Relief Fund. The Honourable Mr. James who has had much to do with the direction of the operations of that Fund has been good enough to give me, in anticipation of the Central Committee's formal report, the following summary of its appropriation :—

The Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund was founded at a public meeting held at the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta, on the 14th January 1897. Followed up by a meeting at the Guild-hall in London on 16th January, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, and by meetings in other parts of the United Kingdom, the Fund grew rapidly till it reached a total of Rx. 1,670,000. Of this, Rx. 300,000 were subscribed in India, and Rx. 1,370,000 were received from countries abroad, principally from the United Kingdom which contributed the splendid sum of Rx. 1,230,000, the exchange equivalent of £773,000.

That sum was divided as follows :—

Mansion House	543,000
Lancashire	131,000
Glasgow	54,000
Liverpool	26,000
Edinburgh	17,000
Miscellaneous	2,000
	773,000

These contributions from the United Kingdom exceed those made for the famine of 1877-78 by nearly £150,000, and form indeed a signal and beneficent manifestation of national benevolence. Of the balance of foreign subscriptions, amounting to Rx. 140,000, mostly remitted in Indian currency, Canada remitted Rx. 57,000, the Australian Colonies Rx. 15,500, Ceylon Rx. 14,700, China Rx. 14,000, Russia Rx. 9,800, the Straits Settlements Rx. 6,800, Japan Rx. 5,000, and the remainder came in smaller sums from New Zealand, Natal, America, Mauritius, Fiji, and other countries, Indian emigrants to British Colonies sending numerous contributions.

The fund was divided, as subscriptions came in, amongst the distressed provinces, and the following are the sums which each received, including its own local receipts :—

	Rx.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	518,500
Central Provinces	370,000
Bengal	215,000
Bombay	165,000
Madras	157,500
Punjab	122,000
Central India	42,500
Burma	30,000
Berar	20,000
Baluchistan	2,000
Rajputana	2,000
	1,644,500

Expenditure is still going on in the Madras Presidency owing to the failure of the north-east monsoon, and in Bombay, where plague has been superadded to famine, but the Central Committee expect to wind up with a balance of between Rx. 40,000 and Rx. 50,000, consisting chiefly of moneys returned by Provincial Committees which will be invested and form the nucleus of a fund against the next famine.

Over two-thirds of the fund have been spent in giving a fresh start in life to those who had lost all in the struggle, principally to peasant farmers whose bullocks had died from want of fodder, and who had neither plough-cattle nor seed, nor credit on which to procure them. The bulk of the residue was spent upon doles to parda-nashin women and respectable persons or tradesmen, who were unable from social custom to work or accept Government relief, accompanied as that must be by official enquiry into and by some kind of test of the reality of the destitution to be relieved, and a comparatively small amount has been devoted to supplementing the Government ration in poor-houses and on relief works, by small gifts of food and clothing, and to the maintenance of orphans. The Famine Fund has thus distributed in relief nearly one-fifth of the direct expenditure from the State, and as it has in no way displaced Government relief (which was not confined within predetermined financial bonds, but was limited only by certain tests), the Fund has been extremely valuable in softening the sharpness of distress, and it has restored to prosperity a vast number of families. Statistics shew nearly 1¼ million heads of families relieved by grants of cattle, seed and implements, nearly 1 million of respectable persons fed, and 1¼ millions of relief workers assisted, at the expense of the Charitable Fund, while provision has been made for the maintenance and education of about 4,000 orphans whose relatives or friends cannot be found. The Government of India contributed to the Fund by giving an officer for the duties of Vice-Chairman and Honorary Secretary, by a grant of Rx. 1,800 towards office expenses, and by allowing the Committee the free use of the Government Press. Numerous concessions of a similar nature have been made by Local Governments, firms and individuals, so that the total expenditure from the Fund on establishments and offices comes to less than one-half per cent.

Military Operations.

29. The military operations on the North-Western Frontier, which have added so much to the expenditure of the current year, may be divided into four parts, and I may state the facts in a tabular form which I admit to be better suited to a Financial Statement than to a military history :—

	I. Tochi Field Force.	II. Malakand Field Force.	III. Mohmand Field Force.	IV. Tirah Field Force.
Origin of the expedition and its date.	Attack at Maizar, 10th June.	Attack on Malakand, 26th July.	Attack on Shabkadr, 7th Aug.	Attack on Khyber Forts, 23rd Aug.
Date of formal sanction of expedition	19th June	30th July	2nd Sept.	8th Sept.
Expedition against Buner sanctioned . . .		1st Jan.
Field Force broken up . .	18th Feb.	4th Feb.	6th Oct.	Still standing.
Fighting men engaged * . .	7,306	10,421	10,624	32,161

* Besides 3,776 in Reserve Brigade at Rawalpindi.

30. Our estimates of the expenditure on military expeditions are, I may explain, made under three heads,—(1) Initial charges, (2) Monthly charges, and (3) Terminal charges. The second of these is necessarily somewhat problematical; we can say how much any given expedition will cost per month, but the question how many months it will last is determined only by events.

31. Our estimate of the cost of the above expeditions was made in the beginning of October, and made on the assumption that they would last till the end of December. That estimate amounted to Rx. 3,720,000. This is not the place to explain what events necessitated the prolongation of the expeditions, and chiefly of the largest one, the Tirah expedition. The result, with reference to the estimate above mentioned, is that the total expenditure on account of the monthly charges has exceeded what we anticipated, but there has been a large saving on terminal charges, only however by reason of their passing into the accounts of 1898-99. We estimate now that we shall spend Rx. 3,823,500 in 1897-98 and a further sum of Rx. 1,488,500 in 1898-99. This last estimate has been drawn up on the supposition that there would be a spring campaign lasting three months, followed by what I have called the terminal charges of the expedition. Although preparations continue to be made for that three months' campaign, the prospects of peace being concluded without it are, at the present time, very favourable, and, if so, there will be some saving upon the expenditure now estimated for 1898-99.

Loan Operations.

32. In the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 I announced the intention of the Government of India to raise a Rupee loan of four crores; but when the usual time approached for our entering the market, it became very doubtful whether it was wise to try to borrow so large an amount. The Bank rate in India remained unusually high, having been 10 per cent for the first 5½ months of 1897. On June 17th it was reduced to 9 per cent, and a week later to 8 per cent.

33. The price of 3½ per cent Government Paper was 99, 100, and 101 per cent during January, February, and March 1897; it rose to 104 about 20th May, and thereafter till the end of July gradually fell back to a little over par.

34. I took the opportunity of visiting Calcutta at the end of June to make enquiry into the state of matters, and I desire to convey my acknowledgments to my banking and mercantile friends for the advice they then gave me and the information they placed at my disposal. The result of my report to His Excellency in Council was that the Secretary of State sanctioned our reducing the amount of the loan to Rx. 3,000,000, and in July we called for tenders for this amount to form part of our ordinary 3½ per cent loan, the time being unpropitious for a continuation of our 3 per cent loan of 1895. In the result the loan was taken up at an average rate of R98-5-3 and a minimum rate of R98-1 per cent.

35. The Secretary of State's loan transactions were as follows :—

(1) In accordance with Budget Estimate he raised permanent debt in May to the extent of £3,500,000, namely, India 2½ per cent stock. This he obtained at an average price of £96-15-11.

(2) In his Budget Estimate he proposed to pay off £1,000,000 of temporary debt outstanding on March 31st, and to raise new temporary debt to the amount of £2,000,000. The suspension of drawings to which I shall presently allude compelled him to enhance this last amount to £6,000,000, which he obtained as follows :—

Date.	Amount.	Rate of interest
September 14 . .	2,500,000	2	11	8
November 30 . .	2,500,000	2	15	2
January 17 . .	1,000,000	2	4	5

Council Bills and Rate of Exchange.

36. The rate of exchange at the close of last year when the Estimates were brought before the Council was about 15 pence, and it remained at that rate throughout April. It fell during May, and in the end of that month the Secretary of State drew at $14\frac{5}{16}$ pence. It then rose till the beginning of August, being then above 15 pence.

37. During July we were obliged to reconsider our position as regards Ways and Means. The suspension of the rains throughout the month of June destroyed our hopes of the early closing of the Famine Relief Works, and at the same time sudden and unexpected demands for money for Famine Relief were made from Madras. In July the position became more difficult as hostile attacks by the tribes on the North-Western Frontier made it obvious that military operations would have to be undertaken. These demands came upon us at the most difficult time of the year, so far as the supply of funds is concerned, for under ordinary circumstances our Cash Balances, even including Loan Receipts, run down throughout the five months July to November. A careful re-examination shewed that, in the face of the new demands upon us, we would be obliged to ask the Secretary of State to greatly reduce his drawings; and as the military operations became more extensive, he not only stopped them altogether, but remitted back to us a crore of rupees out of the amounts he had already drawn.

38. With the aid of this crore of rupees which reached us in the beginning of October, we just managed (as we had calculated) to pass through the low-balance period, our Cash Balances being as follows:—

	Rx.
Last day of August	8,504,300
September	7,620,000
October	8,079,300
November	8,076,400

I ought to add here a word of acknowledgment to Mr. Barrow, the Officiating Comptroller General, who accomplished the extremely difficult task of meeting the demands upon the Government Treasuries throughout this period with such inadequate resources, and that at a time when they included those of a war on the frontier, and of famine relief on an extensive scale in five of the largest provinces of India. I had asked the Local Governments to instruct the District Collectors throughout India to lend their special aid in the management of the Cash Balances; and with their assistance the arrangements worked with perfect smoothness.

39. The result of the suspension of drawings was to maintain the rate of exchange at over 15½*d.* till the middle of November, but it then began to fall through a belief, which turned out to be quite unfounded, that it could not be maintained when the Secretary of State recommenced drawing. It fell just below 15 pence in the middle of December, but as soon as the Secretary of State resumed his drawings, it became apparent that the demand had been quite under-estimated. His last drawing in December was at the rate of 15 13/16*d.*, and the rate has since that date maintained itself at and above this rate, the average rate of the drawing of the month of January having exceeded 16*d.* The demand for money has recently been much greater than the supply, and the Banks' rate has risen from 5 per cent in the beginning of December to 12 per cent in the beginning of March. At one time the tension was so severe that it was deemed prudent to introduce a legislative measure, which would have the effect of enabling gold in England to be placed at the immediate disposal of trade in India. No operations have actually taken place under it, though we have received about £150,000 in gold in India, but it had the effect, which we intended, of allaying the anxiety of the market.

40. The drawings for the year necessarily fell far short of the amount estimated in the Budget, £13,000,000, and we estimate that for the whole year they will stand as follows:—

	£	Rx.	Rate.
Council Bills	9,378,000	14,585,400	15·4*d.*
Less Re-remittance	669,400	1,000,000	16 1/16 d.
Net Remittance .	8,708,600	13,585,400	15⅜*d.*

41. This rate of 15⅜ pence (or rather R15·6 for each £ sterling) is accordingly taken as that at which the English Revenue and Expenditure are brought to account in the Revised Estimates of 1897-98. And following my usual practice of avoiding any speculations upon the future of Exchange, I adopt the same rate for the Budget Estimates of 1898-99.

Budget Estimates, 1898-99.

42. The result of the Budget Estimates for 1898-99 is that, after providing for the full amount Rx. 1,500,000 of the Famine Grant, and also Rx. 1,488,500 for the continuance of military operations on the frontier, we have a surplus of Revenue over Expenditure of Rx. 891,400.

43. Except for this provision for possible war, there are no special features in the year's account. We do not intend to alter our revenue or the rates at which we collect it; we shall have to incur some special expenditure upon the suppression of plague, and the measures, which have been announced in England, for improving the pay of the British soldier will also involve some expenditure in India. How much this may be it is impossible, in the present inchoate state of the communications on the subject, to say, but we have thought it wise to provide in the Estimates a sum of Rx. 200,000 "on account."

44. There is therefore little to say but to explain the details of the Estimates; and the following statement shews in the usual condensed form the comparison between the Budget Estimates now presented and those of the preceding two years. I have included, for purposes of comparison, the figures of the Budget

Estimates of 1896-97 as well as those of 1897-98, because the latter were in some respects peculiarly affected by the prevalence of scarcity and famine :—

(a) Including Interest and Receipts under Civil Works.

45. The principal difference in the expenditure in England is an addition of £171,400 to the interest there payable, which is due to the fact that the Secretary of State has had by borrowing to make up for the short drawings of Council Bills during 1897-98. The real increase of interest chargeable upon the ordinary account of the Government is a good deal less than the amount just named, as it will be found that in the Indian portion of the accounts a considerable portion of the addition is passed on to the charge of the Railway account.

46. In addition to this increase of English expenditure on account of interest, there are the following which may be regarded as normal increases :—

Superannuation Allowances	41,500
Interest on Railway Companies' Capital	24,100

There is an offset of £11,100 against this on account of reduction of rate of interest.

Payments to the War Office for effective and non-effective charges of British Forces	12,000
Other non-effective Army Charges	24,000

There is also a special provision of £38,200 on account of stores required for warlike operations on the frontier, and an increase in the payments of the Indo-European Telegraph Department of £21,900.

47. Passing to the account of Revenue in India, we first of all expect a large increase of Land Revenue. Last year's estimates were estimates of the revenue of a year of scarcity; the present are estimates of the result of a bumper harvest, in which we expect to receive not only the revenue of the year itself, but something on account of revenue suspended during the famine—suspended, that is, in distinction to remitted. The following figures compare the expected receipts with what I gave last year as the standard of the annual Revenue as it stood in 1896-97,—a standard which has of course somewhat advanced since then:—

	Standard of 1896-97.	Expected receipts in 1898-99.
	Rx.	Rx.
India	150,000	150,500
Central Provinces	844,800	920,000
Burma	2,571,300	2,657,000
Assam	614,200	626,000
Bengal	3,902,100	4,087,300
North-Western Provinces	6,110,900	6,667,900
Punjab	2,464,000	2,614,100
Madras	5,600,000	5,856,100
Bombay	4,816,400	4,961,300
	27,073,700	28,540,200

This amount is shewn thus:—

Under Land Revenue	27,568,200
„ Irrigation	972,000
TOTAL	28,540,200

48. As the annual increase of the Land Revenue has on the statistics of the last ten years been 31 lakhs, the standard figure for 1898-99 may be stated at Rx. 27,690,000, and the revenue we expect is, it will be seen, Rx. 850,000 in excess of this.

The chief advance is in the North-Western Provinces. In that province very liberal remissions and suspensions of revenue were granted during the evil times of 1896-97; and the revenue of the two years 1896-97 and 1897-98 has fallen short of the standard figure of 1896-97 by about Rx. 1,200,000.

49. Under Opium we are unable to anticipate a revenue even equal to that of the current year 1897-98: and the figure is therefore much less than the Budget Estimates of 1897-98.

50. Under Provincial Rates there is a considerable increase for the same reasons as explained in the case of Land Revenue.

51. Under Departmental Receipts the improvement, as compared with the Budget of 1897-98, is mainly under three heads, namely, Interest Rx. 81,200, due partly to the interest on the addition of Rx. 2,000,000 made to the Currency Reserve Investment in December 1896, and partly to the large advances and loans we made during the period of scarcity; Post Office Rx. 65,900, Telegraph Rx. 144,400, due in both cases to expansion of business.

52. Under Famine Relief and Insurance the figures necessarily entirely differ from those of the Budget Estimates of 1897-98. We restore the Famine Grant of Rx. 1,500,000, distributing it as follows:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Famine Relief	3,641,200	85,100
Famine Insurance	...	325,800
Protective Railways	...	668,300
Protective Irrigation	25,000	20,000
Add—Interest on Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpur Railways under "State Railways"	456,500	400,800
TOTAL	4,122,700	1,500,000

The expenditure in the second line is the amount available for famine insurance after meeting the prior claims on the grant and the portion of the Railway construction expenditure charged against it.

53. The difference under Railways it will be convenient to explain along with the difference under the same head on the Expenditure side, and the remaining heads require no remarks.

54. On the Expenditure side the first difference calling for notice is under "Interest," and this has, as mentioned above, to be considered along with the same entry in the English part of the accounts. The English estimates provide, as already stated, for an additional interest charge of £171,400, say Rx. 267,000; but as in our Indian accounts there is an additional transfer of Rx. 167,000 from the ordinary account of Interest to the Railway and Irrigation accounts, the net burden of interest is enhanced by only Rx. 100,000.

55. The principal portions of the increase under Civil Departments (Rx. 321,000), are Medical Rx. 149,800, due to provision for plague expenditure which, though not sufficiently provided for in the Estimates of 1897-98, had nevertheless to be incurred; and Superannuations Rx. 46,200, a continually increasing charge.

56. The statistics of the Revenue and Expenditure of Railways in India may conveniently be thus stated:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
STATE RAILWAYS—
Gross Earnings	18,023,400	18,994,700	19,382,600
Working Expenses	9,027,300	9,299,100	9,770,500
Net Earnings	8,996,100	9,695,600	9,612,100
Interest Charges	4,089,600	4,089,200	4,319,800
Net Return	4,906,500	5,606,400	5,292,300
GUARANTEED RAILWAYS—
Gross Earnings	5,740,000	5,360,000	5,690,000
Working Expenses	3,110,000	3,200,000	3,266,000
Net Earnings	2,630,000	2,160,000	2,424,000
Payment of Profits, Interest, etc.	310,200	154,600	321,600
Net Return	2,319,800	2,005,400	2,102,400
Land and Miscellaneous Charges	296,200	134,400	310,300
Net on the whole account	6,930,100	7,477,400	7,084,400

Under State Railways it is mainly on the following lines that the traffic is expected to be better in 1898-99 than it has been in 1897-98:—

	Budget, 1897-98. Rx.	Revised, 1897-98. Rx.	Budget, 1898-99. Rx.
Rajputana-Malwa . . .	2,250,000	1,960,000	2,200,000
Bengal-Nagpur . . .	650,000	590,000	680,000
Bengal-North-Western . .	620,000	620,000	675,000
Oudh and Rohilkhand . .	880,000	900,000	1,000,000

Provision is made for larger working expenses corresponding to the increasing traffic and for special renewals of permanent-way and rolling-stock.

Under Guaranteed Railways, the Great Indian Peninsula and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India are both expected to recover from the low figures of the current year.

57. The Army expenditure in India, excluding the account of military operations, is estimated at Rx. 343,100 less than the Budget for 1897-98. The better exchange brings a saving of Rx. 228,300 and the fall in prices Rx. 272,600. There is also less provision for ordnance stores to the extent of Rx. 41,200, and a further deduction is made in India of Rx. 64,900 for certain demands provided for in the English Estimates, but not now required. Against these savings, of which the total is Rx. 607,000, we have to provide for an increase of Rx. 27,400 for pensions, the addition being larger than usual owing to the grant of extra pensions in consequence of the military operations of the year, and Rx. 11,500 for providing medals. We have also, as already mentioned, provided Rx. 200,000 for possible improvements in the British soldiers' pay.

Railway Construction.

58. I referred last year to a systematic programme of Railway construction which had been sanctioned by the Secretary of State. It amounted to 28 crores (afterwards extended to 29⅔ crores), and was intended to last over three years, 1896-97 to 1898-99. I divided it, for convenience sake with reference to our accounts, into four categories, namely:—

First.—State Railway Construction; money found by Government, but also by debentures in the case of the East Indian and Assam-Bengal Railway Companies.

Second.—Construction by Companies, out of funds raised by them or advanced by Government to them (including a small advance for a Native State Railway).

Third.—Construction by Companies outside the accounts of the Government, and also construction by Branch Line Companies.

Fourth.—New construction by the old Guaranteed Companies.

59. The programme of 29⅔ crores did not include the Railways of the third category, and no arrangements had yet been made for any construction under the fourth category. The estimate for expenditure under the first and second categories, that is, the expenditure falling within the "programme" during 1897-98, came to Rx. 10,130,000. But the revision of Ways and Means imposed upon us by the difficulties which began in June and July, alluded to in paragraph 37 above, compelled us to reduce the amount by one crore, and it stood therefore at Rx. 9,130,000. For similar reasons the Government of India have thought it advisable to curtail the intended expenditure of 1898-99, as the strain through which the country has passed during the past two years, renders it inadvisable to raise money at the rate which was contemplated before the Famine and the Frontier war were within our calculations. The expenditure for 1898-99 was therefore at first fixed at Rx. 10,121,300; but as for various reasons, including the engineering strike in England, even the Rx. 9,130,000 will not be worked up to in 1897-98, these two amounts are now redistributed between the two years, and thus the estimates now stand at Rx. 8,414,400 for 1897-98 and Rx. 10,836,900 for 1898-99.

Irrigation.

65. The usual annual amount of Rx. 750,000 is provided for expenditure on Irrigation in 1898-99. The similar grant for 1897-98 has not been fully worked up to, owing chiefly to certain recoveries and writes-back not provided for in the Budget.

66. The following account shews in a shortened form the requirements of the Secretary of State ; the figures are drawn up so as to shew separately the transactions on account of Government, and the transactions arising out of the operations of Railway Companies :—

67. The following figures shew the manner in which the above requirements have been or are to be financed :—

It will be seen that the Secretary of State opens the year with outstandings of temporary debt to the extent of £6,000,000, and this he intends to renew. Under the head of Permanent Debt he intends to discharge India Debentures to the extent of £3,000,000 and Oudh and Rohilkhand Debenture Stock to the extent of £384,700, giving a total of £3,384,700. For the discharge of this amount, and for generally supplementing his resources, he intends to raise permanent debt to the extent of £6,000,000. His further requirements will be met by drawing Council Bills to the extent of £16,000,000.

68. We propose in India to raise a Rupee Loan of Rx. 3,000,000.

69. These announcements of the amounts of Council Bill drawings and of debt to be raised are made with the usual reservation of entire liberty to the Secretary of State to vary the amounts as he may find occasion.

Currency Policy.

70. I regret that I am not in a position to make any further pronouncement on the part of the Government, on the subject of the Currency Policy. Since the date, January 14th, on which I informed the Council that the matter was having the anxious consideration of the Government of India, we have communicated to Her Majesty's Secretary of State our views on the present position. We are now also sending home to him a copy of the Honourable Mr. Arthur's address to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce and of an important communication we have received from the Bombay Chamber. We are confident that Her Majesty's Government will give the subject their early attention.

Review of twenty years' Finance.

71. I conclude my statement with a short review of twenty years of Indian finance, 1878 to 1898.

72. Twenty years ago the experience of a severe famine in Northern India, followed after a short interval by another in Southern India, brought home to us the effect upon our finances of such periodically recurring disasters, and obliged us to lay down a financial policy intended to have the effect of increasing our capacity for dealing with similar calamities in the future. We have now passed through another and a severer famine, and it will be useful to look back over this period and to see whether our financial policy has, as a whole, been successful, and whether, taking the twenty years together, a period covering both the financial preparation for, and the actual experience of, disaster, we have paid our way and can give a good account of what financially we have accomplished. These twenty years include, it must be remembered, the war in Afghanistan, the annexation of Upper Burma, and the recent wars in Chitral and on our North-Western Frontiers. They include the outlay entailed by a programme of expenditure on 'special defences' which began in 1886-87 and is only now being closed; and they include the large increase of the army effected after the occupation of Upper Burma.

73. I present on the opposite page a statement in a compressed form, which includes every transaction which during the period in question has passed through our accounts. I think the form is as devoid of technicalities as a statement of so complicated and comprehensive a subject can be, and is such as to be easily followed. I summarize the result as follows.

74. Taking first the Revenue Account, and reckoning as ordinary expenditure everything except the cost of our large wars, of the 'special defences' just alluded to, of actual famine relief, and of Railway construction so far as met out of revenue, the result is that our revenue has exceeded our ordinary expenditure by Rx. 50,988,294. Distributed into four quinquennial periods this figure is made up as follows:—

	Rx.
1878—83	22,294,539
1883—88	5,513,331
1888—93	13,472,520
1893—98	9,707,904
TOTAL	50,988,294

75. Of this excess of revenue, we have spent Rx. 21,223,424 on War (our smaller military expeditions are not included in this term, but are taken as ordinary expenditure); we have spent Rx. 4,589,664 on special defence works; we have spent Rx. 8,138,478 upon Famine Relief, and we have spent Rx. 13,659,867 upon Railway construction. The balance of Rx. 3,376,861 remains over, to the good, on the whole account. We have, in the twenty years, by this amount more than paid our way.

76. On our borrowing and investment account we have raised debt to the extent of £65,786,082 sterling (including £1,542,500 East Indian Railway Debentures) and Rx. 48,815,586. This is mostly increase of permanent debt, but it includes Rx. 8,632,573 obtained by extending the advantages of Savings Banks all over India. Of this large sum, it will be seen, we have spent £19,448,516 and Rx. 53,518,033 mostly on the construction of Railways, but partly also on Major Irrigation works (Minor Irrigation works are paid for from Revenue); we have used £33,542,776 and Rx. 10,675 to buy up the undertakings of the East Indian Railway and other similar Companies, as they fell in under the purchase clauses of their contracts. We have lent Rx. 16,473,480 to Port Trusts for the construction of Docks and Harbour works at Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and elsewhere, to Municipalities for expenditure on projects of water-supply and drainage, and to cultivators for promotion of agriculture. But as Rx. 11,211,096 has, during the same time, been repaid to us by our debtors, the net burden upon us in respect of these lendings has been only Rx. 5,262,384.

77. A further sum of £6,734,900, included in our borrowings, has been placed at the disposal of Railway Companies for expenditure on Railway construction under their contracts with us.

78. Passing to the accounts of these Railway Companies, we find that, in addition to the sum of £6,734,900 just mentioned as lent to them by us, they have raised, either under our guarantee or under pledges of assistance from us, capital to the extent of £31,647,425 sterling plus Rx. 1,527,904. Their capital expenditure, during the twenty years amounts in sterling or its equivalent to £39,658,227 besides Rx. 1,098,145 on account of Branch Line Companies.

79. As to the effect on our revenues of all this expenditure on Railway Construction, it may be stated in this way. At the beginning of the twenty years' period the annual loss on Railways after meeting all interest charges was about Rx. 1,500,000, whereas it is now, except in good years, nearly Rx. 2,000,000. This is an apparent loss of Rx. 500,000 a year; but it has to be remembered that by reason of the depreciation of the rupee, it requires now more than Rx. 1,000,000 net earnings to pay the interest charge on the sterling capital as it stood in 1878; so that our Railway Revenue account has, after the expenditure of the twenty years, so far improved that it not only provides the whole of the interest charge which that expenditure has imposed, but meets in addition thereto Rx. 500,000 of the burden which the fall of the rupee has intermediately added in respect of the capital as it stood in 1878.

80. Stated shortly therefore the result of twenty years' finance is this. So far as Revenue goes we have, even after charging off Rx. 13,660,000 spent from Revenue account on Railway construction, more than paid our way, including all expenditure on war, special defences, and famine. So far as capital transactions go, we have raised under various conditions and spent upon Railways, Irrigation, Harbour Works and Docks, Municipal projects, and Agricultural Improvements a sum equal (at 16 pence the rupee) to Rx. 198,820,000; and we are after all this expenditure better off by Rx. 500,000 a year than before we undertook it. I am dealing, it must be remembered, with direct financial returns only; the effect of all this expenditure on development of Revenue and its economic and administrative aspects lie outside my present purposes. As mere episodes in these transactions, we have spread Savings Banks and Money Order offices over the country; we have received in the former a net sum of Rx. 8,630,000 in deposit, and we carry out remittances in the latter to an annual extent of about Rx. 25,000,000.

81. One of my objects in setting out this general review of our finances is to point out how little occasion there is for our seeking assistance from Her Majesty's Government in aid of our revenue account. This course has been suggested in many quarters, both in England and in this country, but the Government of India have never wavered from the position taken up by Sir John Strachey in his Financial Statement for 1880-81, from which I quote the following paragraph:—

43. I can imagine few greater misfortunes to India than the loss of her financial independence, and the acceptance by England of financial responsibility for her Indian Empire. It would signify to India the loss of control over her own affairs in every department of her administration, the possible subordination of her interests to those of a foreign country, and the substitution of ignorance for knowledge in her Government. Although some rare instances may be quoted in which, when there seemed to be a conflict between English and Indian interests, it may perhaps be doubted whether India has been treated with perfect fairness, there can be no question that, on the whole, the Government of India has been carried on with as honest and thorough a regard for Indian interests as if India had a separate national existence of her own. England may rightly be proud of the way in which she has treated her great dependency. These fortunate results have, however, been due not only to her justice, but also to the wisdom with which she has left to India a separate financial responsibility. England has felt that it would be no kindness to take upon herself burdens which India now bears, to guarantee Indian debts, pay for Indian wars, and relieve Indian famines. England has also felt that it was wise, in her own true interest, to refuse to take into her own hands the control of the £67,000,000 which now constitutes the revenue of India. England does not choose that there should be grounds for even a suspicion in regard to the purity of her motives. I say this in the belief that India has before her a future of increasing wealth and prosperity; but if this anticipation should not be verified, and her future should be one of financial embarrassment, the loss of her financial independence would bring with it other misfortunes. I trust that the people of England may never find cause for believing that the maintenance of their Indian Empire means the imposition of heavy burdens on themselves.

82. The record of twenty years' finance which I have displayed in the above figures is a better one than can be shewn by almost any country in the world but the United Kingdom. As Sir J. Strachey said, we ask for no charity from England. As a mere matter of our financial credit, we consider it infinitely more profitable to us to shew that we are able with our own resources to rise from our accumulated misfortunes of last year to new energy and new prosperity, than to present ourselves before England as a poor relation seeking help out of her abundant wealth. We have every prospect, as the Budget Estimates for next year have shewn, of wiping out, within a single year, so far as our financial condition is concerned, the evil effects of the year of calamities through which we have just passed.

Appended Minutes.

83. The Honourable Major-General Sir Edwin Collen and the Honourable Sir Arthur Trevor append to the Financial Statement separate Minutes, dealing respectively with the subjects of Military Expenditure and of Railway Extension.

DETAILS OF THE ACCOUNTS AND ESTIMATES.

Section I.—The Accounts of 1896-97.

Accounts of 1896-97.

84. The Revised Estimates of 1896-97 anticipated a deficit of Rx. 1,986,900: the deficit of the year in the closed Accounts is somewhat smaller, being Rx. 1,705,022.

Explanations of the variations under the several heads of the Account figures from those of the Budget and Revised Estimates will be found in the Appropriation Report published in the Gazette of India of the 19th instant. The following is a general comparison of the Revised Estimates with the Accounts of the year:—

1896-97. General Results.

85. The Expenditure in India fell short of the amount taken in the Revised Estimate by Rx. 33,255, and the Revenue in India exceeded that taken in the Revised Estimate by Rx. 312,871. The division of these two improvements between Imperial and Provincial was—

	Imperial.	Provincial and Local.
	Rx.	Rx.
Increase in Revenue	248,088	64,783
Saving in Expenditure		140,080
Excess in Expenditure	106,825

the improvement in the Imperial section being Rx. 141,263. The average rate of exchange for the year, 14·45*d.* the rupee, was very slightly lower than that taken in the Revised Estimate, 14·46*d.* the rupee. The Revenue in England, including Exchange, exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 13,070, while there was a saving in Expenditure in England, including Exchange, of Rx. 127,545. The two last-mentioned amounts, being both on the Imperial section of the Account, added to the improvement in India, Rx. 141,263, make up the total improvement of Rx. 281,878 in the Accounts as compared with the Revised Estimate.

86. The Land Revenue collections exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 275,289. The famine made it specially difficult to foretell what Land Revenue would be collected in the month of March 1897: the anticipations of the Local Governments proved too low by Rx. 190,176 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, by Rx. 116,424 in Bombay, and by Rx. 75,165 in Madras, while in other Provinces the realisations fell short of the estimate by smaller amounts.

The allowance made for the effect of Famine and Plague on the Railway Revenue of March last was too great, and the Railway Revenue exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 138,686.

The variations under other heads of Revenue were smaller, the net result being to reduce somewhat the improvements in Land and Railway Revenue.

87. The expenditure on Famine Relief in the closing weeks of the year was greater than anticipated, and the Actuals exceeded the Revised Estimate by Rx. 114,441. Under Army Expenditure there was also an excess of Rx.55,643. Under other heads there was a saving from the Revised Estimate, the only important item being Rx. 233,563 under 45.—Civil Works, representing for the most part the sums by which the expenditure of Provincial Governments in March fell short of their intentions.

88. The small increase of £7,707 (or with Exchange added Rx. 13,070) in the Revenue in England occurred in the fines and penalties imposed on contractors for the supply of stores. The saving in sterling expenditure of £84,764 occurred mainly under Army, £59,865, and Special Defence Works, £15,132: the expenditure on stores in March was less than anticipated by the Secretary of State.

89. The expenditure not charged to Revenue amounted to Rx. 4,984,422, as compared with Rx. 4,557,400 entered in the Revised Estimate.

Section II.—Revised Estimate of 1897-98.

90. The following is a general comparison of the Budget Estimates with the Revised Estimates of 1897-98:—

1897-98. Main features.

91. The chief features of difference between the Revised and the Budget Estimates of the year are the following: there has been a fair increase in Revenue, chiefly under Railways and Land Revenue: the expenditure on Famine Relief has considerably exceeded even the large amount for which the Budget Estimate provided, the main reason being that the monsoon rains, though ultimately very favourable, were a little late; the military operations on the North-Western Frontier have involved a heavy expenditure: there has also been a recrudescence of plague necessitating expenditure on preventive measures in every Province, but especially in Bombay; and lastly, the rate of exchange has risen more than three farthings in the rupee above the rate taken in the Budget Estimate and thus caused a large saving. Excluding the heads affected by the causes above mentioned, the Expenditure as a whole has been kept within the Budget grant.

1897-98. General results.

92. The Revenue in India is expected to exceed the Budget Estimate by Rx. 872,400, but there will be an excess in Expenditure of Rx. 4,512,400, the two large items accounting for this being Rx. 1,747,800 under Famine Relief and Rx. 3,331,400 under Army. The Expenditure in England will also exceed the Estimate by £202,500 in consequence mainly of unanticipated interest and discount charges on loans and of higher Telegraph payments; but the important feature connected with the sterling figures is the rise in Exchange which reduces the net charge in the Exchange column of the Estimates by Rx. 1,488,700. The final result is an increase in the deficit of the year by Rx. 2,819,100 from Rx. 2,464,000 to Rx. 5,283,100.

1897-98. Increase of Revenue in India.

93. While Assessed Taxes, Forests, Registration, Post Office, and Minor Irrigation Works all shew satisfactory increases, the more important increases of Revenue in India are—

	Rx.
Railway Receipts	501,300
Major Irrigation Works, Direct Receipts	467,000
Land Revenue, including that due to Irrigation	270,700
Provincial Rates	55,600
Telegraphs	219,500
Mint	104,300
Marine	54,100

1897-98. Railway Revenue.

94. The Railway increase is divided thus:—

	Rx.
State, Gross Receipts, Increase	971,300
Guaranteed, Net Receipts, Decrease	470,000
Net Increase	501,300

The Railways this year may be divided into two categories, those leading to Bombay and those in other parts of the Continent. Speaking generally, the former have done badly under the combined effects of plague (with the stringent preventive precautions entailed) and of famine; while the other Railways have done well and shew satisfactory increases over the Budget Estimate. Those increases are ascribed partly to general development, partly to the movements of troops and materials in connection with the North-Western Frontier operations, and partly to the movement of grain into districts affected by famine, though the widespread extent of the famine tended to reduce the latter movement below that which would occur in a partial famine, with scarcity in one Province and plenty in another. The more important increases have occurred on the following lines:—

	Rx.
East Indian Railway	600,000
North-Western Railway	500,000
Burma Railway	85,000
Indian Midland Railway	80,000
East Coast Railway	50,000
Madras Railway (net)	40,000
Mysore Railway	40,000

And the more important decreases on the following :—

	Rx.
Great Indian Peninsula Railway (net)	330,000
Rajputana-Malwa	290,000
Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway (net)	180,000
Bengal-Nagpur Railway	60,000

1897-98. Irrigation Revenue.

95. The increase of Rx. 467,000 in Irrigation Revenue is distributed thus :—

	Rx.
Madras (decrease)	—900
Bombay	4,400
Bengal	35,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	180,500
Punjab	248,000

Part of the increase in the Punjab is due to the extension of irrigation from the Chenab Canal and the realisation of some outstanding balances on the Western Jumna Canal. The rest of the increase in the Punjab and the whole of that in other Provinces is a small set-off against the Famine Relief expenditure, being due to the large demand for water caused by the failure of the rains.

1897-98. Land Revenue.

96. Madras is the only Province in which the Land Revenue collections are expected to fall seriously below the Budget Estimate. There, in consequence of the partial failure of the north-east monsoon on which several Madras districts depend more than on the south-west monsoon, allowance is made for a falling-off of Rx. 196,000. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and Assam there are smaller deficiencies of Rx. 50,000 and Rx. 14,600: in the former the effect of the famine in diminishing the collections this year has been somewhat greater than was assumed in the estimate of March last: in Assam the decrease is ascribed to the effects of the great earthquake and of floods. In the other Provinces the collections are expected substantially to exceed the Budget Estimates, which were cautiously taken in view of the famine: the larger half, Rx. 38,800, of the increase in Bengal is due to faster progress in the recoveries from landlords and tenants of their share of the cost of the survey charges in Behar, Rx. 68,800 being now expected to be recovered as compared with Rx. 30,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. The excesses are —

	Rx.
Burma	177,100
Punjab	171,300
Central Provinces	70,000
Bombay	53,000
Bengal	65,000

1897-98. Provincial Rates.

97. The increase under Provincial Rates occurs in Bengal, Rx. 66,000,—revaluations are in progress in this Province which have secured an increase in Revenue this year—and in the Punjab Rx. 33,100,—these rates rise proportionately with the Land Revenue in the Punjab. There are decreases of Rx. 28,500 in the Central Provinces and of Rx. 10,400, in Bombay, and smaller variations in the remaining Provinces.

1897-98. Telegraph Revenue.

98. The improvement in the Telegraph Revenue has been unusually large this year: this is attributed to the great use of the telegraph in connection with the frontier operations.

1897-98. Mint Receipts.

99. There have been large tenders of silver for coinage into British dollars, and the mint receipts have consequently been high. The Government of India has, at the request of the Bhopal and Kashmir Durbars, who were anxious to improve their currencies, undertaken to receive Bhopal rupees and Kashmir Chilkies and to coin the bullion in them into Government rupees. The Native State coins are taken over at a rate of exchange rather more favourable to them than the market rate between them and Government rupees, and rupees are issued to the Durbars at those rates. The bullion in them, however, is more than sufficient to coin the number of rupees payable to the Durbars, as our rupee bears a much higher value than that of the silver in it. This excess is brought to account as a gain on coinage.

1897-98. Marine Receipts.

100. Of the increase of Rx. 54,100 under Marine, a rise in the pilotage receipts in Calcutta accounts for Rx. 13,000, and recoveries in connection with the employment of Royal Indian Marine vessels on Imperial services for Rx. 32,600.

1897-98. Decreases of Revenue in India.

101. The improvements above mentioned are partially counterbalanced by decreases in the Revenue in India under some other heads, of which the more important are—

	Rx.
Opium	573,900
Excise	171,800
XXIV.—Exchange	100,000
Salt	109,000

1897-98. Opium Revenue.

102. The price for Bengal Opium taken in the Budget Estimate was R1,075 a chest: the average price realised has been only R1,023 a chest; and the receipts in Bengal fall short of the Estimate by Rx. 200,200.

The Malwa Opium export trade continues to languish. In view of the state of the trade the pass duty was reduced by R100 a chest from October 27, 1897. This has caused a loss of Revenue, as the reduction so far has not had the effect of raising the exports to their former level. There is a decline in the receipts in Bombay of Rx. 374,000.

1897-98. Excise Revenue.

103. The decrease in the Excise Revenue occurs in Madras (Rx. 60,000), Bengal (Rx. 60,000), the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Rx. 50,000). These are ascribed to the famine. There are smaller decreases in Assam, the Central Provinces, and the India Provinces, and small increases in the Punjab, Burma, and Bombay.

1897-98. XXIV.—Exchange.

104. The difficulties in the way of accurately estimating the receipts under the very variable and uncertain head XXIV.—Exchange have been fully stated in previous Financial Statements.

1897-98. Salt.

105. The falling-off under Salt is not a real decrease in Revenue: it occurs in Madras, where the receipts are expected to be less than the Budget Estimate by Rx. 115,200, and is merely a postponement of the realisation of revenue from this year to next, the low price of Government paper inducing a continued resort to the six months' credit option instead of cash payment. The Revised Estimate in Bengal also falls short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 30,400; but this is more than made good by increases of the receipts in the Northern India Salt Department and in Burma.

1897-98. Increases of Expenditure in India.

106. There have been appreciable, though comparatively small, excesses over the Budget Estimates of Expenditure in India under the following heads:—

3.—Land Revenue, in Madras, the Central Provinces, and Bombay, caused by the famine, with plague added in Bombay;

Mint, larger expenditure being necessary to coin into dollars the large amount of silver tendered, and to recoin the Bhopal and Kashmir coins, see paragraph 99;

Police, chiefly in Bombay and Bengal, caused in both Provinces by the famine and the plague; and Major Irrigation, Working Expenses, larger collection charges and greater repairs being entailed by the increase in Revenue and the increased irrigation which earned it.

The more important increases of expenditure in India are—

	Rx.
Army	3,331,400
Famine Relief	1,747,800
State Railways—Working Expenses	271,800
Medical	232,800
Jails	84,700

1897-98. Army Expenditure.

107. The increase in the expenditure on the Army is caused by the field operations on the North-Western Frontier. These are expected to cost in the current year no less than Rx. 3,869,800. But for them there would have been a saving from the Budget Estimates under the head. The only other substantial increases are about 6½ lakhs of rupees in the cost of food caused by the famine, the high prices having lasted somewhat longer than was assumed in the Budget Estimate, and about a lakh, the cost of Jubilee concessions to troops; while the following reductions have occurred:—

	Rx.
A reduction in the payments of Exchange Compensation Allowance, owing to the rise in Exchange	66,500
The saving secured by the despatch to Mombassa of the 27th Bombay Infantry	10,000
The saving secured by the despatch to the Cape of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers in May 1897	42,200
The transfer to the Civil Estimates of the charge for the pay of officers on plague duty	14,700
A saving from the short strength of the Army	12,000
A saving under Camps-of-Exercise, owing to the absence of troops in the field	8,100
The decision not to purchase camels for which a special grant was provided	10,100
A reduction in the charges for Commissariat Establishments—Supplies and Services	190,000
This for the most part is nominal only, representing a transfer to, or a set-off against, the field charges; but a small part of it is secured by a reduction in the price paid for malt liquor under a new contract running from January 1, 1898.
A reduction in the charges of the Remount Department
A smaller number of remounts and young stock than intended has been purchased, and the prices paid for Australian remounts have been lower owing to the rise in exchange, the prices being fixed in sterling	22,700
Savings now expected with reference to the actual expenditure to the end of January, in the provision made for establishments and supplies under the heads "Army and Garrison Staff," "Regimental Pay and Allowances," "Clothing," Barracks," "Medical," "Ordnance," "Miscellaneous Contingencies" and "Volunteers"	129,500

1897-98. Famine Relief.

108. In stating the amounts provided for Famine Relief in the Financial Statement of last March it was said that the difficulty of any accurate forecast was very great, and that experience alone could show whether the estimates of the Local Governments were excessive or insufficient. They have proved sufficient only in Burma, the Punjab, and Bengal; there are considerable excesses in the other Provinces.

The following statement gives the comparison for each Province :—

	Budget Estimate. Rx.	Revised Estimate. Rx.
North-Western Provinces and Oudh .	850,000	1,069,000
Bengal	1,004,800	889,400
Central Provinces . . .	680,000	1,340,000
Bombay	670,300	965,500
Punjab	167,800	125,600
Madras	200,400	928,600
Upper Burma	66,600	62,700
TOTAL .	3,639,900	5,380,800

The amounts in Burma and the Punjab are comparatively small. The Bengal Government had framed its estimate on a more liberal scale than any other Government, and although the relief of distress was prolonged there for the same reason as in other Provinces, the Budget provision proved more than sufficient.

The excess is greatest in Madras. Very soon after the beginning of the year it became apparent that the Local Government had seriously under-estimated the probable extent of the distress in that Province; and expenditure on a much larger scale than assumed in the Budget Estimate became necessary.

In the Central Provinces also the extent to which, and the time over which, relief would be necessary proved greater than was at first anticipated. The people of the Central Provinces had experienced a series of bad seasons before the great famine of 1896-97 began, and their capacity to withstand that great calamity had been much impaired. Owing to this and other causes the relief operations had to be continued on a considerable scale in the Central Provinces for some months after they had practically ceased in most other Provinces. In Bombay also the relief had to be continued on a large scale up to December 1897.

The short delay in the establishment of the south-west monsoon also increased the amount of expenditure in Madras and the Central Provinces; and it is to this cause alone that the excesses in the North-Western Provinces and Bombay may be ascribed.

The famine caused by the failure of the rains in 1896 may be said to have come to an end in December 1897 although relief on a small scale has continued in Bombay till now. The partial failure of the north-east monsoon this cold weather has given rise to fears of another famine on a small scale in some districts of Madras, and there has been some expenditure on famine relief and test-works in that Province in January, February, and March; but the amount is small, under half a lakh.

The figures above relate to the Provinces only. In addition, there is some expenditure brought to account on the "India" books. The Budget Estimate provided Rx. 1,300 for the supervision of relief officers in Native States. The number of officers employed on that work was larger than anticipated: Mr. Higham was also deputed to inquire into the working of famine relief operations in all Provinces; and the Government of India paid the salary of Mr. H. E. M. James when acting as Vice-President of the Charitable Relief Fund. The charges on the "India" books are now expected to amount to Rx. 8,200.

1897-98. State Railway Expenses.

109. The increase in the Working Expenses of State Railways was required to earn the increase of Revenue mentioned in paragraph 94.

1897-98. Medical.

110. The large increase under Medical is caused by the plague. Almost every Local Government has thought it necessary to incur expenditure on measures to guard against the spread of the plague, and where the pestilence has broken out still heavier expense has been necessary to stamp it out. As was to be expected, the cost has been much heavier in Bombay than elsewhere; and that Province accounts for Rx. 208,700 out of the total increase of Rx. 232,800. Nor is the cost of preventive and remedial measures against the plague confined to the one head "Medical." The following table gives an estimate of the cost to the Government under all heads in each Province in 1896-97, 1897-98, and 1898-99; Municipalities and other Local Bodies have, in addition, had to incur considerable expenditure:—

Expenditure connected with plague.

1897-98. Jails.

111. The increase under Jails is a consequence of the famine, the high prices have increased the cost of rations; and the prison population has been large, as is usual in years of scarcity.

1897-98. Decreases of Expenditure in India.

112. In partial set-off against the heavy increases of Expenditure in India above set forth, there are some decreases, of which the more important are—

	Rx.
Opium	289,200
Civil Works	226,100
Guaranteed Railways—Surplus Profits, Land, etc.	157,200
Military Works	143,500
Subsidised Railways, Land, etc.	125,400
Salt	98,700
Forest	69,000
Telegraph	53,300

1897-98. Opium Expenditure.

113. Under Opium, the Budget Estimate, as usual, provided for the expenditure entailed by a normal crop on the area sown with the poppy. The crop was again, for the seventh year in succession, a short one, and the payments will fall short of the estimate by Rx. 289,200.

1897-98. Civil Works.

114. The larger part of the decrease of Rx. 226,100 under Civil Works occurs in the Local section of the Estimates. The total expenditure on Civil Works from Incorporated Local Funds is expected to be less than the Budget Estimate by Rx. 189,900. All Provinces contribute to this, the largest amounts being Bengal Rx. 88,200, Madras Rx. 30,700, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh Rx. 25,100, and Burma Rx. 22,400.

In the Provincial section also, there are savings in most Provinces, the largest being Bombay Rx. 36,700, Madras Rx. 35,300, the Punjab Rx. 38,100 and Burma Rx. 20,700. But the saving in the total Provincial expenditure is reduced to a small amount in consequence of a large excess of Rx. 86,400 in Assam. This excess is due to the great earthquake which wrecked very many buildings and damaged many roads in the Province, and these have to be reconstructed and repaired.

In the Imperial section of the Civil Works Estimate there is an excess of Rx. 35,800. This is caused by the charge under this head for the Bangalore Water-Works. That charge is divided between Military Works and Civil Works in the proportion of 1 to 2: excessive provision was made in the Budget Estimate under the former head and deficient provision under the latter.

It may be convenient to give here an estimate of the total expenditure likely to be caused by the earthquake. It is as follows:—

	1897-98.	1898-99.	TOTAL.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
Railways in Bengal and Assam . .	85,000	80,000	165,000
Other Imperial Expenditure in Bengal and Assam	26,800	24,300	51,100
PROVINCIAL EXPENDITURE—
Bengal	45,700	53,300	99,000
Assam	101,200	105,800	207,000
LOCAL EXPENDITURE—
Assam	3,200	8,700	11,900
TOTAL .	261,900	272,100	534,000

The very large expenditure in Assam from Provincial Revenues being beyond the power of that small Province to bear, the Government of India has sanctioned an assignment from Imperial Revenues of Rx. 160,000, half in 1897-98 and half in 1898-99, to aid the Chief Commissioner in repairing the effects of the great calamity.

1897-98. Guaranteed Railways.

115. The decrease in the payments on account of Guaranteed Railways is due to the falling-off in the traffic receipts of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, which reduces the Company's share of surplus profits, and to the payments for land for the Calicut-Cannanore, Amalner-Jalgaon and the Chalisgaon-Dhulia Railways being less than were anticipated.

1897-98. Military Works Expenditure.

116. A large part (nearly Rx. 80,000 including Exchange) of the reduction in Military Works Expenditure in India (Rx. 143,500) is merely a transfer of expenditure from India to England. The remainder represents the actual saving from the grant: it has been secured partly in consequence of the orders, of which the low balances necessitated the issue, asking all departments to curtail expenditure as much as possible until the month of January, when the period of low balances should be past.

1897-98. Subsidised Railways.

117. The arrangements for starting the construction of the Brahmaputra-Sultanpur, the Mymensingh-Jamalpur, and the Tapti Valley Railways were not completed soon enough to allow of the acquisition of land to the extent provided for in the Budget Estimate and the provision for the Bhagulpore-Bausi-Baidyanath and Tinnevelly-Quilon Railways could not be utilised owing to construction not having been started as was anticipated during the course of the year.

1897-98. Salt Expenditure.

118. The manufacturing charges have been small in the Northern India Salt Department and Bombay, and savings of Rx. 22,300 and Rx. 4,600 are anticipated there. In Bengal the intended preventive establishments have not yet been sanctioned, and a saving of Rx. 10,600 is secured. In Madras the reduction is Rx. 61,200; but of this Rx. 36,400 represent merely a transfer from the Salt to Excise: there is a joint establishment in Madras for the two Departments, and the proportion in which the total should be divided was altered during the year from $\frac{3}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{3}{5}$ and $\frac{2}{5}$.

1897-98. Forest Expenditure.

119. The decrease under Forests is distributed over all the provinces. It represents partly the usual over-estimate by Local Governments of the probable expenditure under this head, and partly the effect of the orders mentioned in paragraph 116.

1897-98. Telegraph Expenditure.

120. The decrease in Telegraph Expenditure is partly the result of the orders just mentioned, and is partly due to the restriction of the Railway construction during the year—itself a consequence of the need which led to those orders—and a smaller mileage of Railway telegraph lines being consequently required.

1897-98. Exchange Compensation Allowances.

121. One cause of saving which affects almost all the Expenditure heads in India, is the rise in the rate of exchange above that assumed for the calculation of the cost of Exchange Compensation Allowances. The average rate taken for this purpose in the Budget Estimate was $14\frac{3}{4}d.$ the rupee: the four quarterly rates with reference to which the Exchange Compensation Allowances have been paid are $15\frac{7}{32}d.$, $14\frac{13}{16}d.$, $15\frac{5}{16}d.$, and $15\frac{15}{32}d.$, yielding an average for the whole year of $15\frac{13}{64}d.$ The consequent saving amounts to Rx. 155,600.

1897-98. Revenue in England.

122. The Revised Estimate of sterling receipts in England does not differ appreciably from the Budget Estimate, the improvement being £19,000, the larger part of which occurs under Interest: the rate of interest obtained on the temporary investment of the cash balances was higher than estimated during a portion of the year.

1897-98. Expenditure in England.

123. The sterling expenditure will exceed the Budget Estimates by £202,500. The chief items in this increase are—

Interest £161,500

Of this, £117,800 is the discount on the loan of £3,500,000; and the remainder is the increased interest charge on the temporary loans on the security of India Bills: the suspension for a time of the sale of Council Bills, and the purchase of drafts for Rx. 1,000,000 on India to strengthen the rupee balances depleted by famine and war expenditure, necessitated the issue of India Bills to the amount of £6,000,000 as compared with £2,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate.

Indo-European Telegraph Payments . . . £37,400

The payments in respect of Revenue exceeded the Budget Estimate, owing to an increase in the homeward traffic and in the percentage carried by the Indo-European route.

Military Works £51,600

There were larger demands for stores, chiefly water pipes: this increase is counterbalanced by a decrease in the expenditure in India, see paragraph 116.

124. The charge for Exchange on net Sterling Expenditure is less than in the Budget Estimate by Rx. 1,488,700. The net Sterling Expenditure is greater by £183,500, and the exchange on this difference at 14·46*d.* the rupee, the rate of the Budget Estimate, is Rx. 121,100. The direct saving in Exchange on sterling transactions from the rise in the rate of exchange from 14·46*d.* to 15·38*d.* the rupee is therefore Rx. 1,609,800. 1897-98. Exchange.

126. The absence of famine and the presence of provision for war on a considerable scale are the two broad features of difference in the Estimates of 1898-99 as compared with those of 1897-98. 1898-99. Main features.

With the exception of Opium, nearly all heads of Revenue show satisfactory progress: the Land Revenue and Provincial Rate collections are expected to be specially high, as the Local Governments hope to realise considerable arrears the collection of which was suspended during the famine.

In Expenditure there is a large reduction, Rx. 3,556,100, under 33.—Famine Relief, while warlike operations require a provision of about Rx. 1,517,600 to which there was nothing corresponding in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, and the recrudescence of the plague necessitates expenditure on preventive and repressive measures, mainly under Medical. Most other heads of Expenditure exhibit moderate increases, the general position having necessitated the closest restriction possible of the grants in the present year.

The rise in the rate of exchange secures a large saving.

A surplus of Rx. 891,400 is expected as compared with a deficit of Rx. 2,464,000 in the Budget Estimate and of Rx. 5,283,100 in the Revised Estimate of 1897-98.

1898-99. Increases of Revenue in India.

127. The more important increases of Revenue in India are—

		Rx.
Land Revenue, including that due to Irrigation		1,953,500
Provincial Rates		238,300
Railways—	Rx.
State, Gross Receipts, Increase	1,359,200	1,153,200
Guaranteed, Net Receipts, Decrease	206,000
Telegraph		144,400
Customs		98,600
Interest		81,200
Post Office		65,900
Major Irrigation, Direct Receipts		63,900

1898-99 Land Revenue and Provincial Rates.

128. The following table shows the distribution of the increases expected under Land Revenue and Provincial Rates:—

	Land Revenue. Increase. Rx.	Provincial Rates. Increase. Rx.
India, General	—2,600	—100
Central Provinces	320,000	5,500
Burma	234,100	5,500
Assam	11,400	—400
Bengal	162,300	79,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	740,400	120,100
Punjab	252,200	33,100
Madras	80,100	—400
Bombay	155,600	—4,000

In the above sums, arrears which the Local Governments intend to collect are included to the following extent.—

	Rx.
Central Provinces	85,200
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	496,500
Punjab	98,600
Bombay	50,000

The Bengal figures include Rx. 75,100 for the recovery from landlords and tenants of their share of the cost of the Survey charges in Behar, compared with Rx. 30,000 in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98. There is another feature of the Bengal Estimate which is worth mentioning. Hitherto the Land Revenue receipts in that Province have been practically stationary, the great bulk of it being permanently settled. But the long term settlements in Orissa having come to an end, Settlement operations have been in progress there for some years· the new assessments are now coming into operation, and an increase of Rx. 40,000 on that account is entered in the Estimate of 1898-99.

The estimates are high in all Provinces, but the Local Governments all expect to realise the amounts entered.

1898-99. Railway Receipts.

129. The estimates of Railway Revenue anticipate some recovery from the temporary depression which diminished Railway receipts during the famine: they have been cautiously framed, and if prospects continue as favourable as they now appear, there is good reason to hope that the actuals of the year will exceed the amount now taken.

1898-99. Telegraph Receipts.

130. The increase in Telegraph Revenue has been unusually large this year, and, as part of it is due to a special cause (see paragraph 98) which will not operate to the same extent next year, it is not considered safe to assume that the improvement will be fully maintained next year. The Estimate accordingly, while higher than the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 144,400, is lower than the Revised Estimate of that year by Rx. 75,100

1898-99. Customs Revenue.

131. The improvement taken under Customs occurs mainly in the export duty on rice and the import duty on cotton goods. Both these items have been specially low this year and last for reasons connected with the famine, the Burma rice having been diverted to India by the high prices, and the ability of the people to pay for cotton goods having been diminished by the pressure of the famine. The Burma rice crop of this cold weather is a very fine one, and it will not be diverted to India: nor will the whole of it be exported in the current year as the exports continue into April and even May, while we may for the purpose of estimates assume an average crop next cold weather, regarding which we as yet of course know nothing. Our information is that a considerable revival in the import of piece goods will take place next year.

1898-99. Interest.

132. The main cause of the increase in the Interest receipts is the increase in the investment of the Currency Department by Rx. 2,000,000 made in December 1896 under Notifications Nos. 5366 and 5367, dated December 18, 1896. The first year's interest on that investment was partially taken against the discount incurred; and the profit will be fully brought to account for the first time in 1898-99. The considerable loans granted during the famine also increase the receipts under this head.

1898-99. Post Office.

133. The increase in Post Office receipts represents the usual annual increase in the Revenue of a progressive department.

1898-99. Irrigation Receipts.

134. The Irrigation Receipts in the Punjab are placed higher than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 96,200: this is, mainly, due to the development of irrigation from the Chenab Canal. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh on the other hand there is a decrease of Rx. 39,200: the estimate of 1897-98 was placed specially high because of the drought.

1898-99. Decreases of Revenue in India.

XXIV.—Exchange.

Opium.

135. Apart from the uncertain head XXIV.—Exchange under which the receipts are taken lower than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 60,000, the only head of Revenue which shews an important decline is Opium. The prices of Bengal opium have declined during the year; the price at the sale this month was only R948 a chest, and the average for the twelve months of this year R1,023. The price for next year has been taken between those two rates at R1,000 a chest. This results in the receipts in Bengal being less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 290,300. As the Malwa export trade still shews no signs of revival, it has also been necessary to estimate for a further decline in the receipts in Bombay, amounting to Rx. 200,200: it is assumed that the number of chests passed for export will be about the same as the number taken for the Budget Estimate of 1897-98: so that this decrease may be ascribed entirely to the reductions in the rate of duty.

1898-99. Decreases of Expenditure in India.

Famine Relief.

136. On the Expenditure side the largest difference between the Estimates of the two years is under 33.—Famine Relief, which shews a reduction of Rx. 3,556,100. The famine had attained large dimensions and was increasing in severity last March, and a large provision was required for the obligatory measures of relief, and the amount which had actually to be spent was still larger. The favourable rains brought by the south-west monsoon of 1897 happily brought to an end the dire distress of the people as well as the necessity for further expenditure by the Government. The cold weather rains have also been generally favourable, and there is a good prospect of magnificent rabi crops in Northern India and of fair crops in the Central Provinces and Bombay, though to this prospect there is one exception in some districts of Madras which depend on the cold weather or north-east monsoon. That was much delayed and in some parts partially failed. The Madras Government consequently anticipates the possibility of having to re-establish relief works in three or four districts, and has provided a sum of Rx. 85,000 for the purpose It cannot yet be said whether the full amount will be required.

1898-99. Other decreases of Expenditure in India.

137. The only other important reductions in Expenditure in India next year are—

Interest charges.

Interest on Debt . . . . Rx. 143,300

This represents chiefly the interest on the difference between the Capital Expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works and the amount of the borrowing in India.

Military Works.

Military Works . . . . Rx. 71,500

This is secured by the decision not to make additional provision for the works required at the recently established outposts on the North-Western Frontier—Chitral, Malakand, Gilgit, Tochi, Samana—and to require the Military Works Department to meet the cost of those works within its fixed grant.

Salt.

Salt . . . . Rx. 50,700

Of this, Madras accounts for Rx. 42,100, due partly to the change in the distribution of establishment charges mentioned above in paragraph 118 and partly to a reduction having been made in the estimates prepared on the same basis as those accepted in previous years, past experience having shewn that they overestimated the requirements. There are also small reductions of about half a lakh each in the expenditure in Bombay and the Northern India Salt Department.

1898-99. Exchange Compensation Allowances.

138. The rate assumed in the Budget Estimate as the average rate, with reference to which Exchange Compensation Allowance will be paid, is 1*s.* 3½*d.* the rupee. As the rate for this purpose in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 was 1*s.* 2¾*d.*, there is a considerable saving under most heads on this item of expenditure, amounting in all to Rx. 235,700.

1898-99. Increases of Expenditure in India.

139. There are a considerable number of increases of expenditure, some of them, like those under Superannuations and Jails, unavoidable, others allowed because the extreme restrictions required last year are no longer necessary. But the only increases of importance are—

		Rx.
34.—Construction of Protective Works	Rx. 668,300	} 994,100
36.—Reduction of Debt	Rs. 325,800
Army		1,114,900
State Railways, Working Expenses		743,200
Railway and Irrigation Interest on Debt . . .		197,800
Civil Works		303,900
Medical		149,800
Major Irrigation, Working Expenses		58,800
Interest on Advances to Railway Companies . .		52,300

1898-99. Protective Railways and Reduction of Debt.

140. The first of these increases represents the amount required to raise the total of the Famine Insurance Grant to Rx. 1,500,000. In 1896-97 and 1897-98 the expenditure on direct famine relief charged under head 33 was so large that there was no room for any charge under the two heads which are used to make up the total of the group of heads included in "Famine Relief and Insurance" to the prescribed amount. In 1898-99, on the other hand, there is fortunately reason to expect that the direct charges for famine relief will be insignificant. The Famine

Expenditure of the last two years necessitates the restoration of the Famine Insurance Grant to its former amount of a crore and a half of rupees. The method of effecting this restoration is to charge under 34.—Construction of Protective Railways as much of the Capital Expenditure of the year on Railways as is incurred on Railways which have been classed as Protective, and to charge the remainder of the balance required to make up Rx. 1,500,000 under 36.—Reduction of Debt.

1898-99. Army Expenditure.

141. The warlike operations on the frontier in which we have been engaged since August last have not yet fully effected their object,—a small section of the tribes having still to complete their final submission and compliance with terms. It was accordingly thought that it might be necessary to continue the operations over a short part of next year, and the estimated cost has been entered in the Estimates: it includes all the terminal charges involved in the return of the troops to cantonments and the breaking-up of the force, as well as some charges incurred but not paid in the concluding months of this year, and amounts to Rx. 1,355,000. In addition, some extra expenditure is involved in keeping the outpost garrisons—from Kohat to the Kurram Valley, in the Tochi Valley, and at Malakand—at a greater strength than ordinary until the frontier has quite settled down: the amount of this is Rx. 160,900.

The only other item involving increase which need be mentioned is that to which the recent decision of Her Majesty's Government to increase the pay of the British soldier gives rise. The increase will have to be given to the soldiers serving in India and paid for from Indian Revenues. The exact terms of the concessions to be made in India are still under discussion. And a round sum of Rx. 200,000 has been entered to provide for the probable cost next year.

Apart from field operations, the Army charges are less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98; the more important items of decrease being—

	Rx.
The fall in prices from the famine level of this year . .	272,600
A saving in the pay of British Troops from the rise in the rate of exchange at which it is issued from 14½d. to 15½d. the rupee	129,500
A saving in Exchange Compensation Allowances consequent on the rise in exchange	98,800
A reduction in the provision required for Ordnance Stores and camp equipage	41,200
The withdrawal of two Native Infantry Regiments from Burma and a reduction in the strength of the Mounted Infantry in that Province	14,800
A saving in the purchases of malt liquor partly owing to a reduction in the price under a new contract . .	29,500
An expected saving in the cost of moving troops and stores and in miscellaneous Commissariat charges . . .	34,500

1898-99. State Railways.

142. The increase in the Working Expenses of State Railways is required to earn the additional receipts taken on the Revenue side: moreover, repairs and renewals were restricted as much as possible this year under the orders mentioned in paragraph 116, and there are also some damages caused by the earthquake to be made good.

1898-99. Railway and Irrigation Interest.

143. The increase under Railway and Irrigation Interest is the interest on the new Capital Expenditure.

1898-99. Civil Works.

144. The increase under Civil Works is due to the fact that the general position allows a larger expenditure on useful works than was possible in March 1897.

1898-99. Medical.

145. The measures to be taken for the repression and the prevention of the spread of plague in all Provinces, but especially in Bombay, account for the considerable increase in Medical expenditure.

1898-99. Irrigation. Working Expenses.

146. The construction every year of new canals and extensions necessarily increases the amount of repair and maintenance charges which, with the cost of collecting the increasing revenue, make up the Working Expenses of Irrigation Works.

1898-99. Interest on Advances to Railway Companies.

147. The increase under this head is mainly due to the charges to the Bengal-Nagpur and Indian Midland Railway Companies of interest on the Capital Expenditure of the extensions of those Railways.

1898-99. Revenue in England.

148. The small increase of £15,300 in the Sterling receipts in England is distributed between Interest receipts—the experience of this year having justified a somewhat higher estimate of the profit derived from temporary investments of the cash balance—and Army receipts, the recoveries of the value of accoutrements, etc., and the subscriptions towards family pensions having increased.

1898-99. Expenditure in England.

149. The Sterling expenditure exceeds the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by £386,300.

Of this, larger Interest payments account for £171,400. The net permanent Sterling borrowing is expected to amount to about £2,600,000. It will also be necessary to renew or replace the full amount of the India Bills for £6,000,000 issued this year (see above paragraph 123). The programme of Railway construction described in last year's Financial Statement, paragraphs 74 to 84, involved borrowing in sterling, but the heavy expenditure this year on famine and war has necessitated a much larger increase than was intended.

The Superannuation and Pension charges, and the Non-effective Army charges shew increases of £41,500 and £44,000 respectively. These increase from year to year with the addition of officers and widows and children to the pension lists.

The Effective Army charges are increased by £71,900, while the payments to the War Office are less by £8,000 and miscellaneous payments by £7,600; the charges of the Indian Troopship Service and for passages otherwise than in troopships are higher by £28,800, and those for stores by £58,700. Of the last item, the sum of £38,200 is for stores for the frontier operations.

The payments of interest on capital deposited by Railway Companies shew an increase of £13,000. This is due to further deposits of capital by the Bengal-Nagpore Railway Company, the East Indian Railway Company, and the Southern Mahratta Railway Company, partly counterbalanced by the reduction on renewal in the rate of interest on debentures of the Indian Midland Railway Company and the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway Company.

1898-99. Exchange.

150. In 1898-99 the charge for Exchange on the net Sterling expenditure is less than in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 by Rx. 1,383,700. The net Sterling expenditure is more than in the Estimate of 1897-98 by £371,000, and the exchange on this difference at 14·46*d.* the rupee is Rx. 244,900. The direct saving from the rise in the rate of exchange from 14·46*d.* to 15·38*d.* the rupee is therefore Rx. 1,628,600.

151. The above figures shew the effect of the famine on the most important of our Revenue heads. In ordinary years the Land Revenue increases from year to year, as resettlements are made and cultivation extended. In the five years ending with 1895-96, the increase had been as shewn in the following table. Though the year 1895-96 was itself a year in which the progress of the Revenue had been retarded by failure of the cold weather rains in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, in the Punjab, and in the Central Provinces, the increase in those particular five years was higher than what we can assume as the normal rate of increase :—

	Increase in five years.	Average annual increase.	Decrease in 1896-97.
	Rx.	Rx.	Rx.
India, General	—4,686	—937	+ 1,760

Bombay	448,381	89,676	481,180
TOTAL	2,268,414	453,682	2,176,322

The last column of the above table shews the decrease in each Province in 1896-97 compared with 1895-96, the total amounting to Rx. 2,176,322. This falling-off represents the amount of remissions, suspensions, and short collections caused by the famine. The loss in 1896-97 is much greater than in 1897-98 because in the former year the suspensions affected both the main instalments in which the Land Revenue is collected, whereas in the latter the plentiful harvests admitted of the collection of the full normal amounts in the second half of the year.

152. When the famine began, the Local Governments at once realised that large suspensions and remissions of Land Revenue were required, but it was not possible or desirable for them to decide at once how much should be finally remitted and how much merely suspended. They delayed the decision on that point till after the famine should have ended, and in some Provinces the question is still under consideration. The amounts finally remitted on account of the famine cannot therefore yet be completely stated. But the amount of those remissions either sanctioned or about to be sanctioned are approximately given below, so far as they are as yet known :—

	Rx.
Central Provinces	187,000
Bengal	20,000
North-Western Provinces and Oudh	640,000
Madras	375,000

153. These sums are a final sacrifice of Revenue made because of the famine. The bulk of the remainder of the loss in the two years will be made good by arrear collections in 1898-99 and subsequent years. The arrear collections which Local Governments intend to make in 1898-99 are set forth in paragraph 128 above.

The expenditure under Land Revenue increases from year to year with the progress of the country and improvements in administration. But the famine has caused a special increase in 1896-97 and 1897-98, establishments being strengthened temporarily to deal with it and the plague, and the lower-paid servants having received compensation for the dearness of provisions.

154. Detailed explanations regarding Revenue will be found in paragraphs 102 and 135, and regarding the Expenditure of 1897-98 in paragraph 113: the estimate of expenditure for next year is, as usual, based on the assumption that there will be a normal crop. The general remarks made in paragraph 166 of the Financial Statement of March last apply to the present estimates also.

155. The anticipation in paragraph 167 of the Financial Statement of March last that the Salt Revenue would recover from the check experienced in 1896-97 because of the famine has been realised. As explained in paragraph 105, the falling-off in the total Revenue this year is not due to the consumption of salt having diminished, but represents only a postponement of Revenue from this year to next.

The issues of Kohat salt have not been so high as they were taken: the stocks cleared before the enhancement of the duty from 8 annas to R2 a Lahori maund (of 102 seers) lasted longer than was expected: the other issues of the Northern India Salt Revenue Department have, however, more than made good this deficiency. Issues of Kohat salt have been resumed in the latter part of the year, and the Budget Estimate assumes that in 1898-99 the former normal quantity of Kohat salt will be issued and duty realised on it at the enhanced rate. It has been decided to abolish the Indus Preventive Line, but at the same time to impose certain restrictions on the conveyance of salt on the river Indus, and to forbid the transport of Kohat salt in quantities in excess of five seers from the right to the left bank of the Indus and on land on the east side of the Indus. As the difference between the duty on Kohat salt and the general duty is now reduced to one rupee a maund, it is believed that those restrictions will be sufficient to prevent any loss of revenue by the displacement of ordinary salt by the lower-taxed Kohat salt, and it is hoped that it will not be necessary to make any further increase in the duty on the latter.

The Revenue for 1898-99 is taken at what is believed with reference to the statistics of past years to be a moderate total. The amount is below the duty on the quantity which may fairly be accepted as the normal consumption of the country at the present time.

156. The Stamp Revenue continues to increase, but the increases in 1896-97 and 1897-98 are very small: this may be connected with the famine and the plague, but it is very difficult indeed to assign specific causes for variations in Stamp Revenue. While it is safe to say that that revenue over a series of years will yield a considerable increase, it is not safe to make that assertion in regard to any one year: the Stamp Revenue has been known to fall off for the whole of India, and more frequently does so in particular provinces. The check to progress now experienced may merely be one of these occasional fluctuations in a direction opposite to the general tendency. But however that may be, it is probable that some revival will occur next year, and a moderate increase has been assumed for the Budget Estimate of 1898-99.

157. The revenue under this, in normal years, specially and steadily progressive head, declined in 1896-97 and again in 1897-98 under the influence of the famine and plague. A recovery is fairly certain next year, and the Budget Estimate for 1898-99 is placed slightly below the level of the Revenue of 1895-96.

The expenditure is increasing moderately from year to year for the improvement of preventive and administrative arrangements.

159. Although the total of the Customs Revenue of the Revised Estimate of 1897-98 exceeds the Budget Estimate only by Rx. 85,500, there are considerable variations in the details. In the import duties there is a decrease under Metals, a larger decrease, Rx. 80,400, under Manufactured Articles and Raw Materials, and a still larger decrease, Rx. 121,200, under Cotton Goods. The last of these was mentioned as possible in paragraph 171 of the last Financial Statement: it is almost certainly due to the famine, the distress having forced the people to forego luxuries in the matter of clothing, and the same cause probably accounts for the first two decreases also. The other heads of imports have yielded generally moderate increases, that under Oils amounting to Rx. 113,200, while a large increase of Rx. 175,000 over the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 and of Rx. 93,719 over the Actuals of 1896-97 occurs under Silver. The net imports of silver have been heavier this year than in any year since 1893-94, the figures being—

	Oz.
1893-94	54,328,973
1894-95	27,040,026
1895-96	27,018,079
1896-97	25,929,088
1897-98 (partly estimated)	39,000,000

The export duty on rice has fallen short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 38,000. In the Budget Estimate some allowance was made for the diversion to India of the part of the Burma rice crop of the cold weather of 1896-97 which remained unexported on April 1, 1897, but not quite enough.

The prospects, as they now appear, justify us in anticipating a considerable increase in the import duty on cotton goods and in the export duty on rice in 1898-99. The import duty on silver is, as usual, estimated moderately, at about 25 lakhs of rupees.

160. The increase in this head of Revenue in 1896-97 was not much, if at all, below the average. But the increase in 1897-98 has been small. This result is probably connected with the famine, though it seems probable that the classes which pay Income Tax have been but little affected by that calamity.

164. The Revenues of the Post Office and Telegraph Departments make satisfactory progress, which entails an increase also in Expenditure. The increase in Telegraph Revenue this year being specially high, and partly due to a temporary cause, the estimate for next year is taken lower than the Revised Estimate of this year.

165. As explained in paragraph 99, the high receipts under Mint this year are due to the large coinage of the British dollar for the Straits and other eastern Settlements and to the recoinage of Bhopal and Kashmir coins. The experience of the last two years having shewn that a larger dollar coinage than was assumed in the Budget Estimate of 1897-98 may be counted on annually, the estimate for next year on that account is placed higher, though not so high as the Revised Estimate of this year; and a small portion of the Bhopal and Kashmir coins remain to be dealt with in 1898-99. But this increase is almost entirely counterbalanced by a decrease in the gain on copper coinage, as the large issues of copper coin have ceased with the famine: see paragraphs 110 and 179 of the Financial Statement for 1897-98. The enormous demand for copper coin raised that receipt to Rx. 137,600 in 1896-97: in the Budget Estimate of this year we took Rx. 50,000, but have reduced it to Rx. 40,000 in the Revised Estimate: in 1898-99 we take Rx. 30,000 only, which is rather below the normal amount of years before the famine.

(a) Includes Upper Burma charges up to 1896-97.

166. Under most of these heads the expenditure has been increased in 1896-97 and 1897-98 by the famine; and in 1897-98 and 1898-99 the plague causes a considerable increase specially under Medical.

167. On the other hand, the rise in exchange reduces the charges for Exchange Compensation Allowance.

168. The estimates under Political include provision for the political charges connected with the operations on the North-Western Frontier, and for the Burma-China Boundary Commission.

170. These charges have been fully explained in other parts of this Statement. But, as has appeared from the remarks under many heads, the charges entered under the head 33.—Famine Relief do not cover nearly the whole of the loss which the famine has caused: there have been also losses of revenue and increases of expenditure under ordinary heads. And this is a convenient place to bring these various items together. It is impossible to give exact figures: for example, though we know that Excise Revenues have been reduced by the famine, no one can say exactly how much of the actual reduction of revenue was due to famine and how much to other causes: it must therefore be remembered that the amounts named below are merely approximate estimates. The following table gives the best estimates that can be made for the two years:—

The suspensions of Land Revenue and Provincial Rates have not been included in the estimate of loss of revenue above shewn, as, though their effect was to reduce the revenue in the two years, they will not be a final loss, as it is intended to collect them in 1898-99 and subsequent years so far as they may prove to be recoverable: when collected, they will increase the revenue of future years. They amount to Rx. 1,476,600 in 1896-97 and to Rx. 641,000 in 1897-98.

171. The Revised Estimate of net receipts on State Railways exceeds the Budget Estimate for 1897-98 by Rx. 699,500. This increase is due to the large increases on the East Indian Railway and North-Western Railway, while on the Rajputana-Malwa Railway there was a considerable falling-off.

The small decrease in the Interest charges in India is due to the restriction of outlay mentioned below in paragraph 177, while that in the sterling Interest charges occurs on the capital deposited by Companies and is due to additional capital not being raised as early as was expected. The further rise in the rate of exchange causes a considerable saving in the Exchange on the sterling charges, thus making the Net Result considerably better than in the Budget Estimate.

In 1898-99 the net receipts from State Railways are estimated at only Rx. 83,500 lower than the Revised Estimate for 1897-98, the decrease is partly due to the movements of food-grains on the East Indian Railway and to military traffic in the North-Western Railway being expected to be much less next year and partly to working expenses being expected to be much higher next year owing to restricted expenditure this year on renewals of rolling-stock and other works and to the increase in prices of stores in England. The increase in Interest charges occurs chiefly under India and is due to the progress of capital outlay.

The falling-off in the net traffic receipts of Guaranteed Railways is due to the plague and famine having completely disorganised the traffic to Bombay over both the Great Indian Peninsula and Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railways.

The poorness of the net results of the Revenue Account is, as explained last year, due to the prevalence of scarcity and plague, and though some return of prosperity is to be expected next year, it is not considered safe to anticipate a full return to the more favourable results of former years.

172. The increase in the receipts from Major Works in 1897-98 is due chiefly to the large demand for canal water caused by the drought; the small increase in the receipts from Minor Works is due to the same cause. The increase in the Punjab is, however, due to some extent to the development of irrigation from the Chenab Canal, the receipts from which have now risen to Rx. 208,800, being about double the amount realised in 1895-96. The Budget Estimate for 1898-99 anticipates a return to normal conditions. A further increase of Rx. 38,200 will be realised on the Chenab Canal. The increase of irrigation in 1897-98 necessitated an increase in the charges for the collection of the revenue as well as in the charges for the maintenance and repairs of canals. The increase in the working expenses of 1898-99 is mainly due to provision having been made for the maintenance of additional lengths of canals to be opened out for irrigation.

173. The financial results obtained during 1895-96 and 1896-97 from Irrigation Works, for which Capital and Revenue Accounts are kept, are given below:—

174. The expenditure during 1897-98 against the grant placed at the disposal of the Military Department for expenditure on Military Works is expected to fall short of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 64,400.

The increase in 1897-98 over the Budget Estimate for Imperial Civil Works is due to larger outlay on the Bangalore Water-works.

The expenditure on Imperial and Provincial Civil Works in 1898-99 is higher than the Budget Estimate of 1897-98, owing to the grants having been specially restricted last March.

Under Local the expenditure in 1897-98 is below the Budget Estimate, owing partly to restriction of expenditure in Bengal (88,200) and partly to the expenditure in other Provinces being less than was anticipated when the Budget Estimate was framed.

Section V.—Capital Expenditure on Public Works not charged against Revenue.

177. In paragraph 193 of the Financial Statement for March 1897 it was explained that the Secretary of State had agreed to a programme for the construction of Railways in India during the three years 1896-97, 1897-98, and 1898-99, which involved the expenditure of 29⅝ crores of rupees, including the extensions to be carried out by the Guaranteed Railway Companies, and the manner in which the expenditure was to be provided was also stated.

It was not at that time contemplated that any expenditure would be incurred in 1897-98 on the extensions to be carried out by the Guaranteed Companies, and the whole of the provision for these lines was set down against 1898-99.

In addition to the expenditure within the programme above referred to, it was anticipated that Branch Line Companies and Companies outside the accounts of the Government of India would incur expenditure which would bring the total outlay of the year 1897-98, after including outlay on Irrigation Works, up to a figure in excess of 14 crores of rupees.

The programme for 1897-98 for all State Railways in India was fixed at Rx. 10,130,000, and it was proposed to provide this sum thus:—

	Rx.
From Imperial funds	6,500,700
Capital of Indian Railway Companies	3,629,300

and it was to be expended—

By State agency	3,324,500
By the agency of Companies	6,805,500

It was, however, found necessary during the course of the year to restrict expenditure on the construction of Railways, as the famine and war expenditure threatened to reduce the cash balances to a dangerous extent. A revised forecast was accordingly prepared and submitted to the Secretary of State, in which, while retaining the limit of 29⅔ crores as sanctioned by the Secretary of State in his Despatch No. 1 (Financial), dated 7th January 1897, for expenditure on Railways during the three years 1896-97 to 1898-99, provision to the extent of Rx. 9,130,000, or Rx. 1,000,000 less than the Budget provision, was made for expenditure on the construction of Railways during 1897-98. This sum was distributed as under :—

	Rx.
Imperial funds	5,301,800
Capital account of Indian Railway Companies	3,828,200
TOTAL	9,130,000

178. Since the preparation of this forecast a sum of Rx. 8,400 has been transferred to head 50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements, and a sum of Rx. 20,000 has also been deducted from the total grant to provide for the proposed loan to the Cooch Behar State for expenditure on the Santrabari extension—leaving the existing grant for expenditure on construction of Railways at Rx. 9,101,600.

179. It has not, however, been found possible, owing to the disturbance of working arrangements caused by the suspension of expenditure in the middle of the year, to strikes in England and other reasons, to work up even to this reduced amount, and in the Revised Estimates for Capital Expenditure on Railways during 1897-98 the total expenditure of the year, as compared with the Rx. 9,130,000 provided in the revised forecast, amounts to—

	Rx.
Imperial funds—
48.—State Railways—Construction	3,903,400
50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements	8,400
East Indian Railway Company's Debentures	980,700
Capital of Indian Railway Companies, including the loan for the Cooch Behar State Railway	3,505,600
Guaranteed Railway Extensions	16,300

or less by Rx. 715,600 than the amount of the reduced grant available. This amount has been transferred for expenditure during the ensuing financial year as explained further on.

In addition to the above sum, the Branch Lines Companies and the Companies whose accounts are outside the Government accounts are expected to spend during the year Rx. 2,160,200, making a total of Rx. 10,574,600 for all Railways in India.

180. As regards 1898-99, it was agreed with the concurrence of the Secretary of State that the amount provided in the revised forecast for expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works should be fixed at Rx. 10,871,300 instead of at the balance of the programme of 29⅔ crores as originally proposed, and of this amount Rx. 6,646,300 is to be provided from Imperial funds, Rx. 3,475,000 against the Capital account of Indian Railway Companies, and Rx. 750,000 against Capital to be raised by the Guaranteed Railway Companies.

It was subsequently agreed that if the total final grant as passed in the final Revised Estimate was less than the reduced grant of Rx. 9,130,000 available for expenditure during 1897-98, the difference might be added to the above sum of Rx. 10,871,300 and utilised for expenditure on the construction of Railways during 1898-99. This difference as stated above amounts to Rx. 715,600, and the total amount available for expenditure on Railways and Irrigation Works, for the latter of which a grant of Rx. 750,000 has been provided, thus becomes Rx. 11,586,900. Funds to meet the expenditure on the jetties at Chittagong under the head 50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements have also been provided from this sum, which has been distributed for expenditure as under:—

	Rx.
48.—State Railways—Construction	4,951,300
49.—Irrigation	750,000
50.—Miscellaneous Public Improvements	48,000
34.—Construction of Protective Railways	668,300
Capital of Indian Railway Companies	3,475,000
Guaranteed Railway Extensions	750,000
East Indian Railway Company's Debentures	944,300
	11,586,900

In addition to the above, further capital expenditure will also be incurred in 1898-99 by Branch Line Companies and other Companies, whose accounts are outside the Government accounts, to the extent of Rx. 2,360,700 as under:—

	Rx.
Branch Line Companies—
Ahmedabad-Parantij, Brahmaputra-Sultanpur, Hardwar-Dehra, Mymensingh-Jamalpur, South Behar, and Tapti Valley Railways	1,515,700
Outside the Government Accounts—
Southern Punjab	200,400
Bengal and North-Western Railway Extensions	620,400
Segowlie-Raksaul	4,200
Nilgiri	20,000
TOTAL	2,360,700

The total of the programme for Capital Expenditure on Railways, Irrigation Works, and Miscellaneous Public Improvements in 1898-99 accordingly amounts to nearly 14 crores of rupees.

48.—STATE RAILWAYS—CONSTRUCTION.

181. The Budget grant for 1896-97 amounted to Rx. 5,980,200 as under:—

Leaving for Railways under 48 .	3,819,900

against which the actual expenditure incurred amounted to Rx. 4,243,976, thus exceeding the Revised Estimate by Rx. 424,076 and falling short of the Budget provision by Rx. 1,736,224. Of moneys placed at his disposal up to 30th November 1896 (date of despatch of indents from India), the Secretary of State was unable to spend £8,357, which sum, with exchange and charges upon it, amounted to Rx. 13,949.

183. The amounts provided for Railway Construction this year and next are, as already stated, Revised Estimate, 1897-98, Rx. 3,903,400, and Budget Estimate, 1898-99, Rx. 5,619,600, including in the latter figure provision to the extent of Rx. 668,300 under the head 34.—Construction of Protective Railways. The difference of Rx. 57,200 between the Budget and Revised Estimates is due mainly to the recovery of the cost of watercourses constructed on behalf of the landholders on the Chenab Canal and to the value of the surplus stock of the Dehri Workshop of the Sone Canal having been transferred from this head to Provincial. The Budget Estimate for 1898-99 provides Rx. 50,000 for the Jhelum Canal to be commenced next year, and Rx. 110,000 for the Mandalay Canal which will be in active progress.

187. The Budget Estimate of Sterling Ways and Means was seriously affected by the events in India which rendered necessary the temporary suspension of the sale of Council Bills and the purchase of drafts on India by the Secretary of State. In the early months of the year the Revenue in India fell below the anticipations of last March: the delay in the establishment of the monsoon and the other causes mentioned in paragraphs 91 and 108 largely increased the expenditure on famine relief; and the occurrences on the North-Western Frontier 1897-98. General Summary.

necessitated field operations on a considerable scale. These unforeseen demands were beyond the power of the Indian cash balances to meet without a diminution in other demands on them. The Secretary of State decided to give the necessary help by the suspension of the sales of Council Bills, and this suspension was announced on the 1st of September for not less than ten weeks from the 8th of September 1897. The Secretary of State at the same time remitted to India a crore of rupees by means of bank drafts. The suspension of Council Bills was continued for a further period of 4 weeks, and the sale was resumed on December 15, after a total intermission of 14 weeks. It is now estimated that the total drawings of the Secretary of State in 1897-98 will be £9,378,000 against £13,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. The purchase of the drafts on India for one crore cost £669,400, making a net deficiency in the estimate of drawings upon India of £4,291,400. This deficiency is met chiefly by temporary loans to the extent of a net sum of £4,000,000. There are other differences from estimates in the transactions of the year, but these require no special notice here.

1897-98. Sterling Loans.

188. In accordance with the intention announced in paragraph 206 of the last Financial Statement, India Stock for £3,500,000 was issued in May 1897. The new stock was issued at 2½ per cent: the state of the money market was not favourable at the time, and the loan was raised at a discount of £3 4*s*. 1*d*. per cent. The total amount tendered was £13,779,800 and the minimum rate of accepted tenders was £96 13*s*.

1897-98. Temporary Debt.

189. In March last it was the intention to raise £2,000,000 in 1897-98 by means of India Bills, of which the sum of £1,000,000 was required to replace a like amount of Bills issued in the year 1896-97; but in consequence of the aid given to the Indian cash balances, it has been necessary to incur sterling debt in excess of the Budget Estimate to the extent of £4,000,000. India Bills have consequently been issued for £6,000,000 instead of for the £2,000,000 entered in the Budget Estimate. Of these, £2,500,000 were issued for 12 months on the 18th of September 1897, £2,500,000 for 6 months on the 3rd of December 1897, and £1,000,000 for 6 months on the 23rd of January 1898. The results of the several temporary loans have been as follows:—

Month of issue.	Amount tendered.	Amount accepted.	Average rate of interest per cent per annum.
	£	£	£	s.	d.
September 1897 . . .	7,180,000	2,500,000	2	11	8
December ,, . . .	12,330,000	2,500,000	2	15	2
January 1898 . . .	9,770,000	1,000,000	2	4	5

Capital of Railway Companies.

190. The net issues to Railway Companies during 1897-98 were taken in the Budget Estimates at £317,700; it is now estimated that they will amount to £432,500. The following are the usual details:—

	Budget. £	Revised. £
RECEIPTS.
Subscribed capital—
(a) State Lines	1,950,000	992,500
(b) Guaranteed Lines	2,541,400	198,000
Miscellaneous	3,000	3,900
TOTAL .	4,494,400	1,194,400
ISSUES.
For discharge of debentures—
(a) State Railways	1,000,000	12,500
(b) Guaranteed Lines	1,441,400	11,600
For Stores, Establishment Charges, etc.—
(a) State Railways	1,169,500	837,900
(b) Guaranteed Lines	1,201,200	764,900
TOTAL .	4,812,100	1,626,900

191. The large decrease in the amounts of new capital is due chiefly to the fact that Railway Companies' debentures were renewed instead of being replaced by fresh capital. Most of the Companies required for stores, establishment charges, etc., much less than was estimated at the beginning of the year, but the new funds raised were on the whole still less, and in the net result £114,800 more are likely to be paid in the year than originally estimated. Railway Companies' Remittances.

192. The following are the details of remittance transactions of Railway Companies working State lines in India to which advances of funds are made in England for the purchase of stores, etc., against recoveries in India by debit to the Revenue Account :—

	Budget.	Revised.
Advances for purchase of Stores—
East Indian Railway	600,000	640,400
Rajputana-Malwa	40,000	40,700
South Indian Railway	71,000	38,800
Bengal and North-Western Railway	192,000	192,200
	903,000	912,100
East Indian Railway Debentures	400,000	592,500
Transfer Fees, etc.	2,500	3,400
	402,500	595,900
Net Remittance from India	500,500	316,200

The total advances are not expected to vary materially from the Budget Estimate. The East Indian Railway Company during the year will issue a larger amount of debentures than intended.

193. The reduction in the net payments on account of family and other remittances of £40,100 is the result of a number of large differences. There is an increase in the receipts of £24,000 owing to the recovery from Her Majesty's Imperial Government of expenses and payments connected with the Suakin and Mombassa Expeditions, and £38,000 more are expected to be paid in England in repayment of advances made in India on account of emigration of coolies and other Imperial services. Against these larger receipts there is an increase in the payments for stores chargeable to Provincial and Local Funds and Native States in India of £129,900, while there are decreases of £108,000 in the net provision for payments in England on account of family remittances, remittances by the Administrator General, etc., and other miscellaneous remittances from India. Family and other Remittances.

194. The net disbursements at the Home Treasury in 1898-99, excluding Loans and Council Bills, are estimated at £18,540,700. Under ordinary circumstances this amount should be realised by the sale of Council Bills. But owing to the heavy expenditure on Railways which is contemplated in India in 1898-99, it will not be possible for the Government of India to supply by means of Council Bills more than about £16,000,000, and this amount has accordingly been entered in the Estimates as the probable drawings of the Secretary of State. It is proposed to provide the balance of the estimated disbursements by the issue of India Stock. 1898-99. Home Treasury. Ways and Means.

Notice has been given by the Secretary of State for the discharge of £384,700, Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway 4 per cent Debentures, on the 6th of May next, and £3,000,000, India Debentures bearing interest at 3½ per cent will expire on August 16, 1898. In order to discharge this amount of debt, and to meet the portion of the net disbursements not covered by the sales of Council Bills, the Secretary of State proposes to issue £6,000,000 of India Stock in 1898-99. It is also proposed to replace £6,000,000 India Bills, falling due in 1898-99, by a like amount of Bills raised in the year.

According to the programme now announced, the net disbursements of the Home Treasury will be met, in the year 1898-99, by the sale of Bills on India of £16,000,000 and by a net addition to the permanent debt of £2,615,300.

195. It should be understood that in stating the present intentions of the Secretary of State no sort of pledge is given that he will adhere to the programme.

1897-98. General Summary.

197. In accordance with the usual practice, the Estimate of Ways and Means of the Government of India for 1897-98 placed at the disposal of the Secretary of State the whole of the estimated excess of Treasury receipts up to December 1897. In the earlier months of the financial year the Revenue fell below the anticipations of the Budget Estimate, larger expenditure on famine relief and larger loans to cultivators in famine-stricken districts became necessary; and the disturbances on the North-Western Frontier involved us in a considerable war expenditure. It was also decided in view of the state of the money market to reduce the amount of the rupee loan from Rx. 4,000,000 to Rx. 3,000,000. The steps taken to meet the deficiency in cash balances to which these causes gave rise were: first, the reduction of the expenditure on Railway Construction by Rx. 1,000,000 · second, the postponement till January 1898 of all other expenditure which could be postponed third, the stoppage of the sale of Council Bills for 14 weeks from September 8 to December 15, and, fourth, the remittance by the Secretary of State to India of one crore of rupees by means of Bank drafts.

The excess of Revenue in India over the Expenditure charged against it is expected to be less than the amount taken in the Budget Estimate by Rx. 4,124,300; the Savings Bank transactions are expected to cause a net withdrawal from the Treasury of Rx. 400,500 instead of a net receipt of Rx. 428,000 entered in the Budget Estimate, the amount of the public loan was reduced by Rx. 1,000,000, and the net amount of loans to Municipalities, etc., will exceed that estimate by Rx. 386,300. The total diminution of the cash balances under the three heads mentioned thus amounts to Rx. 6,339,100. As a set-off against this large deficiency the payments of Council Bills will be Rx. 6,945,500 less than the Budget Estimate, Rx. 1,000,000 was received by remittance from England, and the reduction in expenditure not charged to Revenue will be Rx. 1,488,000. The year is now expected to close with a cash balance of Rx. 16,722,352, being in excess of the Budget Estimate by Rx. 3,400,642.

198. As the Revenue Account for 1898-99 now made up closes with a surplus, it is necessary for the Government of India to provide only for the Capital Expenditure of the year not charged to Revenue by means of new loans. The total estimate of Capital Expenditure not charged to Revenue amounts to Rx. 5,749,300. In addition to this we have undertaken to advance in 1898-99 Rx. 1,380,100 to the Indian Midland and Bengal-Nagpur Railway Companies for expenditure on new extensions. The total of the Government outlay and the advances to the Companies mentioned amounts to Rx. 7,129,400. This demand we propose to meet by a new rupee loan of Rx. 3,000,000, a net addition to the permanent debt in England of £2,615,300, and a small reduction in the Indian cash balances. 1898-99. Main features.

199. It was announced in paragraph 214 of the last Financial Statement that a new loan of Rx. 4,000,000 would be raised in India in 1898-99. But in the current year the available amount of loanable capital in the Indian market was comparatively small. It was accordingly decided to issue a loan of Rx. 3,000,000 only at 3½ per cent per annum. After the successful conversion in 1896-97 of the unguaranteed 3½ per cent loans into 3 per cents, the Government had intended to raise its future rupee loans at 3 per cent; but in view of the peculiar circumstances of the current year, it was decided to raise the loan of the year at 3½ per cent. Rupee Loan of 1897-98.

The loan of the current year was issued on July 19, 1897, and tenders for it were received on August 16. The unfavourable state of the money market at the time affected the result, and the loan was raised at a discount of R1-10-9 per cent.

200. It is the present intention of the Government of India to raise a new rupee loan in India of Rx. 3,000,000 in 1898-99, but this announcement is made with the usual reservation, and full liberty is reserved, as usual, to alter the programme, as now announced, to any extent that may be considered desirable. New Rupee Loan.

Savings Banks, etc.

The following table gives the details of the transactions of Savings Banks during the last few years and the estimated transactions for 1896-97 and 1897-98 :—

Year.	Net additions to deposits, cash.	Interest.	Total addition.
1889-90	—362,900	272,200	—90,700
1890-91	250,700	279,700	530,400
1891-92	517,900	306,200	824,100
1892-93	548,900	339,400	888,300
1893-94	179,900	368,000	547,900
1894-95	—84,500	297,000	212,500
1895-96	247,700	338,500	586,200
1896-97	—581,100	346,600	—234,500
1897-98, Budget	78,000	350,000	428,000
1897-98, Revised	—727,800	327,300	—400,500
1898-99, Budget	156,700	327,500	484,200

The year 1897-98 has been another year of heavy withdrawals of Savings Bank deposits. As in the year 1896-97, the withdrawals are attributable directly to the high price of food-grains and the prevalence of distress. The Budget Estimate of 1898-99 allows for a comparatively small addition to the net deposits, and with the return of normal conditions and general prosperity the result is likely to be much better than the estimate.

Loans by Government.

201. The net issues on account of loans by the Government to Municipalities, etc., in 1897-98 are now expected to be Rx. 631,700 against Rx. 245,400 entered in the Budget Estimate—an increase of Rx. 386,300. This increase is the difference between the increases in the gross advances of Rx. 691,300 and in the recoveries of Rx. 305,000. Nearly the whole of the increase in gross advances represents additional loans to agriculturists and others in districts affected by famine and scarcity. According to the Budget Estimates of 1898-99, the loan transactions of the year will result in a net receipt of Rx. 62,200 instead of a net issue as in past years. This result is not due to any extensive curtailment of the loans by the Local Governments, but to the fact that large recoveries are expected in 1898-99 of the heavy loans to cultivators and others in the current and past year. The following is a comparison of the gross recoveries and issues for several years :—

	Issues.	Recoveries.
1894-95	686,806	512,267
1895-96	744,789	506,246
1896-97	1,337,194	542,638
1897-98, Revised	1,456,000	824,300
1898-99, Budget	797,600	859,800

The estimates for next year provide for normal requirements for advances to agriculturists and others, and the Government of India, I am glad to say, have been able to pass with little change the proposals of the Local Governments for loans to Municipalities and other Local Bodies for specified works of public improvement.

Cash Balance.

202. The year 1898-99 is estimated to close with a cash balance in the Indian Treasuries of Rx. 16,208,952, which is less than the opening balance of the year by Rx. 513,400.

FIELD OPERATIONS.

TIRAH.

No. 304.—The Right Hon'ble the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant General in India, submitting a despatch from Colonel G. L. R. Richardson, C.I.E., 18th Bengal Lancers, describing the operations of the flying column, Kohat Field Force, from 20th August to 1st October, 1897.

From MAJOR-GENERAL G. DEC. MORTON, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department,—(No. 792-F, dated Fort William, the 1st March, 1898.)

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward, for the information of the Government of India, the accompanying letter* from the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces, Punjab, transmitting a report from Colonel G. L. R. Richardson, C.I.E., 18th Bengal Lancers, describing the operations of the flying column under his command from the 20th August to 1st October 1897.

* No. 927-A, dated 11th February, 1898.

2. His Excellency endorses the commendatory remarks made by the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces, Punjab, in paragraph 2 of his transmitting letter, and recommends that the report may be treated as a despatch and published in the Gazette of India.

From LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR G. B. WOLSELEY, K.C.B., Commanding the Forces, Punjab, to the Adjutant-General in India,—(No. 927-A, dated Rawal Pindi, the 11th February, 1898).

I have the honour to forward for the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, a letter from Colonel G. L. R. Richardson, commanding 18th Bengal Lancers, submitting a report on the operations conducted by him with the Flying Column, Kohat Field Force, from 20th August to 1st October 1897.

2. In recording my approval of the operations of the column, I desire to bring to notice, for His Excellency's favourable consideration, the good and prompt work of Colonel Richardson and all under his command, especially Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Abbott, commanding the 15th Sikhs.

From COLONEL G. L. R. RICHARDSON, C.I.E., Commanding 18th Bengal Lancers and the Flying Column, Kohat Field Force, to the Deputy Adjutant-General, Punjab Command,—(No. 18, dated Shinawari, the 28th January 1898).

For the information of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief I have the honour to submit a report on the operations conducted by me with the Flying Column, Kohat Field Force, extending from the 20th August 1897 to the 1st October 1897.

2. Had Major-General Yeatman-Biggs been alive I should, of course, have submitted this report through him, but owing to his unfortunate death I trust that the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Punjab will kindly forward the report with such remarks as he may think fit.

From COLONEL G. L. R. RICHARDSON, C.I.E., 18th Bengal Lancers, and Commanding Flying Column, Kurram Valley, to the Deputy Adjutant-General, Punjab Command (dated Camp Shinawari, the 28th January, 1898).

For the information of the Lieutenant-General Commanding, Punjab, I have the honour to report that I assumed command at Kohat on the 20th August, 1897.

2. On the 20th August, owing to urgent telegraphic information from the officer on special duty in Kurram, I considered it necessary to form a flying column for prompt action in the Kurram Valley. The Deputy Commissioner, Kohat, agreeing with me, I submitted my plans and general dispositions for the approval of the Lieutenant-General Commanding.

3. Sanction being accorded on 21st August, I concentrated the column, marginally noted, at Hangu, and assumed command of the Column, with Captain Kennedy, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, as my Staff Officer.

18th Bengal Lancers.
2 Squadrons, 3rd Punjab Cavalry.
4 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
5th Punjab Infantry.
15th Sikhs.

4. I continued to receive disquieting reports from Sadda and Para Chinar. My intention was to move the column higher up the valley, towards Doaba and Surzai, where possibly I could better support the Samana and Upper Kurram. Major-General Yeatman-Biggs, who had in the meanwhile assumed command at Kohat, preferred my remaining at Hangu and issued orders to that effect.

5. On the 25th August I proceeded with two guns of No. 2 Derajat Mountain Battery and the 5th Punjab Infantry to put a convoy of ammunition into Fort Lockhart. The route taken was by Pat Darband and Dhar. No opposition was offered, and there were no difficulties on the road.

6. On the 27th August I saw a large tribal gathering, reported to be Orakzais, with several standards, massed on the Samana Ridge, in the vicinity of the Laka Post, garrisoned by local levies, and whose position appeared to me to be one requiring immediate action on my part. I at once ordered the force marginally noted under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott, 15th Sikhs, to move out to the relief of the Laka garrison. At mid-day the little force marched out, but at 1 P.M., as the number of standards on the ridge appeared to be increasing, I took a half-battalion, 5th Punjab Infantry, and moved to the support of Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott. About 3 P.M. I could see that Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott's force had crowned the ridge, and at 4 P.M. received the following helio from top: "Laka relieved; am taking garrison with me. Saifuldarra hard pressed; an enemy in force between. Will move to their relief directly." As Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott's force advanced along the ridge, I kept along the base, on his left flank, with the object of possibly assisting him. About 7 P.M. I heard heavy firing in the direction of the Saifuldarra gorge, and was fortunate enough to meet the head of Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott's force coming down the gorge. I was then excellently placed to cover the retirement with a half battalion of the 5th Punjab Infantry under Lieutenant-Colonel Jameson.

Half Squad., 3rd Punjab Cavalry.
2 Guns (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
15ht Sikhs.
Half Battalion, 5th Punjab Infantry.

7. The enemy followed up the retirement for a considerable distance with great vigour, but were well held in check by the rear-guard,—5th Punjab Infantry. Concentrating the entire force on the Hangu road I marched back to camp, reaching Hangu about 10 P.M., Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott reporting to me that he had successfully relieved the posts of Laka and Saifuldarra, and brought down the garrisons. That night both posts were dismantled and burnt by the Orakzais.

8. I cannot speak too highly of the able manner in which Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott handled his small force. The fact that this force, in the middle of an August day, captured the Samana Ridge, relieved Laka and Saifuldarra, and fought a rear-guard action home, with the loss of 1 sepoy killed, 1 wounded, 1 follower killed, 1 wounded, testifies to the skill with which the operation was conducted.

9. On the 29th August the Hangu Post was largely re-inforced, which permitted my despatching a force, strength vide margin, under Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott, in the direction of Doaba, reported unsettled and mischievous.

1 Squad., 18th Bengal Lancers.
2 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
15th Sikhs.
Half Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.

10. Major-General Yeatman-Biggs arrived at Hangu on the 31st August and assumed command, dividing the troops into two brigades. I was allotted the 1st Brigade, consisting of the troops marginally noted.

18th Bengal Lancers.
4 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
15th Sikhs.
5th Punjab Infantry.
1-3rd Gurkhas.
Half Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.
No. 42 Native Field Hospital.

11. On the 1st September Major-General Yeatman-Biggs detailed me to form my brigade into a flying column and push on with the greatest possible haste to the relief of Sadda and Para Chinar, 70 miles distant, aud reported to be in peril and in danger of being attacked on the 3rd September. The disposition of my flying column on the 1st September stood as follows.

Under Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Abbott (15th Sikhs), at Doaba :—

1 Squad., 18th Bengal Lancers.
2 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
15th Sikhs.
Half Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.

Under Colonel G. L. R. Richardson at Hangu :—

3 Squads., 18th Bengal Lancers.
2 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
5th Punjab Infantry.
1-3rd Gurkhas.
No. 42 Native Field Hospital.

12. At mid-day, on the 1st September, I marched out of Hangu for Doaba. The heat was intense, but the gallant officers and men under my command were not to be denied, and marched throughout a desperately hot day, on an open plain, with very little water and absolutely no shade, making Doaba, distant 22 miles, at 10-30 P.M. I had in the meanwhile sent on orders to Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott to push on towards Sadda. It appears that Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott on approaching Doaba the day previously had been opposed; the advanced squadron, 18th Bengal Lancers, under Captain Chesney, was engaged, and killed three of the enemy.

13. On the 2nd September finding the country round Doaba unsettled, I dropped the 1-3rd Gurkhas, under Lieutenant-Colonel Pulley, with orders to remain at Doaba and keep the road open. At 4 A.M. I moved forward with three squadrons, 18th Bengal Lancers, under Captain Eardley-Wilmot, towards Thal, distant 13 miles, leaving orders for Lieutenant-Colonel Jameson, 5th Punjab Infantry, to escort the guns and Native Field Hospital into Thal during the day.

14. At Thal I found Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott with his force, and by mid-day the whole of my flying column was concentrated, with the exception of the 1-3rd Gurkhas at Doaba.

15. During the temporary halt at Thal some men, subsequently reported to be residents of Thal, fired on the 18th Bengal Lancers while watering in the Kurram River. The regiment quickly mounted and gave pursuit; the enemy had a long start, and the ground was very strong, and intersected with ravines; but I am glad to say that the cavalry were fortunate enough to inflict a punishment of five killed and one wounded* on the raiders—a most excellent deterrent against future misdemeanours, and greatly steadied the country.

* 14 Prisoners.

16. At 6-45 P.M. the same day the force marginally noted left Thal with orders to make Sadda, distant 34 miles, the next day if possible, under Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott.

2 Guns, No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
15th Sikhs.
Half Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.

17. On the 3rd September I moved with four squadrons of the 18th Bengal Lancers, at day-break, and marched as far as Alazai, distant 20 miles, when, finding Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott had moved on, I halted and continued my march towards Sadda early on the 4th September, reaching Sadda about 10 A.M., which place Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott had arrived at at 6-30 P.M. on the 3rd.

18. It was very apparent that the rapid and unexpected approach of the flying column had completely demoralized the enemy, as the tribal gathering, which so recently menaced Upper Kurram, had completely dispersed. I therefore sent orders back to the rest of my. column not to needlessly hurry up.

19. I venture to record the fact that the flying column under my command covered as nearly as possible 70 miles in 70 hours, while the advanced portion under Lieutenant-Colonel Abbott covered the last 34 miles in 23½ hours.

20. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was good enough to record his approval of the performance of the column under my command, which I had much pleasure in communicating to the officers and men composing my column.

21. At Sadda I utilised the garrison to prepare an entrenched position on a plateau north-east of Sadda and about one mile south-west of the Karmanna Darra.

22. On the night of the 16th-17th September, about 10-30 P.M., the camp was attacked by a lashkar, comprising some 2,000 Mazuzais and Chamkannis, who were repulsed with loss shortly after midnight.

23. The report of the engagement was submitted to the General Officer Commanding Kohat-Kurram Force and published in G. G. O. No. 1417, dated Fort William, 24th December 1897.

24. On several occasions tribal gatherings were reported as collecting in the Karmanna Darra for a fresh attack on Sadda, but the punishment inflicted on the 16th and 17th September was sufficiently severe to shake their confidence, and they gave me no further cause for anxiety.

25. On the 1st October 1897 the flying column under my command was broken up. In submitting this report I venture to hope that the duty allotted to the column has been carried out to your satisfaction.

26. I have the honour to bring to your notice, for the favourable consideration of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the undermentioned officers :—

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Abbott, commanding the 15th Sikhs, who was my right hand man throughout the operations. His vast experience and untiring energy I cannot speak too highly of. He is a most valuable officer.

Captain H. Kennedy, 3rd Punjab Cavalry, was my Staff Officer from the formation of the flying column to the day I gave up the command. With no staff to assist him and no office, he conducted the duties of Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General and Deputy Assistant Quarter Master General with great zeal and tact. I cannot speak too highly of the services rendered by this officer.

27. My thanks are also due to the following officers to whose services the success attending the movements of the flying column are largely due :—

- Lieutenant-Colonel R. F. Jameson, commanding the 5th Punjab Infantry.
- Captain I. Eardley-Wilmot, commanding the 18th Bengal Lancers.
- Captain J. L. Parker, R. A., commanding No. 2 (Derajat) Mountain Battery.
- Captain W. J. D. Dundee, R. E., commanding No. 4 Company, Bombay Sappers and Miners.
- Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel H. Hamilton, M.D., in charge of the 42nd Native Field Hospital.

Circular No. 1 Railway.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT—RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

Calcutta, the 9th March 1898.

Revised Risk Note Forms A, B, C, D, E, F, H, and X.

Read —

Government of India circular No. XIV Railway, dated the 3rd July 1880.

Sections 72, 73 and 75 of the Indian Railways Act, IX. of 1890, as amended by section 4 of Act IX of 1896.

Letter from the Director General of Railways, No. 129 T., dated the 9th March 1896, and its enclosures.

Letter from the Secretary, Railway Conference, No. 51, dated the 8th October 1897, and its enclosures.

OBSERVATIONS.—In Government of India circular No. XIV Railway, dated the 3rd July 1880, the following risk note forms were sanctioned for adoption on all State, as well as on certain other railways, and subsequently their adoption was still further extended :—

Form A, for articles in bad condition or defectively packed.

Form B, for articles despatched at a "special reduced" or "owner's risk" rate.

Form C, for articles liable to damage and carried in open trucks at sender's request.

Form D, for consignments of small value carried at "owner's risk." (This form was subsequently cancelled.)

Form E, for uninsured horses of a declared value of over Rs. 500.

Form H, a general agreement form for large consignments.

A further risk note, Form X, to be used when the consignor elects to despatch an "excepted" article or articles specified in the second schedule of the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, the value of which exceeds Rs. 100 without payment of the percentage on value authorized in section 75 of that Act, was subsequently sanctioned by the Governor General in Council at the suggestion of the administration of the East Indian railway and was adopted on several railways; and a new risk note has now been prepared to provide for the carriage of explosive and dangerous goods at owner's risk.

2. With the exception of the latter, which is founded upon English practice, the risk notes now published are, as regards conditions, merely reproductions of those originally sanctioned with certain additions to make them available in through booking with other railways and out-agencies.

3. In regard to out-agencies the Government of India are advised that there is no objection to the use of one risk note to cover the transit of a consignment partly by railway as defined in the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, and partly by other means of transport under the Carrier's Act, III of 1865. Its efficacy in the latter case will, however, depend on the fulfilment of the requirements of the Carrier's Act.

4. Provision is made in some of the risk notes at present in force for the excision of certain words which may be inapplicable to the particular traffic carried, but the Government are advised that this is unnecessary.

5. Attention is invited to the foot-note on each form providing that, while it is open to railways for the convenience of their constituents to print vernacular translations on the back of the form, the English version is the authoritative form which alone governs the liability of the railway.

6. To facilitate proof in courts of law of the approval of the Governor General in Council of the forms in use, it has been decided to publish the forms in the Gazette of India and in the Local Government Gazettes.

It is further suggested that, to facilitate proof of the execution of the risk notes, the signature of the consignor should, when possible, be attested by two independent witnesses and not, as is sometimes the practice, by employés of the railway or of the consignor.

RESOLUTION.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to approve, under section 72 (2) (b) of the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, of the use of the enclosed forms, with effect from the 1st July 1898, by Railway Administrations working railways to which the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, applies.

2. In the case of railways to which Local Acts similar in scope to the Indian Railways Act, IX of 1890, are applicable, the Governor General in Council is also pleased to approve of the use of these forms from the 1st July 1898, so far as his approval may be necessary under such Local Acts.

3. Until the 30th June 1898, the forms at present in use shall remain in force.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution, and of its enclosures, be communicated to the Local Governments and Administrations and to the officers marginally noted, for information and guidance; also to the Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, and the Punjab, the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, the Agent to the Governor General in Baluchistan, the Accountant General, Public Works Department, and to the Foreign Department, for information.

The Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal and Burma.
The Chief Commissioner of Assam.
The Resident at Hyderabad.
The Resident in Mysore.
The Agents to the Governor General in Rajputana, Central India and Baroda.
The Consulting Engineers to the Government of India for Railways, Calcutta, Lucknow, and Assam.
The Managers of the North Western, Oudh and Rohilkhand, Eastern Bengal, and East Coast (state) railways.

Ordered, further, that this resolution and the accompanying forms be published under a notification in Part I of the Gazette of India, and that they be reproduced in the Local Government Gazettes.

APPROPRIATION REPORT ON THE ACCOUNTS OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA FOR 1896-97.

APPROPRIATION REPORT ON THE ACCOUNTS OF 1896-97.

GENERAL REVIEW.

Throughout the report the figures are tens of rupees (Rx. 1=R10), with the last two figures cut off for brevity, thus, 149,7 reads one hundred and forty-nine thousand seven hundred tens of rupees.

1. The Budget Estimate of 1896-97 showed a small surplus of 463,1 after providing for the reduction of Customs Duties by 500,0 owing to the revision of the cotton duties, for the restoration of the Famine Grant at a total of 1,000,0 involving an actual charge of 598,5, and for special mobilization charges of 494,9 under the Army Head. In working out this result the exchange value of the Rupee was estimated at 13·75*d*. The estimates took some account of the bad season in Northern India, but not so as to effect any material deterioration in the result. Some loss under Land Revenue was anticipated in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab, but this was more than covered by the improvement anticipated in the Irrigation Revenue; while the provision made for actual famine relief was only 75,0, chiefly in view of the possibility of some slight distress in the North-Western Provinces.

2. The early cessation of the south-west monsoon rains, however, and the consequent widespread failure of the crops necessitated heavy expenditure on actual famine relief (2,079,5) in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, the Central Provinces, Bombay, and Bengal, and to a smaller extent in the Punjab, Madras, and Upper Burma, and led also to a serious loss of revenue under many heads, but chiefly under Land Revenue and Provincial Rates, large remissions and suspensions being granted, and under Railway Revenue owing to the diminished goods traffic. The expenditure was also increased indirectly under many heads by the Famine, specially in connection with increased charges for supplies and compensation for dearness of provisions. In Bombay plague supervened and occasioned increased expenditure as well as a further deterioration of Revenue, for which it is not possible, however, to frame any definite estimate. The expenditure on Famine Relief and Insurance, mainly actual famine relief exceeded the Budget by 1,527,9, and the total loss of Revenue and Expenditure, due directly and indirectly to Famine and Plague, are estimated at 6,859,5, a portion of which was included in the Budget Estimate. There was also a serious falling off under Opium Revenue, and Salt gave a worse result, chiefly, however, owing only to a postponement of payment to the following year on security of Government Paper under the rules in force in the Madras Presidency. On the other hand, there was a considerable improvement under Interest, owing mainly to the high rate of premium obtained on the loans raised both in India and in England, and under Army expenditure owing to savings under most heads, but especially due to the grants for mobilization and other special services not being fully spent, and to a smaller quantity of Stores being purchased in England. But the greatest improvement was caused by the rise in the rate of exchange from 13·75*d*. to 14·45*d*., which caused a saving (including Exchange Compensation) of 1,527,8. The net result is a deficit on the year's accounts of 1,705,0, which shows a deterioration as compared with the Budget of 2,168,1.

3. No changes in classification of Revenue and Expenditure requiring special notice here were made during the year.

4. The following summary gives the Budget and Account figures of 1896-97 to be reviewed in this report, and the details will be found in the statements on pages 540 to 552 :—

Comparison with the year 1895-96.

5. The comparison in respect of revenues with the year 1895-96 is as follows :—

Revenues.	1895-96.	1896-97.	Difference. 1896-97, greater (+) or less (—).
Principal Heads of Revenue	66,073,3	62,192,4	—3,880,9
Interest	825,1	1,082,6	+257,5
Post Office, Telegraph, and Mint	2,840,4	3,011,6	+171,2
Civil Departments	1,684,5	1,678,6	—5,9
Miscellaneous	1,095,9	1,066,6	—29,3
Railways	21,859,2	20,297,8	—1,561,4
Irrigation	2,300,0	3,150,7	+850,7
Buildings and Roads	713,8	696,2	—17,6
Army Services	978,0	953,3	—24,7
TOTAL	98,370,2	94,129,8	—4,240,4

6. The important variations under Principal Heads of Revenue are the following:—

Land Revenue	—2,226,4
Opium	—714,7
Salt	—440,1
Excise	—108,2
Provincial Rates	—170,1
Customs	—525,8
Tributes	+109,4
TOTAL	—4,075,9

7. The decrease under Land Revenue was largest in the North-Western Provinces (1,030,1), Bombay (499,9), and Madras (363,4), and was considerable in the Central Provinces, Upper Burma, and the Punjab. It was almost entirely due to the famine, to which the falling off under Excise and Provincial Rates is also mainly attributable, but there was some collection of arrears of Land Revenue in 1895-96, which has enhanced the difference between the results of the two years. Under Opium there was a reduction of 390,0 under Bengal Opium owing to a heavy fall in prices (from R1,390 to R1,243 per chest), though the number of chests sold was slightly raised (37,695 to 39,000). There was also a falling off of 321,1 in the Malwa Opium Pass Fees, due partly to the reduced rate of duty (R600 against R650) in force from July 1896, partly to the diminished demand in China, and partly to the prevalence of plague, which affected trade generally in Bombay. Of the decrease under Salt, 303,3 occurred in Madras, and was chiefly due to the different proportion of cash and credit payments in the two years; the rest, and possibly some part of that in Madras also, was due to famine and plague. Under Customs 175,4 occurred under Export duties, and was due to smaller exports of Rice in consequence of the famine, which, however, enhanced the exports from Madras; the rest of the falling off was due to the reduction of the duty on cotton goods and the abolition of the duty on yarn (which came into effect only in February 1896), counterbalanced by some improvement in the general duties, as well as in the Excise duty on Cotton Manufactures (48,4). Under Tributes the increase was chiefly due to the enhanced subsidy payable by the Mysore State (105,0) from 1st April 1896.

8. Under Interest the improvement was in the main due to the premium realized on loans issued in India (net 118,0), and in England (68,9 plus Exchange 45,5). There was an increase of 70,0 in Post Office Revenue, and of 115,7 in Mint Receipts, the latter being due to the enhanced profits on copper coinage, owing to the larger issues of such coin for use on famine relief works. The differences under Civil Departments and Miscellaneous are small, the latter is mainly due to a falling off under Gain by Exchange.

9. Under Railway Revenue the decrease was due chiefly to famine and plague, but partly also to the receipts of 1895-96 having been specially enhanced by the traffic connected with the Chitral Expedition. The chief contributors to the decrease were the North-Western (597,8), the Rajputana-Malwa (339,8), and the Oudh and Rohilkhand (155,9) among State Railways, and the Great Indian Peninsula (287,6), and Bombay, Baroda and Central India (264,3) among Guaranteed Railways. There was an improvement on some lines, the largest being that of 84,0 on the Burma State Railways. The total falling off under this head attributed to famine and plague is 1,504,1, which nearly equals the total decrease as compared with the preceding year. Under Irrigation the improvement occurred mainly in the Direct Receipts from Canals in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (385,7), and the Punjab (372,9), owing chiefly to the great drought, but partly also to the development of irrigation from the Chenab and Western Jumna canals.

10. The comparison of the expenditure side is given below. The average rate of exchange for the Secretary of State's drawings in 1896-97 was about 14·4505*d.* against 13·6381*d.* in 1895-96. The decrease under the different heads in the exchange on the expenditure in England, due mainly to the higher rate of Exchange obtained during the year, is shown separately:—

	1895-96.	1896-97.	Difference, 1896-97, greater + or less —
			In the Exchange, on English expenditure.	Due to other causes.	Total.
Direct Demands on the Revenues	10,351,2	10,909,7	— 1,3	+ 559,8	+ 558,5
Interest	4,044,8	3,453,9	— 254,2	— 336,7	— 590,9
Post Office, Telegraph, and Mint	2,594,9	2,711,7	— 5,8	+ 122,6	+ 116,8
Civil Departments	15,172,9	15,445,2	— 73,1	+ 345,4	+ 272,3
Miscellaneous	5,933,3	5,856,7	— 170,5	+ 93,9	— 76,6
Famine	586,5	2,126,4	+ 5,5	+1,534,4	+1,539,9
Construction of Railways	7,7	12,8	...	+ 5,1	+ 5,1
Railways	23,479,5	22,957,8	— 540,4	+ 18,7	— 521,7
Irrigation	2,976,3	3,251,0	+ 4	+ 274,3	+ 274,7
Buildings and Roads	5,810,5	5,783,3	— 12,4	— 14,8	— 27,2
Army Services	25,398,2	24,255,3	— 359,4	— 783,5	—1,142,9
Special Defence Works	101,3	94,6	— 5,4	— 1,3	— 6,7
Total	96,457,1	96,858,4	—1,416,6	+1,817,9	+401,3

11. The higher rate of exchange, as shown above, led to a saving of 1,416,6 in the Exchange on English expenditure, and besides this it reduced the charge for Exchange Compensation by 392,4, of which 173,0 was under Army Services, 121,5 under Civil Departments, and 37,4 under Direct Demands on the Revenues. The charge for the British soldiers' pay is also estimated to have been reduced by 53,2 by reason of the higher rate adopted for its conversion. Thus the total saving on the expenditure side due to exchange may be taken at 1,862,2.

12. Under Direct Demands on the Revenues, the principal increase was that of 417,8 in the Opium expenditure, due to an improved outturn of the crop; the net Opium Revenue was thus 1,132,5 worse than in 1895-96. There was also an increased charge of 82,7 under Forest, owing mainly to the expenditure incurred in England in connection with a consignment of Andaman timber to London in 1895-96, but brought to account in 1896-97, and to heavier sleeper operations in Bengal. Refunds and Drawbacks amounted to 27,4 more than in the previous year, the excess being largest in Bombay and Bengal. Under Interest the saving was due partly to the transfer of a larger portion of the charges to the Railway and Irrigation Revenue Accounts, in consequence of additional capital expenditure in excess of the amount met by loan (175,3); and partly to interest not being paid to the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, a double payment (153,6) having been brought to account in 1895-96. The increase under Post Office and Telegraph was merely the result of the normal development of these Departments. Under Civil Departments the increased charge was largely due to famine and plague, the former causing extra expenditure in the purchase of food-grains and in grain compensation, especially under Jails (124,4) and Police (115,8), and the latter being the main cause of an excess (45,8) under Medical. There was also an increased charge (39,6) under Education, due mainly to the extension of primary education, and to revision of the staff of the Roorkee Civil Engineering College. Against these extra charges there was a saving under Political (58,8), due to there having been special charges in 1895-96 in connection with the visit of Sardar Nasrula Khan to England. The increase under Miscellaneous was in Superannuation charges, which rose both in India (36,8) and in England (56,8).

13. Under the Famine heads expenditure was incurred almost entirely for famine relief (2,079,5), there being besides only a small charge (46,9) for construction of Protective Irrigation Works. In the previous year the famine relief charge was merely nominal (18,3), but there was a large expenditure for construction of Protective Railways (529,9), whereas in 1896-97 all such expenditure was, in consequence of the famine charge absorbng all that was available under this head, taken against grant 48—Expenditure not charged to Revenue. The expenditure for Famine Relief was highest in the North-Western Provinces (993,3), Bombay (325,7), the Central Provinces (303,3), and Bengal (244,2). Under Railways the total expenditure varied but little from that of the previous year; there was, however, a considerable increase in the charge for Interest (231,1) in India and England, and for land required for Subsidized Companies (66,7), against a saving in Working Expenses of State Railways (221,2), owing to smaller traffic, and in Surplus Profits of Guaranteed Railways (54,9). The increased charges under Irrigation occurred partly under Minor Works (159,7), owing to larger grants for Provincial expenditure made by the Local Governments, and partly under Major Works owing to increased charges for Interest (31,1), and increased cost of maintenance and of collection of revenue (83,9). Under Army Services there was, as already explained (see para. 11), a saving of 226,2 for Exchange Compensation Allowance and exchange on British Soldiers' Pay. The expenditure of 1,956,9 on expeditions and special services, especially the Chitral expedition, in 1895-96 was also 1,614,2 in excess of the similar charge in 1896-97. Apart from these, therefore, there was an increased charge on other accounts of 1,056,9. This increase was mainly due to the special mobilization charges (337,6); to extra charges for compensation and for purchase of [illegible] owing to the prevalence of high prices which specially raised the expenditure under the head Commissariat (392,4) and accounts for some increase under other heads also; to higher charges under Clothing (109,7), due to the new Clothing scheme; to a higher charge for Native Infantry (about 60,0) owing to the increased rate of pay for non-commissioned officers and men having been drawn for the whole of 1896-97 against 8 months in 1895-96; to an increase under Ordnance (41,4), chiefly in the factory charges owing to larger outturn; and to higher charges in England (75,3), chiefly owing to larger purchases of stores and larger payments to Her Majesty's Government for the Retired Pay of British Forces for service in India.

Comparison of Accounts with Budget Estimates of 1896-97.

14. The following figures exhibit the differences in the net accounts between the Budget and the actuals, the differences due to the rise in the rate of exchange, which was taken in the Budget at 13·75*d.*, being shown in a separate column. The comparison of the gross figures has been given before in paragraph 4:—

	Due to rise in exchange.	Better + Worse — Due to other causes.	Net.
Principal Heads of Revenue	+ 4,3	—2,778,9	—2,774,6
Interest	+ 214,0	+ 243,1	+ 457,1
Post Office, Telegraph, and Mint	+ 19,2	+ 99,9	+ 119,1
Civil Departments	+ 45,4	— 70,3	— 24,9
Miscellaneous	+ 174,2	+ 90,1	+ 264,3
Famine	+ 7	—1,528,6	—1,527,9
Construction of Railways	...	+ 1,7	+ 1,7
Railways	+ 490,0	— 875,7	— 385,7
Irrigation	+ 1	+ 219,9	+ 220,0
Buildings and Roads	+ 7,6	+ 381,3	+ 388,9
Army Services	+ 349,8	+ 644,0	+ 993,8
Special Defence Works	+ 3,7	— 40,8	— 37,1
COMBINED SURPLUS, IMPERIAL AND PROVINCIAL	+1,309,0	—3,614,3	—2,305,3

15. To the saving in exchange shown above must be added 218,8 on account of Exchange Compensation Allowance, of which 82,9 occurs under Army Services and 71,8 under Civil Departments, the balance being distributed over all the other heads. Notwithstanding this great improvement in exchange the Actuals were worse than the Budget by the large amount of 2,305,3, so that apart from exchange the total deterioration was 3,833,1, which was due entirely to loss of Revenue (under the Principal Heads and Railways) and to direct and indirect expenditure caused by the famine and, in a smaller degree, by plague. There were countervailing savings under many heads, but even under those heads which show a net improvement in the above table, there was much expenditure due to the famine.

16. Famine was indeed such a predominant factor in the financial outcome of the year that it seems desirable to bring together in one view the total loss due to this cause. As far as loss of revenue is concerned, it is impossible, of course, to give any exact account figure, nor, is it possible, in the case of some heads to distinguish the loss due to famine from that due to plague; but the following table, which is based for the most part on estimates framed by the most competent local authorities, may be taken as giving approximately the loss of revenue on the accounts of the year assignable to famine and, in some degree, to plague. The Table distinguishes suspensions of Land Revenue and Provincial Rates, which are not a final loss; though it is tolerably certain that a considerable proportion of them will also be eventually remitted. I have also taken account of the countervailing improvement in Irrigation Revenue. Some of the local authorities attribute to the famine some improvement under such heads as Stamps and Registration and in one case even under Assessed Taxes; but the connection of such improvements, whether directly or indirectly, with famine, must be more or less problematical; under Stamps, for instance, loss has been attributed to this cause in some of the local reports, and gain in others; and one would seem as likely a result as the other; nor is the increase of revenue under this head quite up to the normal rate of progress. On the whole, therefore, I have taken no account of profit or loss under other Revenue heads, such as those mentioned. The total net loss of Revenue assigned to famine and plague in 1896-97 is thus 4,004,1, as shown in the following table.—

17. Under Expenditure the main charge was incurred in connection with the actual relief of famine and distress, and the deterioration in this respect is shown under the head of Famine in the table in paragraph 14, as 1,528,6, which is the total worseness after diverting for actual Famine Relief, the grant (473,5) made in the Budget for the construction of Protective Railways, the actual expenditure on which had to be met from Grant 48—Expenditure not charged to Revenue. But besides this the famine and the consequent rise in prices of grain led to larger expenditure under several heads either in the actual purchase of supplies or in the grant of grain compensation to native soldiers under the rules in force in the Military Department and to the lower paid servants of Government in the various Civil Departments. There was also some considerable indirect increase of expenditure, due to the payment of larger amounts for Travelling allowance and to the entertainment in some cases of larger establishments not concerned with the direct administration of famine relief. These last charges have been estimated by the local authorities. The following table brings together the expenditure due to these various causes, and shows that the total loss on this account may be taken at about 2,831,7.

18. Plague has, as indicated above, also had its effect on the net result for the year, especially in Bombay. As far as the revenue is concerned, it does not seem possible to distinguish the loss thus caused, though it cannot be denied that the depression of trade due to this cause must have had some effect on certain heads of the Government revenue, and some part of the deterioration shown in the table in paragraph 16 is, as already stated due to the prevalence of this epidemic. Under the expenditure heads, however, there has been some increase due solely to plague; this occurs chiefly under the "Medical" Head; it is almost entirely confined to Bengal and Bombay, and may be taken at 4,4 in the former, 18,1 in the latter, and 1,2 in all the other Provinces. Of the total of 23,7, Medical accounts for 19,0.

19. The total loss of revenue and increase of expenditure due to famine and plague may therefore be put down at about 6,859,5.

20. The principal variations apart from exchange, famine, and plague are explained below. Under Principal Heads of Revenue, the largest variations occurred under Opium, the revenue showing a decrease of 486,1 owing to the causes stated above (para. 7), and the expenditure a saving of 108,6, the crop having proved less than that allowed for in the estimate, though it was largely in excess of that of the previous year. There was also a decrease in Madras in Salt revenue (125,8), due to increased credit transactions on the security of Government Paper, partly counterbalanced by a saving in expenditure (43,5) owing to an over-estimate in the Budget. There were, on the other hand, some small improvements under the Revenue Heads—Stamps (45,0), Registration (29,5), and Assessed Taxes (29,6), and there were savings in the expenditure under Land Revenue (66,2) and under Forests (51,9), specially in survey and settlement charges, counterbalanced partly by excesses under Refunds (28,7) and Assignments and Compensations (25,9), the latter occurring mainly in connection with the adjustments on account of alienated land revenue in Bombay. The Interest receipts were raised by the special premium receipts mentioned already (paragraph 8); but there was a reduction of 40,0 owing to the remission of arrears of interest due from the Calcutta Port Trust for the Kidderpore Docks. Under the expenditure head there was only a small increase in the total, but it was the net outcome of larger payments of interest on loans in course of discharge (48,5), (two 3½ per cent. loans having been added to this category during the year), and a smaller transfer of Interest to Railway Revenue account (54,1), counterbalanced by the saving of Interest (79,0) on the balance of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, two years' interest having been paid in the previous year. There was an improvement in the Mint Receipts, chiefly under profit on copper coinage (117,6), the absorption of copper having been very large owing to demands for Famine Relief works. In the Civil Departments the increase caused by famine expenditure considerably exceeded the net deterioration shown in para. 14. There were savings under several heads, the principal being that of 72,0 under Education, which is spread over all the provinces, and is due chiefly to grants for special purposes not having been utilized, and to loose estimating in respect of local charges. In the Miscellaneous group the improvement occurred chiefly in the receipts under the Miscellaneous head (70,2), which was spread over all the sub-heads, and was not specially noticeable in any of them; there were increased charges under Superannuations both in India (8,0) and England (28,0), but these were counterbalanced by improvements under other heads.

21. Under Railway Revenue Account the deterioration is the net result of a decrease in the revenue of 1,285,4, and in the expenditure of 409,7. The decrease in revenue is due chiefly to famine and plague; it was largest in the case of the Great Indian Peninsula (356,2), the Rajputana-Malwa (339,0), North-Western (312,1), Bombay, Baroda and Central India (248,4), and Oudh and Rohilkhand Railways (181,4). The only Railway which showed very large improvement was the Eastern Bengal (200,6), which was helped by the favourable jute crop, but the Burma Railway also did well (41,6) owing to the good rice crop. Under expenditure the decrease, apart from exchange, occurred mainly under working expenses of State Railways (191,2), Interest on Debt (39,2), and surplus profits of Guaranteed Railways (150,1). Under working expenses the largest decreases occurred in the North-Western (199,4), the Rajputana-Malwa (57,2), and the Oudh and Rohilkhand (49,9) Railways in consequence of the falling off in traffic, which lessened the receipts of these lines. On the East Indian Railway there was an increase (82,6) due partly to the grant of famine allowances to the menial staff, and the Eastern Bengal Railway expenses also rose with the increasing receipts. Under Irrigation the Budget provided under Major Works for an improvement in net receipts of 507,4 over the actuals of 1895-96, but the actual net receipts were 216,3 better than the Budget, owing chiefly to the greatly enhanced demand for canal water in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab in consequence of drought. Under Minor Works the variation from the Budget was very small. Under Buildings and Roads the improvement was chiefly in the expenditure on Civil Works in India, on the grants for which there was a saving of 283,3, spread over almost all the provinces, but largest in Bengal (93,0), and in the "India" column (60,5); in the latter case part of the grant (30,0) for the Bangalore Water-works was surrendered, as the work was not sanctioned in time for the grant to be fully utilized. There was also a saving in Military Works (76,4), here also being partly due to a surrender of a portion (34,7) of the grant for works in the Tochi Valley. Under Army Services there was a saving of 218,8 in India, which was made up largely of savings on the grants for special expeditions and services; thus there was a large saving on the special mobilization grant (157,3), owing to its having been found impossible to carry out all the work intended, and in the extra charges for Upper Burma (103,0), due partly to a very small portion of the special grant for Chin-Lushai (50,0) having been utilized, and in the charges for the occupation of Chitral and its communications (38,0), chiefly owing to the local purchase of rations. There was thus increased expenditure under the ordinary heads of about 72,0 made up of a large increase under Commissariat (264,5), counterbalanced by a saving under all other important heads (192,5). The increase under Commissariat is entirely due to the enhanced prices of food for men and animals, which increased both the cost of rations and the charges for compensation for dearness of food and forage. To the general saving (192,5) exchange compensation contributed largely (82,8), and there was a considerable saving under Ordnance (46,9), especially in the factory charges, largely increased grants, which were not worked up to, having been sanctioned for these in the Budget.

22. The Budget estimated for an expenditure of 423,3 in excess of the revenue on the whole account, but 886,4 of this was payable out of the past accumulations of Provincial and Local Balances, so that there was a net surplus on Imperial Account of 463,1. The accounts closed with a deficit on Imperial Account of 1,705,0 and on Provincial and Local account of 1,023,5. The net Imperial expenditure has therefore been worse than the Budget by 1,705,0+463,1=2,168,1, and the net Provincial and Local expenditure by 1,023,6—886,4=137,2.

23. The details of these fluctuations are given below, the sign + meaning better, and — worse, than the estimate:—

24. The deterioration in the Provincial and Local Section occurred chiefly in the Principal Heads of Revenue (mainly Land Revenue) and in the charges for Famine Relief, but there was an improvement in the Provincial share of Irrigation and Railway Revenue, and there were large savings in the grants for Buildings and Roads.

26. The Budget grants have been exceeded under several heads, largely owing to the enhanced charges caused directly or indirectly by the famine. These excesses, distinguishing those requiring sanction from those for which extra grants have already been made, have been noticed under each head of expenditure, and the detailed reasons for the excess have been also there stated. The following table brings together the excesses under each head still requiring sanction. The excess shown against Famine Relief is the amount uncovered by any formal additional grants, but the whole of this expenditure was carried out with the sanction of the Government of India. The actual Provincial and Local expenditure exceeded the total Budget Grant for Provincial and Local in Bengal (194,4), the Punjab (25,9), and Madras (24,7). The Bengal Government passed an order appropriating to meet part of the excess in the Provincial column the savings available under other heads; but as it made no specific appropriation to meet each particular excess, it is necessary to show the total excess as uncovered by grant. In the Punjab the grants made in re-appropriation exceeded the savings obtained, the famine relief grant has accordingly been reduced, so as to leave the actual net excess as still requiring sanction:—

Excess expenditure over Budget Estimate awaiting sanction of the Imperial Government.

Section A.—PRINCIPAL HEADS OF REVENUE.

1895-96. Accounts.		1896-97. Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	1896-97. Accounts.
66,073,3	REVENUE	65,214,2	61,937,5	62,192,4

27. The revenue in this section fell short of the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year by 3,021,8 and 3,880,9 respectively. Of the decrease as compared with the Budget Estimate 2,118,8 occurred under Land Revenue, 130,5 under Excise, and 132,9 under Provincial Rates, and were due for the most part, directly or indirectly, to the prevalence of famine and plague. The other large decreases were 486,1 under Opium, due to a fall in price and to a diminished demand for Indian Opium in China; and 278,3 under Salt, due partly to a fall in the cash and rise in the credit transactions in Madras, owing to the low price of Government Paper; but partly also to the general scarcity. These decreases were counterbalanced to the extent of 124,8 by improvements under the other heads, the most important being those of 45,0 under Stamps and 29,5 under Registration, due to an increase in the number of sales and mortgages of land, which is ascribed mainly to the prevailing scarcity and high prices; and of 29,6 under Assessed Taxes due to more careful assessment and prompt realizations.

28. To the fall as compared with the actuals of the previous year, Land Revenue contributed 2,226,4; Opium 714,7; Salt 440,1; Excise 108,2, and Provincial Rates 170,1, owing to the reasons given above, and in addition Customs contributed 525,8, due to the abolition of duty on cotton twist and yarn, to the reduction of duty on cotton piece-goods, and to the reduced export of rice owing to famine. The other variations are generally explained by the reasons given above, but in the case of Forest there was an improvement of 73,4, due partly to credit in the accounts of 1896-97, of the value of three cargoes of Andaman timber sold in London in 1895-96, partly to the supply of sleepers by the Bengal Forest Department to the Rai Bareilly-Benares Railway, and partly to a favourable season in Burma; and in the case of Tributes there was an improvement of 109,4, due to the enhancement by 105,0 of the subsidy payable by Mysore.

29. The severe agricultural distress caused during the last year in every Province by "the greatest famine of the century" led to a serious falling-off of land revenue collections, which were less than the Budget by 2,118,8. The decline was heaviest in the North-Western Provinces, where the severity was the greatest, and where the utter inability of the ryots to pay the ordinary fixed collections necessitated the largest amount of remissions and suspensions. Bombay, Madras and the Central Provinces come next in order. The pressure was less in Burma and the Punjab, while Bengal escaped with an inconsiderable loss. In the Revised Estimate the reduction was somewhat over-estimated in the North-Western Provinces, Madras and Bombay.

30. Under Ordinary Land Revenue, the decrease in the North-Western Provinces amounted to 1,008,2, and if to this is added the reduction of 85,0 allowed for in the Budget Estimate in consequence of the anticipated scarcity in Bundelkhund, the total suspensions and remissions due to famine may be put down roundly at 109 lakhs. In Madras the deficiency amounted to 358,3 and in Bombay to 320,5, the distress in the latter province caused by the failure of the crops in the southern and central Divisions having been aggravated by an unfavourable inundation in Sind. In the Central Provinces the Budget provided for the collection of the full demand together with about six lakhs of arrears; suspensions, however, amounted to 120,3, and remissions to 35,9. Even after these reductions the realizations were about 5 lakhs short. In the Punjab the total decrease compared with the Budget was 155,7; the Revised provided for a large portion of this, but further remissions and suspensions were rendered necessary before the close of the year. In Bengal the actual realizations from the fixed collections showed a falling-off of 64,8 on account of the scarcity; on the other hand, the receipts from Government estates exceeded the Budget by 60,5, and Malikana receipts (probably over one lakh) estimated under head (5) were credited to this head. In Assam the deficiency of 10,7, as compared with the Budget, was due to the short collection of revenue owing to the effects of the epidemic of Kala-azar in the districts of Nowgong and Darrang and to a deficient rice crop in some of the districts of the Assam Valley; the improvement of 8,8 over the actuals of the previous year arose from increase of the demand consequent on new settlements and assessments at progressive rates.

31. Under Assessment of Alienated Lands less Quit-rents, the revenue in Bombay showed an increase of 23,6. It occurred chiefly in the Shikarpur and Khaira districts, and was due in the former to too great a reduction having been made in view of a low inundation, and in the latter to sufficient allowance not having been made for the increase due to revision of settlements.

32. Under Sale of Proprietary Right, etc., the larger amount realized in the Punjab as compared with the actuals was due to the sale of certain land in the Lahore District for 5 lakhs, the bulk of which came to credit in 1896-97. This was counterbalanced to a certain extent by a falling off in Madras, for which, however, no explanation is given.

33. Under Capitation Tax, etc., in Upper Burma emigration to Lower Burma and reduction of rates of, and exemption from, assessment on account of poverty, reduced the number of households assessed for Thathameda tax. In Lower Burma both Capitation and Thathameda revenue shewed an improvement, but the estimate for land rate in lieu of capitation tax was excessive.

34. Under Miscellaneous, in Upper Burma the Budget did not allow for 15,7 realized from the Ruby Mines Company under the new contract in excess of the actuals of 1895-96. In Lower Burma the improvement was due to the relaxation of the stringent regulations in regard to the security of lessees and the introduction of a new uniform scale of rates under the Lower Burma Fisheries Act. The decline in Bengal was due to the transfer of the Malikana receipts, as noted above, from this head to head (1), and to a smaller recovery of survey charges. In the Punjab the improvement occurred partly in the receipts from sale-proceeds of trees and grass. In Madras the Budget was an under-estimate

35. The explanation of the variations in the Portion of Land Revenue due to Irrigation is given in the Public Works portion of this Report under the Head of Irrigation (vide para. 258).

37. From the details of the Recurring and Special transfers which are given in an Appendix to this Report, it will be seen that the Government of India has, in consequence of the loss of provincial revenue and enhancement of provincial expenditure owing to the agricultural distress, been compelled to make grants to the Central Provinces of 52,6 and to the North-Western Provinces of 160,9, to prevent those Local Governments from closing the year with a debit balance.

38. Under Sale of Bengal Opium the estimated number of chests (39,000) was sold, and the falling off of 219,6 in the actuals was due to the average price realized being only R1,243 against an estimate of R1,300 per chest.

39. Under Bombay Opium Pass Fees the falling off was due to the lowering of the rate of duty in July 1896 from R650 to R600 to a diminished demand for Indian opium in China, and to the prevalence of plague, which affected trade generally in Bombay.

40. Under Excise Opium the falling off in the Central Provinces and in the North-Western Provinces was due to the agricultural distress which prevailed during a part of the year.

1896-97	1,848,7	140,9	2,500,1	1,694,2	2,237,8	8,421,7

43. The actuals of 1896-97 are lower than those of any year, but one, in the last seven. They showed a decrease of 278,3 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 440,1 as compared with the previous year, of which 114,9 and 296,8, respectively, occurred under Excise on Local Manufacture in Madras, the falling off there being due mainly to a fall in cash and a rise in credit transactions owing to the low price of Government paper, whereas these receipts of 1895-96 had been specially enhanced by large cash transactions.

44. There is, however, a general falling off everywhere except in Bengal; the receipts were doubtless affected by the prevailing distress and in the Bombay Presidency by the plague. In Bengal the revenue from imported salt continues to expand, as it has done steadily for the last 4 years. In Burma the falling off in the duty on imported salt was the natural consequence of the specially large importations of 1895-96.

45. The actuals showed an increase of 45,0 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 50,6 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The revenue shows somewhat less than the normal expansion, owing to the larger falling off under Court-fee Stamps in the North-Western Provinces and Bombay, due to scarcity and the prevalence of plague, which more than counterbalanced the increase under this minor head in other provinces. The revenue from Commercial and other stamps, however, rose considerably, especially in Bengal and Punjab, due, it is said, to increased sales and mortgages in consequence of the prevailing scarcity; which, however, appears to have reduced the revenue in Madras, and, combined with plague, in Bombay.

46. The revenue under this head showed a falling off of 130,5 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 108,2 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The decline occurred in the Central Provinces, North-Western Provinces and Bombay, and was due in the last case partly to the prevalence of plague, but generally to agricultural distress, which not only curtailed the means of indulgence in stimulants but also necessitated large suspensions and remissions owing to the high prices of distillery materials and the consequent inability of contractors to meet the demands due under their settlements. The falling off occurred mainly under license and distillery fees, etc., but the opium revenue in these provinces was also affected by the above mentioned causes. The only provinces in which any appreciable improvement occurred were Burma and Madras and in both it was largely due to administrative improvements.

47. Under Duty on Ganja there appears to have been an under-estimate in Bengal; the actuals of the two years show no appreciable difference .

48. The revenue under this head showed a falling off of 132,9 as compared with the Budget Estimate and of 170,1 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. This result is mainly owing to remissions and suspensions due to the general scarcity. In the North-Western Provinces, however, the changes in the Oudh Village Chowkidari system, contemplated by the Oudh Local Rates Act of 1894, and provided for in the Budget Estimate, were not carried out, and this resulted in a decrease of 10,0 under the second minor head. In Bengal alone there was an improvement, due to large arrear collections and prompt realizations of the year's dues.

49. The actuals practically correspond with the Budget Estimate, but this was the net result of an increase of 89,3 under Import Duties, due to a general improvement in the import trade, and a decrease of 83,5 under Export Duties, due to reduced shipments of rice, a considerable portion of the trade having been diverted to India and Upper Burma in consequence of the famine. The decrease of 525,8, as compared with the previous year, was due to a fall of 403,6 under the first head, owing chiefly to the abolition of duty on cotton twist and yarn, to the reduction of the duty on cotton piece-goods, and of 175,4 under Export Duties due to the reason stated above, less an increase of 48,4 under excise duty on cotton manufactures.

50. Under Import Duties the increase over the Budget was due in Burma to a general improvement in the import trade, chiefly in spirits, counterbalanced in part by a falling off in the duties on cotton goods; in Bengal to an improvement mainly under duties on spirits (30,6), and cotton goods (30,8); and in Bombay to an increase in the duties on silver bullion and coin (74,2), oils (28,9), and cotton manufactures (21,1), partly counterbalanced by a falling off under other metals and manufactures of metals (40,4), raw materials and manufactured articles (29,8), and articles of food and drink (11,7). The increase under Export duties in Madras was due to larger exports of rice to Ceylon owing to the supply from Bengal having failed. Under Excise Duty on Cotton Manufacture the increase over the actuals of the previous year was mainly due to improved receipts under Act II of 1896 in Bombay.

51. The revenue showed an improvement of 29.6 and 37,6 over the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year respectively. The improvement occurred chiefly in Bengal and Madras; the prevalence of famine and plague adversely affected the collections in some provinces.

52. The India figures include in addition to the collections made in the districts directly administered by the Government of India, the recoveries of the Non-Civil Departments from the salaries of Government Officers. The details are given below:—

53. The total actuals under this head agree very closely with the Budget, though there were differences under the several heads and in the various provinces. There were large decreases in the Central Provinces the North-Western Provinces and Bombay, due mainly to the depression caused by famine and plague, counterbalanced by improvements chiefly in Upper and Lower Burma and in Madras, due in Burma to larger extractions consequent on favourable floods and to higher prices, and in Madras partly to certain items being credited to this head instead of to I—Land Revenue, and partly to larger collections of drift wood and better grazing arrangements.

54. The only other matters requiring special notice are that under Timber and other produce removed by Government Agency, there was apparently an over-estimate in Madras, while in the North-Western Provinces a large sale of sleepers to the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway, and an improvement in the sale of firewood, chiefly to the Chakrata Cantonment accounted for the realization of the Budget Estimate notwithstanding the prevailing distress. The increase of 114,8 over the actuals of the previous year under the same minor head was due mainly, in addition to the causes already mentioned, to the Department in Bengal undertaking the direct supply of sleepers to the Rai Bareilly-Benares Railway, which brought in a revenue of 49,4, and to including under "India" in the actuals of 1896-97 the proceeds of three cargoes of Andamans timber sold in London in 1895-96, both of which were taken into account partially or wholly in the Budget Estimate.

55. It is under Timber and other produce removed by consumers or purchasers, that the decrease due to the severe agricultural distress in the Central Provinces, the North-Western Provinces and Bombay, chiefly showed itself. It operated by reducing to a minimum the demand for timber, firewood, charcoal, and bamboos, and also led to the throwing open of the Forests to the free collection of edible products, and to the grant of free grazing to agricultural cattle, while in some parts there was a total failure of the grass crop. In Bombay plague also contributed to the general depression in trade, and there was a smaller demand for firewood and charcoal by the North-Western Railway.

56. Under Other Receipts there appears to have been an under-estimate both in Lower Burma and in the Punjab.

57. The revenue under this head showed an increase of 29,5 over the Budget Estimate, and of 33,4 over the actuals of the preceding year. The improvement was contributed chiefly by Bengal and Punjab, and is attributed mainly to the prevailing scarcity; in the other Provinces in which scarcity prevailed the standard of revenue was well maintained and the increase would doubtless have been larger but for the suspensions of revenue and the large advances made by Government, which served to keep the distressed agriculturists to some extent out of the money-lenders' hands.

58. The high figure under Other Receipts in Madras is due to the system which prevails there of granting certificates of previous non-encumbrance of land in connection with State Loans, and private mortgages and sales.

59. The receipts under this head are for the most part fixed. The fluctuations that occur arise generally either from the non-payment of dues, or from advance or arrear collections. The increase in the Budget and actuals of 1896-97 over those of 1895-96 are due to the enhanced subsidy payable by Mysore from 1st April 1896.

60. Under Contributions for Special Military Forces the decrease in the case of the Malwa Contingent (Dewas, Jowrah) was due to a fall in the value of the local coin in which the contribution is paid.

61. Under Fees on Succession to Native States the increase in India was due to realization of arrears from the Baoni State and to successions in the Sailana and Kothi States in the Indore Agency. In the Central Provinces the Nazarana for the two years, 1895-96 and 1896-97, was paid by the Raja of the Patna State. In Bombay the decrease was due to the postponement of the sum due from the Jath State, partly counterbalanced by an advance recovery from the Chief of Sunth.

62. The expenditure under this section showed a saving of 247,2 as compared with the Budget Estimate and an excess of 558,5 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. Of the saving, as compared with the Budget Estimate, 108,6 occurred under Opium due to the outturn of the crops having fallen short of the estimate, though it was largely in excess of that of the previous year; 66,2 under Land Revenue, chiefly in the charges for Survey and Settlement, Land Records and Agriculture, and Commission on Collections; 51,9 under Forest, due chiefly to provision for survey operations and other new work not being fully utilised; 43,5 under Salt, due chiefly to an over-estimate in Madras; and small savings under the remaining heads, except under Refunds and Drawbacks and Assignments and Compensations, under which there were excesses of 28,7 and 25,9, respectively. Variations in the former, which are of a fluctuating character, must be expected; the excess under the latter occurred mainly in Bombay, and was due to variations in the adjustments made on account of alienated Land Revenue.

63. Of the excess as compared with the actuals of the previous year, 417,8 occurred under Opium due to larger payments to cultivators; 82,7 under Forest, due mainly to the inclusion in the accounts of 1896-97 of charges connected with the consignment of Andamans timber to London in 1895-96, and to heavier sleeper operations in Bengal; and 27,4 under Refunds and Drawbacks, chiefly in Bengal and Bombay. There were small excesses under all the other heads except Stamps, under which there was a saving of 6,9.

64. The charges under this head are of a fluctuating character and do not admit of an accurate forecast. The expenditure exceeded the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year by 28,7 and 27,4, respectively. The excess over the Budget occurred under Land Revenue Refunds (11,1) chiefly in Bengal and Madras, and under Other Revenue Refunds (16,2), chiefly in Madras and Bombay. Under the latter head the excess in Madras occurred under Forests, due partly to a refund to the East Coast Railway of balance of an advance for sâl sleepers, and under Provincial Rates owing mainly to the refund of cess erroneously credited to that head instead of to Land Revenue; the excess in Bombay occurred under Excise. The excesses shown above as unsanctioned are small, and generally could not be foreseen before the end of the year.

65. The charges under this head exceeded the Budget Estimate by 25,9 and the actuals of the previous year by 7,4. Excesses occurred in the North-Western Provinces of 6,8, in Bombay of 20,8, and in the Central Provinces of 1,0. In the first Province the excess occurred under Land Revenue Compensations, 2,8 being under Malikana, owing chiefly to large arrear payments in the Gorakhpore District and 3,9 under Pensions in lieu of resumed lands, owing mainly to the payment of a newly sanctioned allowance to the ex-ubaridars of Gursarai in the Jhansi District (1,5), to the transfer to this head of pensions of the Bahrampur Muafidars provided for under 27—Territorial and Political Pensions (4), and to the payment of arrears of certain Muafi pensions (1,8). The excess in Bombay occurred mostly

(19,9) under the first head, where it arose entirely out of the adjustments on account of alienated land revenues, there being a saving in the cash payments; it was largely due to an under-estimate of the adjustments for Pensions in lieu of resumed lands, which were taken at a lower figure than the actuals for some years past. There was also an excess of 1,5, under Excise Compensations in Bombay, the payment due to the Chiefs of the Rewa Kantha Agency (2,3) having been claimed by them after the close of the calendar year, according to the terms of their agreement, instead of after the close of the financial year as heretofore. In the Central Provinces the excess occurred also under Excise in connection with the payments for the resumption of Abkari rights of the Chattisgarh Zemindars; it was anticipated in the Revised Estimate that the whole balance of this compensation amounting to 7,2 would be paid; but only 1,2 was actually paid. Of the excesses 2,8 occurring in the North-Western Provinces under Malikana and 20,8 in Bombay have been provided for by re-appropriation. The other Imperial excesses were foreseen and sanction to them should have been obtained during the year.

66. The excess over the actuals of the previous year occurred chiefly in the North-Western Provinces, and was due partly to the causes explained above, and partly to a payment of 11,1 on account of the allowance of the heirs of the late Rajah Shambbu Narain Singh of Ghazipur.

67. Under Salt Compensations the saving in India was due to smaller payments to the Jeypore and Jodhpore States, owing to reduced sales of Sambhar salt in 1895-96 (4,9), counterbalanced by some smaller excess payments of arrears.

68. The expenditure in India was less than the Budget Estimate by 65,0, and more than that of the previous year by 12,3. Variations occurred under all the minor heads, the principal being explained below.

69. The Budget Grant was appreciably exceeded in one Province only—the Punjab—the excess there being 10,3, and being spread over all the heads. Under District Administration the excess (6,2) is attributed to excess charges for salaries (2,2), due entirely to variations in leave taken, for travelling allowance of Sub-divisional Establishment (7), for compensation for dearness of provisions (1,9), and for postage and telegram charges of district offices (1,6). Under Survey and Settlement the excess (2,1) was due to additional expenditure sanctioned by the Government of India in connection with the survey and demarcation of lands near the Chenab Canal. For this an extra grant was made. Under Land Records and Agriculture the excess (1,9) occurred in the Patwaris Fees Fund, the accounts of which are not audited by the Accountant General. The excess was foreseen in the Revised, and sanction should have been obtained to it before the year closed.

70. Under Charges of District Administration the variations are generally not large; the fall in the rate of exchange compensation has in this as in the case of many other heads led to savings, while famine has caused extra expenditure for grain compensation and for other contingent charges, especially in the North-Western Provinces and the Central Provinces. The only points needing notice are that in Upper Burma, a moiety of local and house allowances of sub-divisional officers was transferred to 19A.—Law and Justice; in Lower Burma the excess over the previous year was due to the transfer of District Office Local Funds establishment charges from 18—General Administration to this head, and to the extension of the system of collecting revenue by village headmen. The most important item in the excess of 1,7 in Bengal, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was 5,0 on account of the purchase of a steamer. The Budget provision of 2,8 in Madras for the improvement of Taluk Gumastahs was not utilized, and that for horse allowance to Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars was only partly utilised. In the North-Western Provinces the pay of the Deputy Superintendent, Benares Rajah's Family Domains, was raised, and there was some saving owing to the inclusion of Exchange Compensation Allowance in the amount recovered from the Court of Wards (8).

71. Under Survey and Settlement there were savings of 24,6 on the whole, the only excesses occurring in the Punjab (2,1) as mentioned above, and in the North-Western Provinces (3,6), where it was due chiefly to the extension of settlement operations in some districts and their prolongation in others, and has been met by reappropriations sanctioned by the Local Government. The savings were generally due to the entire or partial postponement for various causes of Settlements or departmental or professional surveys provided for in the Budget. In Madras the saving of 5,2 was due partly to the difficulty of getting qualified men for town surveys. In Bombay the saving of 6,1 was due chiefly to the recovery of arrears of contribution from Native States for Foreign service which are deducted from charges, and to the abolition of the office of the British Girasia Agent.

72. Under Land Records and Agriculture the total savings amounted to 17,9; the only excesses that occurred in addition to that in the Punjab, which has been already explained, were 1,3 in Upper Burma, due to the posting of additional officers; 1,5 in Bengal, due partly to extra charges for temporary establishment and the payment of the leave allowance of an officer of another province, and partly (8) to the share of the cost of the office of the Director not having been adjusted, as it should have been, against the Behar Settlement. Of the savings the principal were that of 4,6 in the Central Provinces occurring under "Local", and due to an over-estimate, of 3,2 in Assam, due partly to the appointment of 2nd Superintendent of Land Records provided for in the Budget not having been filled up (8), and partly to the establishment of Kanungoes and District Mandals being below the usual strength, and of 11,1 in the North-Western Provinces occurring mostly in the local division of the accounts, and due chiefly to savings in the pay and allowances of Kanungoes (4,4), and in petty construction and repairs (2,2), and to the Land Record Surveys not being carried on so rapidly as was anticipated The excess over the actuals of the previous year was due chiefly in Bombay to the payment of grain compensation, to the employment of a temporary famine establishment, and to the greater strength of Tapedar and Kotwal establishments, and in the North-Western Provinces to the extension of Land Record Surveys.

73 Under Management of Government Estates the excess of 2,0 in Bengal occurred in the charges for collection of revenue.

74. Under Commission on Collection the principal saving occurred in Upper Burma (19,4), due to agricultural distress which affected the collection of revenue, and the chief excess (5,1) in Lower Burma, due to an under-estimate. The decrease, as compared with the actuals of the previous year in Lower Burma, was due to fewer arrear payments in 1896-97.

75 Under Allowances to District and Village Officers the saving occurred chiefly in Bombay (5,6) in cash allowances and assessment of alienated lands due to delay in presenting claims. The charge in the Central Provinces represents a famine allowance paid to Kotwals, but not provided for in the Budget.

76. In England the decrease was due to Law Charges in connection with appeals from India being less than was anticipated.

77. The Indian expenditure showed a saving of 108,7 in comparison with the Budget Estimate, and an increase of 417,2 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. As usual these variations were the result mainly of variations in the outturn of the crop, which in the year under review amounted to 87,281 maunds against 100,000 maunds estimated in the Budget Estimate, and 69,084 maunds the actual production of the previous year.

78. The Payments to Cultivators, which form the bulk of the charges, fell short of the estimate for both Agencies taken together by 102,9, but the payments in the Benares Agency exceeded the estimate.

79 Under Opium Factory the saving of 6,4 in the Benares Agency was due chiefly to the provision of 3,5 for fire protection at the Ghazipur Factory not having been utilised. The excess over the actuals of the previous year was due in both Agencies to larger payments for timber for the manufacture of opium chests required for the larger crop, and in the Behar Agency also to increased freight charges.

80. The extra expenditure due to famine is estimated at 6. The saving under Exchange Compensation Allowance amounted to 8.

81. The Indian charges showed a saving of 43,4 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and an increase of 2,1 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The small excess charge in Bombay under Purchase and Freight was more than covered by the extra grant of 2,2 sanctioned by the Government of India. The saving occurred chiefly in Madras, due to an over-estimate under Salaries, Establishment, and Contingencies and Purchase and Freight. India and Bengal also contributed to the saving, the former under Manufacture and Excavation as a result of a smaller demand for Sambhar salt, and the latter under Salaries, etc., owing to certain Preventive establishment provided for in the Budget not having been entertained.

82. The actuals agree very closely with the Budget Estimate, there being an excess of only 4 on the whole. This occurred under Charges on Sale of Stamps, including discount, in Bengal (1,0) and Punjab (9), and was the necessary consequence of larger sales of stamps. Under Stamps supplied from Central Stores there was an over-estimate in the North-Western Provinces and in Madras, in the latter case owing to the value of stamps issued being calculated at too high a price.

83. In England there was a saving, the demand having been smaller than was anticipated.

84. The Indian expenditure fell short of the Budget Estimate by 9,0 and exceeded the actuals of the previous year by 4,7. The Budget grant was exceeded only in Upper and Lower Burma (3 and 8), and in Bombay (3). In Burma the excess occurred under rewards, and was due to the rigorous measures taken for the suppression of illicit trade. In Bombay it was spread over all heads. The largest saving occurred in Madras (7,1), and was due to an over-estimate, especially of the expenditure in connection with the extension of the tree tax system.

85. The charges were lower than the Budget Estimate by 2,3, and more than the actuals of the previous year by 1,6. The saving occurred chiefly in Bengal, and was due to the provision for valuation and re-valuation work having been only partially utilized. The excess of 8 in Bombay was due to the payment of arrears of the previous year, chiefly in the Belgaum district, and was sanctioned by the Local Government.

86. The Indian expenditure was less than the Budget Estimate by 3,9, and more than that of the previous year by 6. The only excess occurred in Bombay, and was due to the post of Commissioner having been held by an officer of higher grade than that provided for, and to the cost of the combined factory establishment having been under-estimated. The saving occurred chiefly in Bengal, and was due to the establishment being below the sanctioned strength, to less payment of Exchange Compensation Allowance, to the provision for extra temporary preventive establishment having been only partially utilized, and to the salary of the Port Officer, Chittagong, having been charged to the Port Fund.

87. The expenditure showed a saving of 1,1 as compared with the Budget Estimate and exceeded that of the previous year by 5. The saving in Bengal was due to the provision for a temporary warrant establishment in Calcutta not being utilised. The small excess of 1 in Madras requires the sanction of the Government of India.

88. The Indian expenditure showed a saving over the Budget of 55,8, which was spread over all the heads, and over every province except India. The excess in India over Budget and actuals was due to the charges in England in connection with Padouk consigned to London having exceeded the Budget provision (9,0) for expenditure on this account by 13,4.

89. The Superintendent, Port Blair, under section 127 (1) of the Forest Code, sanctioned an additional grant of 22,4 on this account, on the ground that it was more than covered by the corresponding increase of Revenue (24,8) to be brought to account. Provision had, however, been made in the Budget of 20,0 on account of Padouk Timber sold in London, and of 9,0 for charges for the same, and, no further revenue having been realized and brought to account during the year there has been, as a matter of fact, an increased Revenue of only 4,8 against an excess expenditure as shown above of 13,4. The whole of the Revenue was taken as excess Revenue, because there were still more than 2,000 tons of Padouk timber in the hands of the London Agents, and if this were sold and the proceeds brought to account within the year, it would have realized fully the 20,0 provided in the Budget. Considering, however, the delay which had taken place in bringing to credit the 24,8 on account of the sales of 1895-96, it seems doubtful if this was a reasonable anticipation, and in any case, as it was not realized, I consider that the excess cannot be held to have been covered by the Superintendent's sanction, and that it requires the sanction of the Government of India.

90. The savings occurred chiefly under Other Charges, where there was an aggregate saving of 37,7 over the Budget, Lower Burma being the only province which showed an increase. The largest saving occurred in Madras, 10,7, where, however, the actuals of the preceding year were exceeded by 7,5. These variations are explained by the deputation of a second Survey of India Party during the year for Forest Survey operations, the full provision for which was not worked up to and by the expansion of departmental operations. In Bombay an undistributed amount of 9,2 provided in the Budget was not fully utilized. In the Central Provinces the saving occurred in the Southern Circle, and is attributed to the abnormally bad season. In Lower Burma planting and fire protection raised expenditure over the Budget. Under Timber, etc., removed by Government Agency, the variations from the Budget are unimportant. The actuals, however, exceeded those of the previous year by 48,5, chiefly due to the increased charge in the India column already explained, and to larger sleeper operations in Singbhum, in Bengal.

91. The excess under expenditure in England was due to unforeseen demands for stores.

92. The charges were less than the Budget Estimate by 3,6 and more than those of the previous year by 7,7. The only excess over the Budget Estimate occurred in Punjab and was due partly to the payment of compensation for dearness of grain, but mainly to larger expenditure on account of commission to Sub-Registrars in consequence of the expansion of Registration revenue. The excess over the previous year in Bengal was due to the increase in the allowances earned by Rural Sub-Registrars consequent on the expansion of the operations of the department. In Madras the saving was chiefly due to the provision for regrading Registrars and Sub-Registrars not having been fully utilized owing to new offices not having been opened to the extent contemplated.

93. The receipts in this section exceeded the Budget Estimate by 234,3 and the actuals of the previous year by 257,5. Of the improvement, as compared with the Budget, 73,2 occurred in India, and was due to an increase of 119,6 under Other Items, chiefly on account of premium on loans, counterbalanced by short receipts of 40,0 under Interest on Loans to Presidency Corporations, due to the remission under the orders of the Government of India, of arrear interest for 1894-95 on the loan to the Calcutta Port Trust for the Kidderpore Docks and 5,5 on account of less payment of interest on Advances to Cultivators in consequence of scarcity and famine. The increase of 97,2 in England, excluding exchange, was due to the investment of a larger amount of the cash balance at a high rate of interest during a portion of the year, and to the large premium (68,9) obtained on the issue of India 2½ per cent. stock, for which no provision was made in the Budget.

94. The increase of 257,5 over the actuals of the previous year was due to the premium on loans in England and India and the interest on the cash balance in England mentioned above.

95. Act XXI of 1896 authorized the raising of the Paper Currency Investment from 8,000,0 to 10,000,0. The operation was carried out in December 1896,—as notified in the Gazette of India by Notifications No 5366 and 5367 of 18th December,—3 per cent. Stock of the nominal value of 2,048,7 being created and issued for the purpose in exchange for 2,000,0 paid out of the Currency Reserve. The issue price was R97-10, the Current market price of the Stock. The investment bore interest from the 31st December 1896 and the first half-yearly payment consequently fell due on 30th June 1897, so that no interest was realised on it during the year. The receipts from interest on loans to Municipal and other Public Corporations, Native States, Landholders, etc., are gradually increasing with the increase in the amount of loans chiefly to Mofussil Municipalities, as will be seen from the following statement, which shows the balances of the different kinds of loans during the last five years :—

96. The interest paid in 1896-97 by the Local Governments to the Government of India on account of the loans held on the Provincial account amounted to 147,4, while the actual sum realised by them and credited to Provincial revenues amounted in the aggregate to 126,8. The fluctuations under the different heads are explained below.

97. Under Intrest on Loans to Native States, the small receipt in India is on account of the loan granted to the Sultan of Muskat. In Bengal the payment of interest on the loan granted to the Maharajah of Cooch Behar was postponed during the year under report, under order of the Government of India, No. 4954-A., dated 18th October 1895. Under Presidency Corporations the short receipt of 40,0 in Bengal, in comparison with the Budget Estimate, was due to remission of arrear interest for 1894-95 on the loan to the Calcutta Port Trust, for the Kidderpore Docks, under the order of the Government of India, No. 4465-A., dated 20th October 1896.

98. Under Interest on Loans to Municipal and other Public Corporations, the increase in India of 9,8, in comparison with the Budget Estimate, was on account of current and arrear interest (5,4) on loans to the Cantonment Committee, Secunderabad, for water-works, which were not completely drawn until 26th March 1896, and on account of interest on loans and advances (4,4) previously credited in the Military Department, for which no provision under this head was accordingly made in the Budget. In Bengal the Budget has proved too high. The excess over the previous year's actuals was due to 3,2 having been realized from the Howrah Municipality for the larger advances made during 1895-96, and 6 from the Bhagulpore Municipality towards the loan granted to it in the same year. The decrease of 7,2 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh was due to unexpected repayments of 5½ lakhs by the Cawnpore and 2 lakhs by the Benares Municipality (2,5), to the utilization of only a small portion of the grant placed at the disposal of the Local Government for loans to Municipalities (2,8), and to the default in payment of fixed instalments by the Agra and Naini Tal Municipalities (1,4). The variations between the actuals and Budget Estimate in the Punjab were chiefly due to the interest on the fresh loan advanced to the Dera Ghazi Khan Municipality during 1895-97 having fallen due after the close of the year.

99. Under Interest on Loans to Landholders and other Notabilities, the only noteworthy difference was in Bengal, where the short receipts, in comparison with the actuals of the previous year, were due to the complete discharge in 1895-96 of the loan made to the Deo Estate in Gya. Under Interest on Advances to Cultivators, the receipts fell below both the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year by 5,5, owing chiefly to the prevailing scarcity, in consequence of which the cultivators were unable to meet their liabilities. Largely increased advances were made under this head during the year, but the interest on them did not fall due till the following year. The increase in Burma was due to interest on large outstandings and heavy advances made during the year to cultivators on account of cattle disease and agricultural distress. Under Other items the receipts in India included premium (124,2) on the 3 per cent. loan of 1896-97 reduced by commission (6,2) on 3½ per cent. loans transferred to that loan, and the interest on the advances to a Siladar cavalry regiment, for which no provision was made in the Budget. The receipts in Bengal exceeded the Budget and the actuals of the preceding year by 1,8 and 2,6, respectively, due to the realization of interest on arrear collections of Public Works and Road Cess.

100. In England the large increase was due to the investment of a larger amount of cash balance at higher rates of interest than was estimated for a portion of the year, and to the premium (68,9) realized on the issue of India 2½ per cent. stock, which was not anticipated when the Budget was framed.

101 The total charges in this section showed a saving of 222,8 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 590,9 as compared with the actuals, of the previous year. As regards the former, Exchange accounts for a decrease of 241,8. The increase of 19,0 under the other heads is mainly the result of a reduced transfer to Railway, etc., Interest (54,1), owing to a reduction of the Railway Capital Expenditure incurred during the year, and of larger claims for arrear interest on loans in course of discharge (48,5) (two of the 3½ per cent. loans having been brought into this category by notifications issued in the course of the year), counterbalanced by no interest (79,0) having been paid on account of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund (interest for two years having been paid in 1895-96).

102. As compared with the actuals of the previous year, the saving was due partly to the rise in the rate of Exchange, partly to the transfer of a larger portion of interest charges in India to Railway and Irrigation Revenue Account (175,3) in consequence of Additional Capital Expenditure on State Railways and Irrigation Works and partly to the inclusion in the account of 1895-96 of two years' interest (153,6) on account of the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, whereas there was no payment on this account in the year under report.

103. Before proceeding to examine the interest charges in detail, it is usual to exhibit the amount of Loans raised or discharged during the year, and the following figures supply the necessary particulars for 1895-96 and 1896-97:—

104. In India the public loan of 4,000,0 provided for in the Budget was raised in July at 3 per cent. at an average price of R103-1-10½ per cent., and, as explained under the Revenue head, 2,048,7 was added to this loan in December 1896, on the payment by the Currency Department of 2,000,0. During the year notice of discharge of the 3½ per cent. loans of 1853-54 and 1893-94 was given by Finance Department Notification No. 3850, dated 4th September 1896, with the option of transfer to the 3 per cent. loan of this year. This option was very generally accepted and 4,918,7 was transferred, while 352,3 was discharged. Of the balance of loans previously advertized for discharge 12,7 and 237,2 were paid on account of the 4½ and 4 per cent. loans respectively. Of loans bearing interest 120,0 was paid on account of the Gwalior loan, in accordance with the terms of the agreement with the Durbar under which the loan was originally taken.

105. In England 2,400,0 India stock at 2½ per cent. was issued, as provided for in the Budget Estimate, for the discharge of India Debentures and South India Railway Debentures; but against the 2,000,0 provided for temporary loans on security of India Bills it was unnecessary to take more than 1,500,0. The small item of 5,2 was paid on account of 4 per cent. India stock, which had remained unclaimed since 1888.

106. The total Interest on debt paid in India and in England is shown below:—

108. The payments in India exceeded the Budget by 46,4, chiefly in Interest on loans in course of discharge on account of the discharge of the unconverted portion of the 4 and 3½ per cent. loan, the latter having been adverti·ed for discharge in the course of the year. In England there was a decrease of 17,1 on account of India Bills, and of 9,1 on account of temporary loans from the Bank of England as such loans were not taken to the estimated extent.

The lower deduction in India under Ordinary Debt was due partly to these higher payments and partly to the reduction of the Railway Capital expenditure and the consequent reduction (54,1) of the transfer from Ordinary to Railway Interest.

109. The above excess of 46,4, requires sanction; the greater part was foreseen and an extra grant might have been sanctioned before the close of the year. The excesses in the amounts chargeable under this head to Bombay (4,9), Central Provinces (7), and North-Western Provinces (7) have been sanctioned by the Local Governments.

110. The expenditure in India, as compared with the Budget Estimate and the actuals of 1895-96 showed savings of 55,7 and 148,4, respectively. The saving, as compared with the Budget Estimate (77,6) and the actuals of the previous year (153,0) occurred chiefly in India under Treasury Notes and Service Funds owing to the adjustment of interest due to the Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund for 1895-96 having been made in the accounts of that year as noticed in the previous year's report, and to the reversion to the former practice by which the interest for 1896-97 will be adjusted in the accounts of 1897-98. This decrease was partly counterbalanced by an increase of 1,1 in Madras on account of interest on the Government Securities held by the "Madras Military Assistant Surgeon's Fund" which were converted into cash in 1895-96. Under Interest on Special Loans the increase of 5,2 in Bombay was on account of the transfer from "27—Territorial and Political Pensions" to this head of Wasika Pensions under the third Oudh Loan.

111. The usual detail of the Interest on Treasury Notes and Service Funds and Savings Bank Deposits are noted below :—

The increase in India under Interest on Savings Bank Deposits was chiefly on account of Interest on Post Office Savings Bank Deposits (14,6), and was due to the withdrawal with interest at the end of 1896-97 of the balance (558,7) of the East Indian Railway Provident Fund which was deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank partly in 1895-96 and partly in 1896-97. The Presidency Savings Banks balances were transferred to the Post Office Savings Bank in the course of the year; and the result of the year's transactions was a large net reduction of the balances of both institutions combined. Under Miscellaneous the increase in Bengal was due to an adjustment of 7 under "Refund of Interest" in rectification of an erroneous classification made in the Books of 1895-96 under XII—Interest instead of under Imperial Loans and Advances on account of repayment of the loan granted to the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. The decrease in Bombay, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to special payments in that year to the Thakor of Amod and Kherwada.

112. The excesses of 5,5 in Bombay and of 1,0 in Madras are covered by additional grants of 5,8 sanctioned in Government of India letter No. 1346A., dated 23rd March 1897, and of 1,5 sanctioned in Government of India letter No. 1186A., dated 13th March 1897. The excesses in the other Provinces, which arise mostly in connection with the interest on the deposits in State Railway Provident Institutions, have been reported to the Government of India.

113. The main difference between the actuals and Budget of 1896-97 and between the actuals of the two years occurs under the head of Mint, and was due chiefly to the enhanced profits on copper coinage owing to the large absorption of copper coin in connection with Famine Relief works.

114. Under Post Office the receipts from sale of Postage Stamps showed somewhat more than the normal increase, but they are counterbalanced in part by the larger deduction on account of net payments to English, Colonial, and other Foreign Post Offices, owing to the adjustment of exchange (12,1) on the sterling payments under this head, which was not allowed for in the Budget.

115. The gradual improvement in the net results of the transactions of the Postal Department for the last five years is shown by the following figures :—

	Net Expenditure.	Net Receipts.

1894-95	...	25,5
1895-96	...	69,7
1896-97	...	80,4

116. The improvement in the net earnings in the Telegraph Department over the Budget Estimate was due to lower expenditure (partly owing to the improvement in exchange) than was estimated ; the expenditure was, however, considerably in excess of that in 1895-96 and the unfavourable result as compared with the previous year, is thus mainly accounted for; there was, however, a falling off in receipts, mainly, message revenue as compared both with the Budget and the actuals of 1895-96.

117. The total revenue exceeded the Budget Estimate by 12,8, and the actuals of the previous year by 70,0. The increase over the Budget occurred mainly under Sale of Ordinary Stamps (11,3) and of Service Stamps (9,3), due to the growth of the operations of the department being slightly above the normal, but this improvement was partly counterbalanced by the enhanced deduction under Payments to English, Colonial, and other Foreign Post Offices, owing to the adjustment made for the first time in the accounts of the year under report, of exchange (12,1), on the sterling payment to the London Post Office for the exchange of letters and parcels. The improvement of 4,6 under Mail Cart, Parcel Van, Passenger and Goods service was mainly due to the increase in the traffic, consequent on the introduction of through booking arrangements on the Simla-Kalka line.

118. As compared with the result of the previous year, there is an improvement all down the line.

119. The main difference occurs under Message Revenue, the falling off in which is due to the closing of military operations during 1896-97, and to a decrease in foreign messages owing to the bad state of trade in consequence of plague and famine; the increase under Rent of Wires, etc., in 1896-97, is chiefly due to the final adjustment of the rebate allowed to the East Indian Railway having been effected in the accounts for 1895-96. The falling off (3,4) under the same head as compared with the Budget is owing to a reduction in the rate of rent sanctioned in the course of the year. In the Revised Estimate the Message Revenue was over-estimated.

120. In the Budget a large increase (7,9) of Message Revenue was anticipated, but the receipts were even less than those of the previous year by 1,5. The increase of 11,2 over the Revised Estimate was almost entirely due to the receipts through the Indian Telegraph Department during the last two months of the year having been unexpectedly high.

121. The receipts under this head were better than the Budget and the actuals of the previous year by 119,4 and 115,7, respectively. Of this increase 117,6 as compared with the Budget Estimate and 109,4 as compared with the actuals of the previous year occurred under Gain on Copper Coinage, consequent upon an unprecedentedly large absorption of copper coin in connection with Famine Relief works. Under Seignorage on Silver is credited the percentage charged for the coinage of British dollars for the Straits Settlements, which was double that of the previous year, and was also considerably in excess of the Budget figure.

122. Under Other Receipts the decrease at the Calcutta Mint was due to smaller demands for new coins from Foreign States. The increase in Bombay was due to the larger receipts under gain on coinage operations owing to the increased dollar coinage mentioned above and to work done for other departments and private parties, which was not allowed for in the original Estimate.

123. The expenditure in India exceeded the Budget Estimate by 21,2 and the actuals of the previous year by 61,9; both these excesses were, however, more than covered by increased receipts. The increase, the principal causes of which are detailed below, was not large under any one head.

124. The small excess (1,1) under Chief Office, Calcutta, as compared with the Budget, was due to the deputation of the Director-General on special duty for 2 months (6), to arrangements made in place of officers on privilege leave (4), to the employment of larger Temporary Establishments than was anticipated (5), and to the rent of the building hired in the course of the year for the accommodation of a portion of the Comptroller's office (2), partly counterbalanced by savings (6) under various heads. Under Presidency and District Offices the excess of 6,4 was due chiefly to the grant of compensation for dearness of grain to Postal Officials, not provided for in the Budget (6,6), to increase under Travelling Allowances (3,0), to insufficient provision for stores supplied by the Aligarh workshops to the Bengal and Madras Circles and the Railway Mail Service (4,6), and to increased salary charges, especially for the entertainment of 12 additional Inspectors (2,4), partly counterbalanced by savings under Exchange Compensation Allowance (1,1), under Combined Post and Telegraph Offices (3,5, including 1,8 recovered from the Telegraph Department on account of arrear charges and brought to account by deduction from charges), and under various contingent charges of Post Offices (5,7). The excess under this head over the actuals of the previous year was due partly to the above causes and partly to the normal expansion of Post Office Establishment. Under Road Establishment and Contingencies the excess of 1,4 was due to an increase in the cost of the mail lines to Gilgit and Toungyi made after the Budget was prepared (1,3), to payment of grain compensation allowance (2,0), and to excess charges for warm clothing and rations to Runners, etc., in Kashmir (1,0), partly counterbalanced by various petty savings. The savings under Railway charges occurred chiefly in the payments to the East Indian, South Indian, North-Western and East Coast Railways. Under Mail Cart, Parcel Van, Passenger and Goods Service establishment and charges the excess of 11,4 was due to the payment of grain compensation allowance on the Simla-Kalka line (3,8), to the hire of a larger number of bullocks and mules for that line (2,6), owing to the increase in the traffic already noticed in connection with the increased revenue under this head, and to the enhancement of the cost of maintenance of transport animals on the line (5,0), owing to famine prices. The excess, as compared with the previous year, was due to the same causes. The excess of 3,1 under Subsidies was due to an arrear payment of 4,0 to the Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Company, counterbalanced by the non-payment to the India General Steam Navigation Company of the subsidy for January and February 1897 (2), and by a reduction in the subsidy of the Flotilla Company (7). The excess of 4,6 under Stationery and Printing was due to an under-estimate of the supplies made and the printing work done by the Superintendent of Government Printing, Calcutta. The total excess charge of 21,2 under this head is made up of 21,4 excess in the Imperial Charge, counterbalanced by a saving of 2 in the District Post charges; under which there were, however, excesses in the Central Provinces (8), North-Western Provinces (5), and Punjab (8), of which the first two have been sanctioned by the Local Governments. The Imperial excess of 21,4 and the Provincial excess of 8 in the Punjab require the sanction of the Government of India. The extra charges due to famine are estimated at 14,6. The savings under Exchange Compensation Allowance are 1,0.

125. Exclusive of exchange the expenditure during 1896-97 was 50,1 more than that of the previous year, and occurred chiefly (44,0) on Revenue Account. It was due partly (17,6) to increased signalling charges, necessitated by the opening of new offices, and partly (19,1) to the maintenance of increased wire mileage and to heavier renewals and repairs being found necessary, owing both to the occurrence of disastrous floods and storms and to the increasing age of the main lines. There was also an increase of 7,4 in the general charges owing, chiefly to the share of establishment charges debited to capital account and other departments being smaller than in the previous year. The Budget Estimate provided more than sufficient for all these extra charges, but was not worked up to mainly because of smaller outlay on works and repairs than was anticipated, because of old rails locally purchased having been used on certain railway telegraph lines instead of iron-posts obtained from England.

126. The extra charges due to famine are estimated at 4,8. The savings under Exchange Compensation Allowance amounted to 4,6.

127. The short outlay of 9,6 in India, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was due to petty savings under various heads chiefly in salaries and Exchange Compensation Allowance and to no new cable having been manufactured during the year.

128. Under Establishments the accounts showed small savings both in Calcutta and Bombay, of which 6 was under Exchange Compensation Allowance.

129. The increase under Loss of Weight in Coinage, both in Calcutta and Bombay, over the Budget and accounts of the preceding year was due to the recoinage of large amounts of uncurrent coin, larger even than in the previous year.

130. The increase under Other charges in Calcutta was the result of heavy expenditure in the purchase of wood, which was authorized in Financial Department No. 917-A., dated 24th February 1897. The balance (4) of the excess in Calcutta and the excess (2,8) in Bombay require the sanction of the Government of India.

131. The receipts in this section showed an improvement of 20,8 over the Budget Estimate but fell short of the actuals of the previous year by 5,9. As compared with the Budget 24,2 of the increase occurred under Police, due mainly to increased receipts from Punitive Police Posts in Bombay and to larger realizations of Cattle Pound receipts; 16,9 under Marine due to larger recoveries on account of hire of vessels employed in conveying troops to and from Suakin and from Mombassa, and 11,8 under Medical, chiefly in Bombay, due to the transfer of certain dispensaries from Excluded to Incorporated Local Funds. These increases were partly counterbalanced by decreases of 25,8 under Law and Justice—Courts of Law, and 6,0 under Law and Justice—Jails, the former mainly owing to a decrease in the amount of Magisterial fines in some provinces.

132. The difference in the result, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, is explained mainly by the Marine figures, which show a falling off of 8,9 when compared with the actuals of 1895-96 against the increase of 16,9 compared with the Budget. This difference is due to a special refund in 1895-96 to Provincial from a Pilotage Fund in Madras, and also to there having been some special recoveries in 1895-96 to set off against a part of the larger recoveries for hire of vessels mentioned above.

133. The receipts under this head fell off by 25,8 as compared with the Budget Estimate and by 21,7 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. Of these decreases 25,3 and 17,5 respectively occurred under General Fees, Fines, and Forfeitures, the receipts under which consist chiefly of Magisterial fines, and are of an uncertain character; the estimate, however, appears to have been pitched too high in Bengal and Madras, in which more than half the variation from the Budget occurred. Under Sale-proceeds of Unclaimed and Escheated Property the improvement in India was due to the lapses of estates in the hands of the Administrator General being larger than usual. Under Court-fees realised in cash the revenue in the North-Western Provinces and Bombay is alleged, like the Stamp Revenue, to have been affected by the prevalence of famine and plague. Under Other Receipts the increase in Bengal (1,4) was due to larger receipts from fees for examination of pleaders.

134. Under Sale-proceeds of Jail Manufactures the decrease of 1,6, as compared with the Budget Estimate, is the net outcome of variations in the different Provinces, the chief of which are a falling off of 12,8 in the North-Western Provinces, and an increase of 11,0 in Bengal; the former was due to the famine which caused not only a smaller demand for jail manufactures, but also a smaller outturn of marketable articles in consequence of the convicts having been engaged for a considerable part of the year in making baskets to be used on Famine Relief Works; while the latter was due to large supplies of manufactured articles especially to the Military Department. The only other matters requiring notice are that the Budget figure in the Central Provinces was an over-estimate and that the improvement in the Punjab was due partly to a change in classification, the price of country paper supplied by jails and used for lithographic printing having been credited to this head instead of to the head Other Press Receipts under XXIII—Stationery and Printing. The net receipts under this head after deducting the corresponding charges under 19B, are given below :—

135. The receipts under this head exceeded the Budget Estimate by 24,2 and the actuals of the previous year by 19,0. The improvement is spread over all the minor heads; the largest proportion (8,2) being under Police supplied to Public Departments, Private Companies and Persons, and occurring chiefly in Bombay, where it was due to larger receipts on account of Punitive Police Posts. Under Presidency Police the increase in Bengal (1,8) was due to large receipts chiefly from fees and fines; in Bombay (2 9) it was due to the employment of a greater number of Ramosis (private watchmen) owing to the absence of many of the inhabitants of the Town and Island of Bombay in consequence of the plague scare. Under Fees, Fines and Forfeitures the net improvement was 5,9, the variations in most cases being due to fluctuations in Cattle Pound receipts. Under Other Receipts the total shows an increase of 2,9 only as compared with the Budget and of 4,7 as compared with 1895-96, but there are considerable variations in the several provinces. The principal variation from the Budget was a decrease in Assam (5,7), the Budget Estimate not having fully anticipated the effect of a change of system which resulted in smaller recoveries on account of rations and clothing of the Military Police Battalions. There were, on the other hand, increases in the Central Provinces (1,1), Upper Burma (4,0) and Lower Burma (4) due to adjustments of value of arms and stores returned to the Military Department; and in Bengal (3,0) due mainly to larger recoveries on account of Village Police, which have risen steadily for the last three years.

136. The receipts under this head exceeded the Budget Estimate by 16,9, due entirely to the increase under Dockyard Services, etc., which resulted from large recoveries (19,9) on account of hire of vessels employed on conveying troops to and from Suakin and from Mombassa, not provided for in the Budget. Under all other heads the actuals fairly approximated to the Budget Estimate, but it may be noted that under Other Receipts the decrease in India (3,1) as compared with the Budget Estimate, and (4,3) as compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to the value of coal supplied to Her Majesty's ships in the Persian Gulf, provided for under this head, having been deducted from expenditure in the accounts.

137. The decrease (8,9) as compared with the previous year's actuals is mainly due to the large credit under Other Receipts in Madras in 1895-96 which represents the refund to Provincial of a contribution made in the previous year to the Pamban Pilotage Fund on account of the Dredger Wenlock. There were also some special receipts under Dockyard services in 1895-96, which reduced the net improvement under that head, explained above.

138. The receipts fell short of the Budget Estimate by 2,2, but exceeded those of the previous year by 1,1. The only point requiring notice is that the improvement in the North-Western Provinces, as compared with the previous year, was partly due to the inclusion in 1896-97 of receipts in connection with the Thomason Civil Engineering College formerly accounted for in the Public Works Department.

139. Under this head the receipts in India exceeded the Budget Estimate, and the actuals of the previous year by 11,8 and 10,1, respectively. This improvement was mainly due to an increase under Hospital Receipts in Bombay, owing partly to the transfer to Incorporated Local Funds of certain Dispensaries previously maintained by Excluded Local Funds, and partly to the recovery of arrear contributions from the Port Trust towards the European General Hospital; there was also an increase in Madras under Contributions in consequence of a large contribution of 2,1 by the Rajah of Bobbili (Vizagapatam district) towards the maintenance of the local dispensary and Gosha hospital.

140. The variations in the total receipts are insignificant; the only noticeable variations in details are mentioned below. Under Cinchona Plantations there was an increase of 4.7 in Madras, due to larger supplies of quinine and febrifuge to the Medical Departments of Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, to larger local sales, and to the expansion of the sale of small packets of the drug by Postal Agency, while on the other hand the sales in Bengal through Postal Agency fell short of expectations. Under Labour and Emigration the rise in the Central Provinces was due to the increased emigration of coolies from the Chhattisgarh Division to the Assam Tea Plantations. The improvements were partly counterbalanced by a falling off under Receipts on account of Public Exhibitions and Fairs of 4,2, chiefly in the North-Western Provinces and Punjab, owing to the prevalence of famine.

141. The expenditure in this section showed an increase of 45,7 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 272,3 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. As compared with the Budget Estimate there was an increase of 111,0 under Law and Justice—Jails, and of 42,7 under Police, due chiefly to high prices of food-grains, and payment of grain compensation, and in the North-Western Provinces to an increase in Jail population; and of 22,8 under Political due to the payment of arrears of subsidy to the Amir of Afghanistan. These excesses were largely counterbalanced by savings under several heads, the principal being one of 72,0 under Education, which is spread over all the Provinces and due chiefly to some special grants provided in the Budget not having been utilized and to loose estimating in respect of local charges.

142. Of the excess, as compared with the actuals of the previous year, 124,4 occurred under Law and Justice—Jails, and 115,8 under Police, due mainly to the causes named above; 45,8 under Medical, due chiefly to the prevalence of bubonic plague, and other epidemics; 39,6 under Education, due to the extension of primary education, and to a revision in the scale of the tuitional staff of the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee; and 28,0 under Scientific and other Minor Departments, chiefly in Survey charges. These excesses were partly counterbalanced by a decrease of 58,8 under Political, the higher charges of the previous year being due to the visit of Sardar Nasarrula Khan to England; and of 22,8 under Marine chiefly in the expenditure in England.

143. The Indian expenditure fell short of the actuals of the previous year by 6,8 but exceeded the Budget Estimate by 11,5. The excess was spread over every Province except India, and was very petty in each individual case, except in Bengal. The Imperial excess in Bengal is purely nominal as it is met by savings under the same heads in the other columns; the Provincial excess occurred chiefly under Secretariat, and was due mainly to the deputation of officers on special duty, to the absence of officers on privilege leave, to additional expenditure on establishments and contingencies owing to famine, and in Bombay also to heavy telegram charges in connection with the plague. Some of these excesses have been met by the Local Governments by re-appropriation, and some still require sanction as shown in the above table. The excess in Bengal should have been sanctioned before the close of the year.

144. Under Salaries of Governor General, Governors, etc., the excess of 1,8 in Burma was due to the absence of the Chief Commissioner on privilege leave for three months: the small excesses in the Punjab and Assam were due to transit pay and travelling allowance on transfer. Under Staff and Household the excess of 5 in Bengal was due to increased payments on account of furniture and sumptuary allowances sanctioned by the Secretary of State in December 1896 for the Lieutenant-Governor; that of 3 in the North-Western Provinces was due to the Lieutenant-Governor's expenditure for contract contingencies having exceeded the fixed grants by 5, by which amount the contract grant for 1897-98 has been reduced; and that of 2,7 in Bombay arose out of heavy telegram charges in connection with the plague and famine. Under Legislative Council the excess in India, to which should be added the payment (5) made in Burma to an additional member of the Viceregal Council, was due to the deputation of Sir H. T. Prinsep on special duty for the revision of the Procedure Codes.

145. The Secretariat charges exceeded the Budget by 14,1, of which 1,0 was in India, 1,5 in the Central Provinces, 1,6 in Bengal, 4,4 in Madras, 4,0 in Bombay, and small excesses occurred in Assam, the North-Western Provinces and Punjab, while there was a saving of 4 in Burma. The details of the India Secretariat charges are given below:—

1895-96. Accounts.	Secretariat (India).	Budget.	1896-97. Revised.	Accounts.
32,1	Financial Department	30,8	29,9	29,8

228,2	TOTAL	215,4	212,6	216,4

The excess in the Revenue and Agricultural Department (5,3) was due chiefly to increased charges for Sir E. C. Buck's deputation on special duty, and to special charges in connection with famine, including the appointment of a Deputy Secretary for famine work. That in the Home Department (3,3) was due partly to the Secretary's absence on three months' privilege leave (1,3), and partly to higher telegram charges owing to scarcity and plague (2,8), counterbalanced to the extent of 8 by savings under establishment. The only noticeable decrease occurred in the Foreign Department (3,9), mainly in telegram charges. The higher charges of the previous year were due chiefly to large telegram charges, specially in the Foreign Department. In the Local Secretariats the variations occurred almost entirely in consequence of the absence of Secretariat Officers on leave, or the deputation of officers to the Secretariat on special duty, in some cases necessitated by famine and scarcity. Contingent, especially telegram, charges were also higher in the Central Provinces, North-Western Provinces and Bombay, owing to famine, and in the last case to plague. In Madras a portion of the excess was due to the payment of four months' salary of the newly-appointed Secretary to the Local and Municipal Department (1,0).

146. Tour Charges in India were under-estimated. The actuals for the last three years have been 23,7; 20,7; and 19,5. In Burma and in the Punjab the tours were more extended than usual. Under Commissioners the excess of 7 in the Central Provinces occurred partly under salaries and partly under contingencies owing to famine work; and those of 6 in Assam (met by reappropriation) and of 2,4 in Bengal were due to the payment of privilege leave allowances of officers. Under Inspector General of Stamps, Registration, etc., the excess in Assam was due to the grant of a personal allowance to the late Mr. McCabe sanctioned after the Budget, and that in Bombay was due to the payment of privilege leave allowances to the Inspector General. The total charges for Account and Currency Offices shown below.—

The excess under Currency Offices occurred chiefly in Madras, and was due to the heavy charges (4,2) on account of remittances sent to other provinces, chiefly in connection with famine, which were improperly charged under this head instead of under 32.—Miscellaneous. The saving under Civil Account Offices was due to the deputation of an officer to the Mysore State and of Superintendents to act as Chief Superintendents. Under Allowance to Presidency Banks the provision in India for payments connected with the transfer of the Presidency Savings Banks to the Post Office was not required, as the payments were adjusted locally, resulting in an excess, in Bengal, of 8. The excess in Bombay due to this cause, was partly counterbalancened by the non-paymt during the year of the second instalment of the charge on account of Public Debt duties. Under General Establishment of Local Fund

Offices the saving occurred chiefly in Madras owing to an over-estimate of the increase expected with the establishment of additional Punchayat Unions.

147. The expenditure in England showed an increase of 8,7, of which 4,7 was due to a larger demand for currency notes; 1,8, mainly to the purchase of a large number of the Reports of the Royal Commission on Opium for transmission to India; and the balance to the charge for the erection of an additional story in the India Office building, partly counterbalanced by savings.

148. The Indian expenditure showed a saving of 17,5 as compared with the Budget Estimate and an increase of 5,7 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The saving was not considerable under any head and was spread over most of the Provinces. There were, however, excesses in the Punjab and the Central Provinces and a petty excess in Burma. In the Punjab the excess (8,6) occurred under Criminal Courts (7,5), and under Sessions Courts (1,2). The former was caused by increased charges for diet and road-money of witnesses (3,4) and by petty increases under several other detailed heads, including 7 on account of grain compensation to which also is due the whole of the increase under Sessions Courts. The excess in the Central Provinces (2,1), occurred under Judicial Commissioner (1,3) and Criminal Courts, (1,2) there being some savings to set off against these. The excess under the former was due to the temporary appointment of an additional Judicial Commissioner and to the deputation of an officer on special duty to assist the Judicial Commissioner; under Criminal Courts the excesses occurred mainly under diet money, etc. (1,0), of witnesses. The large excess in the Punjab should have been sanctioned before the close of the year.

149. The variations under this head are largely due to leave and acting allowances and to the fall in the rate of Exchange Compensation Allowance. The other important variations are dealt with below. Under High Court, etc., the decrease (2,3) in Madras was due to the appointment, for a part of the year only, of an additional Puisne Judge provided for in the Budget. Under Law Officers there was an excess of 7,1 as compared with the Budget Estimate and of 4,9 as compared with the previous year. The excess was due to higher payments of pleaders' and barristers' fees in Civil and Criminal cases in Bengal (3,0) and the North-Western Provinces (4,7). Under Civil and Sessions Courts there was a saving of 4,7 as compared with the Budget Estimate and an increase of 3,8 as compared with the previous year. The saving occurred chiefly in Lower Burma (2,7), Madras (6,2) and Bombay (4,3), partly counterbalanced by excesses chiefly in Bengal (6,8). In Lower Burma the saving was due chiefly to the higher rate of pay provided for the Judge of Moulmein not having been sanctioned, and partly also to less travelling charges and less diet and travelling allowances of witnesses; in Madras it was due chiefly to the absence on leave out of India of a larger number of senior officers than was expected (2,9), and to smaller expenditure on process serving establishments (2,1), and in Bombay it was due partly to the provision for reorganizing the Judicial Staff in Sind not having been utilised (1,4). In Bengal the excess was due chiefly to the payment of compensation for dearness of food (5,0), but partly also to larger remuneration to copyists (1,0) and larger payments to process serving establishment (8). Under Criminal Courts the excess in Upper and Lower Burma was due partly to the transfer of a moiety of the local and house-rent allowances of Sub-Divisional Officers from Land Revenue to this head, and partly to a larger outlay on fees to interpreters, and diet and travelling allowances of witnesses, and in Lower Burma also to increased expenditure for process servers owing to an increase in the number of processes. Under Refunds the charges are of a fluctuating nature and in Bengal proved unusually low. The decrease in Bombay, as compared with the previous year was due to a special refund in 1895-96 on account of a lapsed deposit in the Sholapur district.

150. The excess in the expenditure in England was due to the payment of the deputation allowance of the Government Advocate, Punjab, while on duty, in England, in connection with an appeal to the Privy Council.

151. The Indian expenditure was in excess of the Budget Estimate by 109,9 and of the actuals of the previous year by 125,4. The excess occurred mainly under Other Jail Charges (98,6) and was contributed to by every province except India and Upper Burma. It was due chiefly to the high prices of food-grain and to purchases of grain for stock in anticipation of a still further rise in prices, and in the North-Western Provinces to an increase in Jail population. The excess due to these causes was partly counterbalanced by various savings, that in Bengal under supplies and services being the largest. The excess in Assam was sanctioned by the Local Government by reappropriation. The excess in North-Western Provinces of 46,9, as an additional grant, was sanctioned by the Government of India (F. D., No. 1372A, dated 25th March 1897). Under Jail Manufactures the excess in Bengal was due to the purchase of raw materials consequent on the increased demand for manufactured articles chiefly by the Military and Police Departments and has been partly covered by an increase under the corresponding receipt head. The excess in the Punjab was due to brick-making having been started in the Mooltan Jail. These excesses, to cover which extra grants should have been obtained before the close of the year, were partly counterbalanced by savings in the other provinces due to smaller demands for manufactured articles and less purchase of raw materials.

152. The excess under Convict Charges at Port Blair, etc., was due chiefly to increased expenditure on account of Commissariat supplies (4,7) and Passage money, etc. (1,6) partly counterbalanced by various petty savings.

153. Larger demands for stores than were expected caused the excess over the Estimate in the expenditure in England.

154. The Indian expenditure showed an excess of 42,6 as compared with the Budget Estimate, and of 116,4 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The excess over the Budget Estimate was due almost entirely to the payment of compensation for dearness of food-grains.

155. Expenditure in excess of the Budget occurred in the Central Provinces (3,3), Bengal (22,0), Punjab (16,8), Madras (6,6), and Bombay (13,8). The charge for grain compensation accounted in each of these Provinces except Madras for a considerable portion of the excess as shown below:—

The excess was also due in the Central Provinces to the arming of the Police with converted Sniders (1,9) in place of the old Brown Bess Muskets returned to the Ordnance Department, for which an extra credit (1,1) has been obtained on the receipt side, as already explained, and to the entertainment of extra Police (5) in consequence of an increase of crime; in Bengal to extra charges under District Executive Force (22,3), owing chiefly to the creation of new out-posts, and increase in the number of Inspectors and Sub-Inspectors, and to larger outlay under other Police and on travelling expenses, and under Village Police (5,1) to increased establishment and larger grants for rewards; in the Punjab to increased travelling allowances under District Police (1,7), and to a higher charge under Railway Police owing to an under-estimate for local allowances (1,1), and to a special adjustment for rent of quarters (1,5) of the North-Western Railway Police made under the orders of the Local Government after the Revised Estimate had been framed; in Madras, to the entertainment of extra police in consequence of famine and to extra contingent expenditure, in consequence partly of the Moplah outbreak under District Police; in Bombay owing to the failure to recover from the Municipality the full amount due on account of Presidency Police (5,9), which is brought to account by deduction from charges, and to increased charges under District Police for Punitive Police (4,8), due to the establishment of Punitive Police posts in several districts.

156. The excesses in Bengal and the Punjab are not trifling, and they were in part foreseen some time before the end of the year; they should, therefore, have been met by additional grants made within the year.

157. The variations under the several heads are generally due to the absence of officers on leave, to Exchange Compensation Allowance or to the grain compensation charges mentioned above. Important variations other than these are noticed below.

158. Under Presidency Police the difference between the actuals of the two years in Bombay was due to the large recovery of arrear contribution (5,2) from the Bombay Municipality in 1895-96. Under Superintendence the excess in Bengal (1,5) was due partly to the adjustment under this head of the cost of tents supplied to the District Executive Force and in Madras partly to the deputation of the Inspector General of Police on special duty (4). Under District Executive Force the excess was contributed to by all the provinces except Upper and Lower Burma and the North-Western Provinces, and was due chiefly to the payment of grain compensation allowance. Even in the North-Western Provinces the saving was materially reduced by the special expenditure caused by the Famine; a saving of 8,0 occurred in the pay, etc., of the Police Force, and of 1,6 under General Police, due to the withdrawal of the additional Police in certain districts; but these with other general savings under various heads only just sufficed to cover the excess due to the payment of grain compensation (7,4), and to higher expenditure on escorts (3,9), owing mainly to the establishment of a temporary Jail at Chunar for the surplus Jail population of the province. The saving in Upper Burma of 9,5 was spread over almost all the sub-heads of expenditure, but was specially due to the Force being below the sanctioned strength, and to the savings having been taken in the Budget at too low a figure. In Lower Burma the small saving of 1,2 was the net result of a large saving in the pay of the Police Force, and of various petty excesses under the other sub-heads. The difference between the actuals of the two years is due largely to the causes already mentioned, but partially also to the introduction of further reforms under the reorganization scheme in the North-Western Provinces and to the reorganization and specially large clothing charges in Bombay. Under Government Railway Police the cost of the police force was charged in moieties to Upper and Lower Burma, though provided for in the latter. The saving of 3,4 in the North-Western Provinces arose from recoveries of arrears from Railway Companies; and that of 2,6 in Madras was due chiefly to the provision for the Railway Police scheme not having been utilised.

159. Under Village Police there was a saving in the North-Western Provinces of 7,1, due partly to the postponement of the revision of the village watch system under the Oudh Local Rates Act V of 1894 (4,8), and partly to savings in the grant for chaukidars and their clothing (1,5), and for rewards and good conduct allowance (5); and in Bombay of 2,3 due to the grant for Pagis or village trackers having been only partially utilised. These savings were partially counterbalanced by an excess in Bengal of 5,1, due to increase in the establishment sanctioned during the year, and to larger expenditure in connection with the District Chaukidari Reward Fund. The excess over the actuals of the previous year (4,8) in Bombay was due to higher cash payments to heads of Village Police, and to an increase in the Pagi Establishment. Under Special Police the saving in Lower Burma and the excess in Upper Burma were due to the anticipated transfer of three companies of Military Police from Upper to Lower Burma not having been effected during the year, and the decrease of 7,8 in Bengal was due to less expenditure on the purchase and transport of rations for the South Lushai Hill Police. The excess over the actuals of the previous year occurred chiefly in Assam due to the increased scale of good conduct pay, sanctioned in 1895-96, having been drawn throughout the year (1,3), to more compensation for dearness of provisions (8,6), and to expenditure on the Appatanang expedition (1,7), partly counterbalanced by a decrease of 2,1 due to the reduced scale of pay of sepoys having been in force throughout the year, and of 1,2 due to decreased outlay on arms and accoutrements and free rations. Under Other charges the largest excess occurred in the North-Western Provinces, and was due to the refund of the Punitive Police tax in the Ballia District which was ordered after the Budget was framed. Excesses also occurred in Lower Burma owing to the withdrawal of arms and ammunition on payment of compensation; in the Punjab due to an under-estimate, and in Bombay due to an addition sanctioned for the Steam Boiler Inspection Establishment. There were savings, on the other hand, chiefly in India due partly to the short strength of Thuggee and Dacoity Police Force; and in Madras due to the entertainment of the Boiler Inspection Establishment having been held in abeyance during the year.

160. The excess in the expenditure in England was due to a larger number of officers, than was provided for, having come out during the year.

161. The Indian expenditure fell short of the Budget Estimate by 10,5, but exceeded the actuals of the previous year by 40,2. The actuals exceeded the Budget in Assam (3) and Madras (7,8) only. Both these excesses were provided for by reappropriation. The excess in Madras occurred under "Other Charges" and was due to the special grant of 10,0 made to the Harbour Trust Board in satisfaction of its claim against the Madras Port Fund. The saving due to Exchange Compensation Allowance amounted to 3,0, of which 2,2 occurred in India.

162. Under General Supervision and Accounts and Marine Survey and Establishment the variations were due mainly to the absence of officers on furlough and deputation and to the lower rate of Exchange Compensation Allowance. Under Dockyards there was larger expenditure on wages of hired workmen owing to more work undertaken during the year (5,1), but this was more than counterbalanced by the larger recoveries from other departments and Local Governments (8,2). The net difference accounts for most of the saving under the head. Under Salaries and Allowances of Officers and men afloat, the excess in India occurred chiefly in pay and victualling charges, due to the employment of the Royal Indian Marine ships Warren Hastings, Clive and Canning in connection with the Suakin expedition, and the conveyance of troops from Mombassa to India, during the time they would have been laid up with reduced crews. This excess was counterbalanced by the increased recoveries under the corresponding Revenue Head, (see para. (136). The saving in Upper Burma (2,7) was due to the lending of vessels to other departments, to the steam launch Tammu which was wrecked in November 1896 not having been replaced, and to reductions in the establishment of the B. G. S. Patrick. Under Marine Stores, etc., the minus entry in India was the result of the system of adjusting recoveries by deductions from charges. The charges exceeded the Budget by 10,5 due to heavy expenditure on coal for the Clive, Canning and Warren Hastings while employed on trooping service outside Indian waters, to large purchases of pine planks used for the Suakin expedition, and to a specially large purchase of coir, but, on the other hand, the recoveries exceeded the anticipations by 26,3 due to larger recoveries for stores and coal supplied to other departments, but chiefly to the inclusion of recoveries on account of stores used for, and coal supplied to Her Majesty's ships in Persian waters, hitherto credited under XVII—Marine. In Burma the excess was due to the transfer to this head of the outstanding balance of Marine store and coal advance account. In Bengal the saving was due to the small outlay on repair and outfit of Pilot vessels. Under Other charges there was an excess of 18,6 in India; of which 7,9 occurred under hire of ships and vessels due mainly to the hire of the S. S. Lalpoora, consequent on the wreck of the Warren Hastings (7,4), 5,1 under repairs to and coal supplied to Her Majesty's ships of war in Indian Seas owing to the employment of two ships towards the end of the year; 2,7 for payment of compensation for loss of property, etc., to officers and crew of the Warren Hastings; and 2,6 for unusually high payments of freight on stores sent out from England. In Upper Burma the saving (3,9) was due chiefly to the abandonment of the proposal to build a flat and a launch at a cost of 2,4. In Lower Burma the decrease (15,3) was due chiefly to the provision for the Light Vessel Kalagauk and a lantern for her being only partially utilised (10,0), to the provision for two steam launches not having been used (3,6), and to the contract for the Mergui Mail Service not having been renewed (1,8).

163. The excess in England was due chiefly to higher rates of freight for coal (6,8), counterbalanced by less payments (2,5) towards the expenses of Her Majesty's ships employed in the Indian Seas owing to one ship not having been employed for Indian purposes for a portion of the year, and to no payment having been made on account of expenses connected with the manning of Indian Government Defence Vessels (2,4). The difference between the actuals of the two years occurred under the payments towards the expenses of Her Majesty's ships in the Indian seas, the payment for 1895-96 having included some arrears.

164. The expenditure showed a saving of 72,4 as compared with the Budget Estimate and an excess of 39,2 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The saving was spread over all the Provinces except Bengal (where there was a petty excess of 5), and occurred chiefly in Bombay (27,8), Madras (15,0), Lower Burma (9,3), and North-Western Provinces (8,9). The excess over the actuals of the previous year occurred chiefly in the North-Western Provinces where it was due to a revision in the scale of the tuitional staff for the Thomason Civil Engineering College, Roorkee.

165. The saving under Government Colleges was contributed to by all the provinces, except the Central Provinces (1,7) and Madras (5). The excess in the former was due to the transfer to this head of the pay of the staff of the High School Department of the Jubbulpore College, now abolished, which was provided for under Government Schools. Under Government Schools there was a saving of 26,2, to which all the provinces except India contributed. The decrease in the Central Provinces (2,9) has been partly explained in the preceding paragraph. In the North-Western Provinces it (4,3) occurred chiefly in consequence of the grant for the furtherance of primary education (3,7) being only partially utilised. The estimating under this head is always somewhat loose in the local section, in which the other variations chiefly occur; thus over-estimating is the only explanation of the large savings in Madras (9,1) and Bombay (4,9), and errors in estimating account for several of the variations in other Provinces. The excess over the actuals of the previous year was due chiefly to the extension of primary education in the North-Western Provinces. Under Grants-in-aid and Payments by Results there was a saving of 26,2. The greater part of this occurred in Bombay (18,5) and Lower Burma (6,4). In the former the saving was due mainly to the lump provision of 11,5 not having been utilised, but also to the transfer of 3,3 to Contributions from Provincial to Local, and of 5,6 to the Public Works Department for school buildings, in Lower Burma though the expenditure was considerably in excess (2,7) of that of the previous year, the very high provision in the Budget could not be worked up to Under Other charges the large saving in Madras was due to the provision (1,0) for Students' Hostels not having been utilised.

166. The Indian expenditure was less than the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year by 5,8 and 3,0, respectively. The variations under this head are due mainly to variations in the number of junior and senior chaplains on duty or on leave, and in the rate of Exchange Compensation Allowance. Under Church of Scotland the excess in Upper Burma was apparent only, provision for this chaplain having been erroneously made against Church of England, in the Punjab two chaplains were posted to the province after the Budget was framed. In England the Budget provided for the passage of eight chaplains but only three came out.

167. The Indian expenditure exceeded the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year by 2,1 and 45,2, respectively. There would have been no excess over the Budget, but for the special charges under Grants for Medical Purposes connected with the bubonic plague in Bombay and Bengal, which more than account for the Budget excess in those provinces, and were provided for by re-appropriation. Madras is the only other province in which an excess occurred, due to an excess of 2,1 under Medical Establishments for the pay of newly passed Hospital Assistants pending their posting to permanent appointments, and of 5,1 under Vaccination Charges (local), due to seasonal causes and to large fairs and festivals, there being some savings under other heads and under Lunatic Asylum.

168. The excess over the actuals of the previous year occurred chiefly under Government Hospitals and Dispensaries and Grants for Medical Purposes, due largely to the prevalence of epidemics.

169. Under Vaccine Establishments and Sanitary Commissioner the saving in the Central Provinces was due mainly (4,7) to the charges for a village sanitation scheme having been debited to a Local Fund under Government Hospitals and Dispensaries; in the North-Western Provinces the saving was partly due to the abolition of a Deputy Sanitary Commissionership, and in Bombay it was due partly to the recovery from the Port Trust towards the Health Officer's establishment, hitherto credited to XX—Medical having been adjusted by deduction from charges, and partly to the provision for expenditure under the Pilgrim Ships Act having been only partially utilized. The excess in India was due chiefly to the grant of privilege leave to the Secretary to the Sanitary Commissioner, and to the absence of provision for Dr. Haffkine's travelling and other charges. Under Medical Colleges and Schools the excess in Bengal was due chiefly to the salary of the Superintendent, Campbell Medical School and Hospital, provided for under other heads having been charged to this head. Under Government Hospitals and Dispensaries the decrease in Bengal was due to the outlay of only 3 against an estimate of 5,7 for instruments for the Medical College Hospital; in Madras the saving occurred in the Local Section (4,6) counterbalanced by some excesses in the Provincial Section. The excess in the Central Provinces was due to the transfer to this head of charges on account of vaccination referred to above, and to prevalence of epidemics and collection of Provincial Statistics; in Assam it was due to larger grants to dispensaries and the opening of new dispensaries. The excess over the actuals of the previous year, not explained above, occurred chiefly in the Central Provinces, Bengal and Bombay. In the first it was due to the construction of the Bowie Hospital at Hoshangabad; in Bengal it was due chiefly to increased charges for cost of medical stores; and in Bombay to heavy expenditure for medicines and instruments for mofussil Hospitals and Dispensaries. Under Lunatic Asylum the excess, both as compared with the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year, was due to increased expenditure on clothing and diet of patients owing, in the latter case, to the prevailing high prices of food-grains. Under Grants for Medical Purposes the excess in Lower Burma was due to the payment of an additional contribution of 1 to the Sandoway Municipal Hospital, and of a building grant of 5 for the Rangoon Leper Asylum; in Assam it was due to special expenditure in connection with the enquiry into the disease Kala Azar; and in the North-Western Provinces to charges connected with the bubonic plague.

170. The excess expenditure in England was due to payment of the pay, passages, etc., of Medical Officers and Lady Nurses in connection with the plague at Bombay.

171. The Indian expenditure showed an excess of 20,5 over the Budget Estimate and a saving of 15,1 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The excess was almost wholly in the India column, and occurred under Political Subsidies, on account of the payment of arrears of subsidy to the Amir of Afghanistan (49,1), counterbalanced by savings under all the other heads and in all the other provinces except Bombay and Madras, where there were petty excesses of 1 and 4. To cover the excess in the "India" column an extra grant should have been obtained in the course of the year. The difference between the actuals of the two years also occurred chiefly in India under Entertainment of Envoys and Chiefs, due to high charges in 1895-96 connected with the visit of Sardar Nasarulla Khan to England, and heavier expenditure on account of Afghan Border demarcation, the Perso-Baluch Frontier, and the Pamir Delimitation Commission.

172. Under Political Agents there were savings in all the provinces except Bengal where the amount shown represents the charges in connection with the Political Agency at Sikkim, provision having been made for them under Other charges against which there is an even larger saving. The difference between the actuals of the two years was chiefly due to fresh charges having been incurred during 1896-97 on account of Political Officers employed in Waziristan and their establishment. The increase as compared with 1895-96 in the Punjab under Charges on the North-West Frontier was principally due to the payment of allowances to the Khan of Dir and Swat and to Swat levies. Under Refugees and State Prisoners the decrease in India was the result of a change in the method of adjustment, under which allowances to Burmese Princes paid in Bengal are now finally adjusted in that province ; the small expenditure of 2 in Bengal represents these allowances ; the provision in the Budget was for the proposed location in Darjeeling of certain Chitral refugees but was not utilized, as the intention was abandoned; in Madras the excess over the Budget represents the cost incurred for the housing, maintenance, etc., of the Chitrali prisoners deported to that Presidency by order of the Government of India. Under Other charges, the saving in Upper Burma was due to the provision for the Kengtung-Kenchung Mission and Chinese Frontier Delimitation Commission, (5,0) not being utilised, partly counter-balanced by payment on account of arrear charges in connection with the Mekong Commission for which no provision existed; there were also savings in other detailed heads, and the expenditure under Miscellaneous was over-estimated. The expenditure in 1895-96 was heavier owing chiefly to high charges on account of the Mekong Commission, to adjustment of arrear survey charges in connection with the Kentung-Kenchung Mission, and to payment of a heavy amount of compensation sanctioned by the Government of India. The decrease in Bengal has been explained under Political Agents. The difference between the actuals of the two years in the Punjab was due to large payments made in 1895-96 on account of affairs at Chitral. In Bombay the increase, as compared with the Budget Estimate, was on account of charges in connection with the Mission to Abyssinia; the high figure, compared with the actuals of the previous year, was due to an increase in the stipendiary charges, travelling allowance to officers, and sumptuary allowance under "Expenditure against the Revenue of Berbera and Bulhar," and also to charges on account of demarcation of Boundaries between British territory and Native States in Sind.

173. In England there was an excess of 2,5 in the sterling expenditure. The expenses of the visit to England of His Highness the Shahzada Nasarullah Khan, son of the Amir of Afghanistan, account for an excess of 2,2; the rest was due to the payment of 18 months' subsidy to the Euphrates and Tigris Steam Navigation Company in aid of the steamship service on the Karun River, instead of for 12 months provided for in the Budget. The high figure in 1895-96 was also due to the first cause.

174. The accounts show a reduction in the expenditure in India of 13,4 as compared with the Budget, and an excess of 24,3 as compared with the actuals of the previous year. The principal saving occurred under Geological and other Surveys (7,9) and Other charges (7,9), and was due to petty differences under various heads, which are explained below.

175. Under Survey of India there was an excess of 2,5; due chiefly to an increase of 3,8 under Head-Quarters Offices, owing to the recoveries on account of mathematical instruments supplied to Head-Quarters Offices having been less than estimated. There was a saving under Survey Parties (22,0) but it was counterbalanced by correspondingly smaller recoveries from Local Governments, (21,9). As compared with the previous year the expenditure of Survey Parties showed a decrease of 17,8, but the deductions also considerably decreased and the net result was an increase of 25,3. Under Geological and other Surveys in India, in addition to the usual variations under salaries and allowances in consequence of the absence of officers on leave and the lower rate of Exchange Compensation Allowance, there were special savings in the publication of the "Palæontologia Indica" (1,0) and under special charges for the mineral survey of Chota Nagpur, (1,9); and the grants under the Archæological Department for Epigraphy and Doctor Burgess' Reports on Archæology were not fully utilized. In Lower Burma the operations of the Archæological Department were not fully carried out, and in Madras the provision for the revision of establishment was not utilized. The small excess over the Budget under Meteorological Department occurred chiefly in telegram charges. Under Other Scientific Departments the increase in India was due to an under-estimate of the grant for Central Museums; and the saving in Bombay, as compared with the Budget, was partly due to the provision of 1,1 for the Reay Industrial Museum not having been required. Under Veterinary and Stallion Charges the excess in India was due mainly to larger expenditure of 2,5 in purchase of stallions, and of 3,1 in the feed owing to high prices of grains. This excess was partly counterbalanced by small savings in several of the provinces. Under Other Agricultural charges there was a saving of 7,9 contributed to by all the provinces, none of the items are of any importance. The high figure of the preceding year in Bengal was due to larger expenditure on account of silk and other experiments, and for the manufacture of quinine. Under Labour and Emigration part (8) of the saving in Assam, and of the excess in Bengal was due to the smaller recovery from the Assam Administration towards the deficit in the transactions of the Inland Labour Transport Fund.

176. In England there was a decrease of 1,7 in the purchase of stallions, counterbalanced by an increase of 4 due to larger demands for stores.

177. The receipts under this head exceeded the Budget Estimate by 90,7 and fell off as compared with the actuals of the previous year by 29,3. The improvement as compared with the Budget occurred chiefly under Miscellaneous (70,2); 39,9 in India spread over all the minor heads and 30,3, in England, including exchange, due to a large increase in the fines and penalties incurred by contractors. Of the decrease as compared with the actuals of the previous year 16,8 occurred under Receipts in aid of Superannuation, Retired and Compassionate Allowances chiefly in England, and 34,1 under Exchange partly counterbalanced by an increase of 19,5 under Miscellaneous chiefly in England.

179. Under this head also the variations are small. It may suffice to explain that under Other Press Receipts the large decrease in the Punjab occurred in the earnings of Jail Presses for lithographic printing, and was due partly to a reduction in the rates for printing, and partly to a change in classification, whereby the price of country paper supplied by Jails and used for lithographic printing is credited to Jail Manufactures subordinate to XVI-B.—Law and Justice—Jails instead of to this head as formerly.

*The reduction made was 308,5, but as this was made in order expressly to throw out the provision of a credit of 173,0 against Indian Midland extension, I have thrown out that provision here and shown the deduction net as 135,5.

180. It is somewhat difficult to compare the Budget and the Accounts owing to the lump reduction on the total of the Budget Estimate; which appears to have been made partly in view of a suggested change in the system of bringing the Exchange to Account under this head, and partly in view of a probable rise in the rate of Exchange. Taking, however, the detailed figures as they stand, apart from the lump deduction, the principal changes are explained below. Under Guaranteed Companies, the reduction is mainly due to increased net repayments on Capital account in India of 46,1 on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in consequence of an overestimate of the expenditure for stores and works, and to reduced net payments of 51,3 on the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway in consequence of larger receipts for stores both on cash payment and by transfer to Revenue Account. The reduction would have been larger by about 20,0 but for the improvement in the average rate of exchange. The principal alteration under Subsidised Railways occurs on the Southern Mahratta (including Mysore) Railway, and is due both to smaller withdrawals in India and to the improvement in the rate of Exchange. The Burma Railways were handed over to a Company on 1st September 1896 and expenditure from that date on these Railways has been treated as capital expenditure on Subsidized Railways; the exchange on these transactions consequently enters this head, resulting in 1896-97 in a reduction of the total gain. Under the Remittance accounts the only important change is that under East Indian Railway Advances; the largely increased loss was due mainly to the debentures raised being increased from 400,0 to 802,5; these are, like the advances to that Railway, adjusted at the official rate of exchange, and as this was lower than the average rate, the remittance of the larger sterling amount to India resulted in a largely increased loss, which was still further enhanced by the rise in the average rate. The principal difference between the actuals of the two years occurs in respect of the East Indian Railway Advances, there having been a much smaller amount of debentures in 1895-96. There were, however, partially compensating improvements under the subsidized Railways, that in the case of the Assam-Bengal line being due to the whole of the Indian expenditure having been provided by Government instead of being met partly from Capital raised by debentures in England.

181. The Revenue in India exceeded the Budget Estimate by 39,9, but was 7,0 less than the actuals of the previous year. The excess over the Budget was spread over all the heads and is explained in detail below.

182. Under Premium on Bills the excess of 7,1 occurred mostly in the India column, and was due to specially high sales at Calcutta of wire transfers on Rangoon, in consequence of the favourable paddy market in the interior of Lower Burma and the demand for Burma rice in India owing to famine. Under Unclaimed Deposits the largest excess occurred in the North-Western Provinces. In Assam the refund of lapsed deposits exceeded the amount which lapsed to Government, and the excess (1,0) was debited to 32.—Miscellaneous. Under Rents (5,1) the expansion of revenue was due to the construction of new bazars in Burma, under Miscellaneous Fees, etc. (4,9), the receipts from partition fees in Bengal exceeded the estimate by 3,3; although they were less than in last year. Under Extraordinary Items the credit in Upper Burma represents the amount recovered from the Home Government on account of a moiety of the charges incurred in connection with the Mekong Commission. The receipt in the North-Western Provinces arose out of an adjustment of the commutation value of lapsed Wasika Pensions under the first Oudh Loan. In Bombay the actuals consisted of the repayments by the Bombay Port Trust of those portions of its debt to Government which do not bear interest. The increase in the Punjab occurred in land revenue receipts in connection with the administration of the Kurram Valley. Under Other Items the increase in Bengal of 4 6 and 5,9 over the Budget Estimate and the actuals of the previous year, respectively, was mainly in the receipts from fees and fines of Revenue Courts, from sale of old stores and materials, and from miscellaneous provincial and local receipts. India had an unexpected receipt of 1,0 in Bushire on account of ransom on boats captured at Bahrein. In Bombay large supplies of stores were received from England, chiefly on account of the Tapti Valley Railway, causing an improvement in the receipts under the head Percentages chargeable on European Stores for Provincial and Local Funds (1,2); and the revenues of Berbera and Bulhar and Zaila (3,2) improved.

183. In England there was a large increase in fines and penalties incurred by contractors in providing stores.

184. The total expenditure in England and India was less than the Budget and the actuals of the previous year by 173,6 and 76,6, respectively. Apart from exchange, to which the saving is mostly due, the only important variations occurred under Superannuations where the Indian expenditure showed an excess of 36,8 over that of the previous year, and the sterling charges exceeded the Budget Estimate by 28,0 and the previous year's actuals by 56,8.

185 As in previous years, the payments on account of Territorial and Political Pensions showed a decrease compared with the Budget Estimate owing to lapses. The only excesses occurred in Madras (1,7) and Burma (1). In Madras the estimate for Carnatic pensions of less than R5,000 per annum was exceeded by 3,1, but there were savings of 6 under Commutations of Pensions and of 9 under Tanjore Pensions. This extra charge was met by a re-appropriation of 2,5 from 5.—Salt, sanctioned by the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, in its letter No. 1186A., dated 13th March 1897. The petty difference in Burma is a merely fractional excess, but requires sanction. In Bombay the estimate under the first head contained a provision of 5,6 on account of Wasika pensions under the 3rd Oudh Loan which are now (and were also in the accounts of 1895-96) adjusted under 14.—Interest on Other Obligations (see para. 110). In Bengal the savings of 9,8 are accounted for by lapses of Nizamat Pensions. In India the pensions paid to the Oudh and Mysore families were less than the Estimate by 1,5 and 9, respectively. The increase under Charitable Allowances in Bombay was due to special grants sanctioned for the funeral expenses of Mirs in Sind and the widow of the late Raja of Mandvi.

186. In England the slight excess over the Budget was due to the payment of arrear pensions.

187. The charges incurred in this country depend on the number and grade of officers lent to foreign service who happen to be on leave. The figures do not call for any remarks save that the trifling excesses in the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab require formal sanction. In England also the saving was unimportant.

188. The saving under this head occurred entirely in consequence of the fall in exchange.

189. The expenditure in India exceeded the Budget grant by 8,0, and there were excesses everywhere except in Lower Burma, Assam, North-Western Provinces and Madras, and in the last two there were excesses in the Imperial and Provincial charges respectively. The amounts requiring sanction in each case are shown in the memo. at foot of the tabular statement above, and the reasons for the excesses are explained below. They are, however, due for the most part to sufficient allowance not having been made in the Estimate for the normal growth of expenditure under the first minor head. The following statement shows this growth during the last six years :—

1892-93	830,4
1893-94	863,5
1894-95	899,1
1895-96	925,1
1896-97	963,2

190. Under Compassionate Allowances in Madras the actuals of 1895-96 included an arrear payment. Under Gratuities the increase in Bombay was due to a special payment of 1,0 at the instance of the Government of the Punjab, in which province also a trifling excess occurred under the same head. Under Military Orphan Funds there were special payments in Bombay on account of marriage portions and arrears. Under Pensions of the Military Funds the Estimate in the North-Western Provinces was too low, while that in the Punjab was too high. The total saving under Pensions of the Civil Funds was 1,0, of which India contributed 6 and Bombay 4. The saving in the latter province was due to the transfer of the pensions to England. The decrease in the North-Western Provinces under Other Charges was due to the death of a Civil Service Annuitant.

191. In England the increase occurred mainly in the pensions of the officers of the Uncovenanted Service and in Civil Service Annuities.

192. The total saving under this head amounted to 36,0, of which 24,8 occurred in India, and was spread over all the minor heads. In Madras and Bombay there were excesses in the Provincial Division of 9,5 and 2,2, respectively, due entirely (11,6 and 3,3) to the excess under "Stationery supplied from Central Stores." This is explained to be due to the increased demands of Departments and the supply of extra articles on account of the famine. But the Budget grant for 1896-97 seems really to have been an under-estimate in both cases, as the actuals for 1895-96 and the Revised and Budget Estimates for 1897-98 and 1898-99 correspond closely with the figure for 1896-97. Of the total excess in Madras 5,9 was sanctioned by re-appropriation from 45.—Civil Works by the Local Government, and in Bombay 6 by Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department letter No. 4495, dated 21st October 1896, and the balance by the Local Government. The excess of 1,4 in the North-Western Provinces, explained below under Government Presses, is covered by a re-appropriation sanctioned by the Local Government.

193. Under Purchase of Stationery, the large saving in Bombay was mainly under Purchase of Stationery for Central Stores, the result of enforced economy on account of the financial pressure; the charges in last year were lower on account of the inability of the mills to meet indents. The Bengal Budget proved a little too cautious. Under Government Presses, in India more work was done by the Central Press for the Postal and Telegraph Departments than was anticipated, resulting in larger deductions from the gross charges; the expenditure on purchase of type and other printing materials for the Branch Press at Simla was also less. In Lower Burma the provision for revision of the establishment of the Superintendent of Government Printing, Rangoon, was not utilized, and there were savings under Overtime Establishment and Supplies and Services, partly counterbalanced by a small increase under Contingencies. In the Punjab there was a saving of 4,8 under Lithographic Printing, owing chiefly to a reduction in the rates for printing. In the North-Western Provinces the value of the Thomason Civil Engineering College Press Stock held in suspense on the Public Works Department books, amounting to 3,1, was transferred to the Civil Department with the transfer of the account of the College from 1st April 1896; the increase thus caused was to a certain extent counterbalanced by savings under Raw Materials and Dead Stock. Under Stationery supplied from Central Stores, the principal variations, besides those in Madras and Bombay mentioned above, were those in Bengal and Lower Burma, where the Budget was placed too high. In the North-Western Provinces the demand in 1895-96 was unusually high. The Stationery supplied to the Postal and Telegraph Departments showed an increase. Under Other Charges important variations occurred only in Madras and the Punjab. In the first there was a saving, as less printing work was done, especially for the Settlement Department, in the Punjab the Estimate made by the District Boards proved to be inadequate. In the North-Western Provinces the actuals in 1895-96 included high charges under "Printing at Private Presses".

194. In England the demand for stores was less than anticipated, while the saving in Other Charges occurred in printing and book-binding.
